FRANCE WILL REFUSE ANY CONCESSIONS, ASSERTS POINCARE

Speech at Senlis Is Interpreted by Paris and London as Blow to Baldwin Plan.

WANTS NO EXPERT BOARD

DENIES GERMANY IS RUINED

And Insists That the Guarantees Promised to France Shall Be Carried Out.

PARIS, July 15.—Premier Poincaré in his speech at Senlis today answered Prime Minister Baldwin's reparations declaration Thursday by affirming France's intention to carry out her policy toward Germany.

In that he did not refer to Mr. Baldwin by name nor mention the project of a reply to Germany, M. Poincaré evidently sought not to be discourteous to the British proposal, which is expected to arrive in Paris on Thursday. But in declaring that the Entente should leave each nation's conscience free, and in declaring against an international commission "to coalesce against us those whose interests are opposed to ours," M. Poincaré seems to indicate that if the British draft note to Germany does not begin by stating that passive resistance in the Ruhr must end before the negotiations, and if it proposes an international commission, Paris will not accept it.

In reply to Mr. Baldwin's accusation that occupation of the Ruhr was resulting in economic damage to other nations by causing Germany's ruin, M. Poincaré said that if England had joined with France in the Ruhr occupation Germany would not have resisted, and therefore would not have brought upon herself the damage which has ensued from carrying on resistance. In other words, that if Germany is ruining herself in resistance her plight is more the fault of England than France.

However, the French Premier is not at all sure that Germany is ruined, pointing to her recovery on the sea, her enlargement of port facilities, her many miles of new canals and railroads built, as he saw it, instead of rebuilding devastated France.

M. Poincaré repainted the picture of German terrorism in Senlis and the neighborhood in great detail. France, he said, would like to forget it all, but Germany in refusing to carry out the Treaty of Versailles would not permit France to forget and forgive. No sooner was the treaty signed than Germany sought to escape her obligations and to fasten on France the stigma of militarism and imperialism.

"Our wishes today are the same as those of yesterday," he continued. "We do not seek an inch of foreign soil. We only seek that the treaty signed by twenty-eight nations should not become after four years a sort of antediluvian fossil to be exhibited in an archaeological museum to astonished visitors."

In response to this attitude, M. Poincaré said, France was asked to make concessions and had done so for three years. France would make no more concessions. All the allied concessions in three years had been made at her expense, and if any more concessions were to be made some one else could make them.

France, he said, had received the promise of a compact of guarantee as a reward for concessions. She had made concessions and had been cheated of the guarantee. The treaty had promised to France reparations which had been fixed by the Reparation Commission, on which France had one vote in five. "And ever since there has been an effort to replace the Reparation Commission by a commission of international experts to try and coalesce [illegible]

"Equal firmness on the part of all the Allies would have overcome this persistent bad faith. But Germany has speculated upon divergence of views among us which she has striven to increase. She thought she was encouraged to resist us and so we had to take action.

"It was not our fault that we had to act alone with Belgium. If all had acted together the chances are Germany would have yielded immediately. In place of paying what she owed, Germany has devoted herself to resistance which our friends encouraged. Are we, then, responsible for the difficulties which result?

"If France had done nothing," said M. Poincaré, "Germany would still have gone on toward the ruin. She planned to cheat France, and France would have

One Steamer Sinks Another; Is Then Itself Hit and Sunk

LONDON, July 15 (Associated Press).—Three steamers were in collision in the fog in the North Sea today. Two of them were sunk, but their crews were rescued, and the third proceeded on her voyage in a damaged condition.

Owing to the heavy fog the Swedish steamer Eldorado hove to, and the Spanish steamer Begona No. 5 crashed into her. While the two vessels were locked the Eldorado's crew, numbering eighteen, climbed aboard the Begona, and soon after the Eldorado went to the bottom.

Later the British steamer Sheridan coming through the fog hit the Begona amidship, and as the latter began to fill her boats were lowered and her own crew and that of the Eldorado, totaling forty-three men, reached the Sheridan. The captain of the Britisher sent a radio message to Yarmouth, from which port tugs were dispatched and took off the survivors.

MINNESOTA DECIDES SENATORSHIP TODAY

JOHNSON MEN CONFIDENT

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 15.—With the eyes of the whole nation focused on her, Minnesota will decide tomorrow whether a conservative low tariff Republican or a radical Farmer-Laborite shall be sent to Washington as the successor of the late Senator Knute Nelson.

The issue is conservatism versus radicalism. Government ownership of the means of transportation, the integrity of the Supreme Court of the United States, the enactment of an agricultural products price-fixing law, the passage of an excess profits tax law to pay a bonus to the veterans of the World War, drastic regulation of big business, and the reorganization of the Federal Reserve Board in the interest, as the radicals put it, of the people—these are some of the things the voters of Minnesota will approve or repudiate tomorrow.

The polls will open at 8 o'clock in the morning and close at 9 o'clock at night.

The big problem now is to get the voters to the polls, and unless the conservative men and women go to the polls it will mean, the best informed political men in the State say, the defeat of Governor Preus and the election of Magnus Johnson. No one, not even the Democrats, expects the Democratic Party to poll more than 50,000 votes in the State.

"My final forecast," said Frederick A. Pike, Chairman of the Farmer-Labor State Central Committee, "is that Magnus Johnson will be elected by a majority of at least 40,000 votes. Because of the activities of O'Connor, the former Democratic boss of St. Paul, we will probably lose some votes in St. Paul, but that loss will be more than offset by gains in Minneapolis.

"Johnson will come out of the northern counties with a great majority, and he will hold the Preus vote down in the southern counties. My estimates of the margin by which Magnus Johnson will defeat Governor Preus are as conservative as I can possibly make them. I would not be surprised if it's a landslide for Johnson."

Republicans Make No Claims.

The policy of the Republican State Committee in refraining from making any definite claims is being maintained to the end. Chairman Charles R. Adams said he had nothing to add to his statement of last night, which was that "if the voters do their duty," Governor Preus will be elected.

"The seriousness of the situation facing the people of Minnesota," said Mr. Adams, "cannot be overdrawn. There is only one way to save the State from radicalism, and that is for all citizens who stand for sane conservative principles in government to go to the polls and vote. If they do, that will mean the election of Governor Preus."

For home consumption John R. Donohue, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, issued a statement claiming the State for James A. Carley, the Democratic candidate. To the correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES he said his reports indicated a Johnson plurality of from 35,000 to 50,000.

The Preus organization has an army of workers busy in Hennepin County, of which this city is the seat. They are working on the theory that only a big old-time Republican majority for

INWOOD, L. I., July 15.—Robert Tyre Jones Jr. of Atlanta, Ga., 21 years old on March 17 last, is tonight America's national open golf champion for 1923.

In the playoff for the title, necessitated by the fact that Jones was tied yesterday by Robert A. Cruickshank, former Scottish amateur star who came to America and turned pro three years ago, with a score of 296 at the conclusion of the regulation 72-hole test at the Inwood Country Club, Jones was the winner today by two strokes, and it was not until the last hole was played that the question of who was to wear this year's crown was decided in favor of the youthful amateur.

When the Southern youngster, competing in his fourth national open tournament, tapped his putt into the cup for a par 4 on the last hole, it made his total for today's eighteen holes 76, but the issue was decided two strokes previous to that. It was decided when Jones played his second shot coming to the home hole—a truly miraculous shot out of the rough that sped almost two hundred yards and ended less than two yards away from the flapping flag on the eighteenth green. It was a shot that, in addition to proving Jones's capabilities as one of the finest shot-makers in the world and one of the most courageous fighters in the world, will take its place among the epochal strokes that are a part of golf's lengthy history.

Made in the stress of battle, it sealed the fate of the little Scottish gamecock who was Jones's rival for the open crown today, just as it opened up the portals of fame to the man who brought it off. No sooner did the click of iron against gutta-percha and rubber reach the ears of the little professional than he knew that his dreams of fame and fortune were sealed, for this year at least. He didn't even have to glance at the ball to realize that the dreams that were his when he went to sleep last night, after making his great uphill fight to tie Jones, had gone for nought—at least so far as the present year is concerned.

Victory Fulfils Predictions.

By winning, Jones had finally fulfilled the predictions made in his behalf by ardent admirers ever since he flashed into prominence in 1916, when, a chubby little lad of 14, he led the field in the first day's qualifying round of the national amateur, and then after putting out Eben Byers and Frank Dyer, was putted into oblivion by Robert A. Gardner. [illegible] winning, he gained a coveted title that only three amateurs ahead of him have succeeded in wresting away from the professionals—[illegible] in 1913, Travers in 1915 and Evans in 1916.

[illegible] Jones made a few brief remarks that spoke volumes. "I don't care what happens now," he said. For here he was inside the portals at last, after four years of disappointment. Hailed as a probable winner for that four-year period, Bobby had always just fallen short. Disappointment had followed disappointment until even his most enthusiastic admirers had lost faith in his ability to shake off the jinx that seemed to be pursuing him. Three years ago he had finished eighth in the open, two years ago at Columbia he had finished fifth, last year at Skokie he had the championship almost within the palm of his hand, only to lose his chance by playing the next to last hole badly. Then yesterday, instead of sewing up the title as he should have done, he spent a costly 6 at the home hole and left the door open to Cruickshank to tie him. Just as he has met with disap-

Riots Halt Rise in Price of Beer at Munich; 200,000 Visitors Threaten to Leave City

MUNICH, July 15.—The proposed triple increase in the price of beer brought about a storm among the thirsty Turners, who threatened damage to the beer saloons, and, in consequence, the dealers have delayed the advance until tomorrow at the earliest.

Placards announcing the higher price of beer angered the hot and thirsty thousands who are attending the thirteenth annual German gymnastic competitions here.

The crowds tore down the price lists and partly wrecked seven rathskellers and beer houses before the dealers agreed to abandon the increase.

Visitors to the number of nearly 200,000, it is declared, are likely to leave Munich if the increase becomes effective Tuesday. The athletic meeting is expected to continue through to July 21, and it seems doubtful that the saloons will dare attempt to collect higher prices while the city is crowded with strangers. Three hundred Chicago gymnasts are among the visitors.

An effort is being made to advance the price of a liter of Munchener and other famous brands to 5,000 marks, which is less than three cents in local exchange, but a prohibitive price to persons on mark wages. The brewers complain that the scarcity of hops has increased the cost of manufacture and the fall in the mark has made an increase in the sale price necessary.

Girl Baby Abandoned in Hotel Wins Friends; Employes Name Her Mary Marlborough

A girl baby, a few weeks old, that was abandoned in a room of the Hotel Marlborough, Broadway and Thirty-sixth Street, may never again see or hear of her parents, but she has acquired a host of friends on Broadway and among the employes of the hotel where she received more attention than the best paying guest. The only clue to the child's identity is a line in the hotel register, which reads: "Mr. and Mrs. H. Williams, Baltimore." The police are searching the hospitals to learn if the child had received medical treatment, as the supposed mother had reported to the hotel clerk, Harry Levenson.

"The man and woman with the baby came here on Friday afternoon, in a private car, which the man drove away after he had registered," said Levenson. "Williams paid for the room in advance, displaying a large roll of money. I made some remark about the baby, and the woman replied that the child looked well, but they had brought her to New York for examination at a hospital."

The clerk recalled that the guests had a marked Southern accent. They were well dressed and their faces were tanned as if they had been traveling in an auto. Their baggage consisted of one bag, which they left behind. It contained clothing for the baby, on which there was no identifying marks.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams were seen about the hotel up to noon on Saturday. In the afternoon Mary Corrigan, a maid, heard an infant's cries in room 349, on the third floor. There was no response to her tap on the door. She entered and found the baby on the bed. The maid held the baby for an hour, expecting its parents to return. Then other girls in the hotel took turns in caring for the castaway. On Saturday night Miss Mary Hicks, chief telephone operator, and her assistants took charge of the baby. Under the direction of Dr. C. Brandenberg, house physician, they prepared food for the baby, bathed and dressed her and otherwise were kept busy telling about the infant's plight to the guests.

Late yesterday Manager Franklin notified the police of the West Thirtieth Street Station. They ordered the baby sent to Bellevue and Miss Hicks and several maids and operators took her there. They named their charge "Mary Marlborough."

GOMPERS DEMANDS TRUTH ON SOVIET

AS THEY GO ON INQUIRY

Sees Red Interference Here and Demands Guarantees Against This.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—In a letter written to Senators King and Ladd, who recently started for Russia on a tour of inspection, Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, reveals the activities of Soviet Russia in this country and tells why American labor does not sanction what is being done in Russia, or approve of the moves for recognition of the Soviet Government.

Mr. Gompers declared that agencies of the Soviet régime are trying to bring labor under the control of revolutionary influences, citing the recent convention of the Farmer-Labor Party in Chicago, which was captured by Communists.

The real purpose of the letter was to ask questions of the visiting Senators and request them for definite answers from independent sources for use of the American public. The letter to the Senators is as follows:

"The current newspapers record that you are on the eve of departure for Soviet Russia to confer with its Communist leaders with a view to bringing about the recognition of that régime by our Government. Whether your purpose is correctly stated by the press or not, you can be of inestimable service to the people of the United States generally, as well as to the American labor movement, if you can succeed in making clear to the Soviet authorities that certain policies which they have adopted serve as an insuperable barrier to the cause of recognition.

"Let me say first that the labor movement in this country is not concerned with political or economic experiments carried on in other countries, beyond constantly observing their progress and results. Nor is it of consequence to us what manner of Government the people of other countries choose for themselves, provided the régimes which they set up confine their activities within their own boundaries and do not seek to utilize this country as an additional laboratory for extra-mural experimentation.

Unfriendly to Soviet's Aims.

"From the beginning American labor has viewed with sympathy and concern the efforts of Russian workers and peasants to establish their freedom. But, despite the friendly attitude which it has maintained toward the Russian people, the agents of the Soviet régime, acting under the direction of the authorities in Moscow, have rendered it impossible for the American Federation of Labor to maintain a friendly policy toward the Russian Soviet Government.

"Let me make it clear to you that the workers of America have chosen voluntarily their own form of labor organization. They have organized themselves in the powerful American Federation of Labor, which from its inception was formed and has been managed on a democratic principle, where- [illegible]

Old Auto Thief Steers Across Three States—All Track of Six Fugitives Now Lost.

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—While the police continued their search throughout this and neighboring States for the six convicts who made a daring escape yesterday from the Eastern State Penitentiary, Thomas J. McAllister Jr., a tester for a local automobile sales concern, returned to this city and told a thrilling story of how he had been kidnapped by the convicts, his big maroon-colored sedan stolen and of the wild ride with the desperadoes to Elkton, Md.

About a mile from Elkton the convicts left him trussed and gagged in the woods and disappeared on foot. Early today McAllister managed to free himself, drove into Elkton, reported his experiences to the police and then telephoned his wife, who had been on the verge of collapse, that he was safe. He was unable to furnish any clue to the present whereabouts of the convicts.

Colonel Groome late tonight offered a reward of $250 each for the capture of the six convicts, dead or alive.

Virtually every detective in the local bureau is searching for the escaped convicts. Late today the detectives were summoned to Pennsburg, Pa., in the Perkiomen Valley, to identify a suspect believed to be James Williams, one of the sextet, who was serving from nine to eleven years for larceny. The man was found not to be Williams.

With his wife's arms about his shoulders and all but exhausted from twenty-eight hours of nervous tension without sleep, McAllister recited his harrowing tale in the Central Police Station.

One of the most interesting features of the story was his description of how the convicts had overpowered a farmer at Ogden, Md., with sawed-off shotguns and pistols and, after binding and gagging his wife and four children, had ransacked the house. They robbed the farmer of $200 and a quantity of clothing, and then stocked the motor car with food from his pantry.

"As I drove out Poplar Street Saturday morning," said McAllister, "a truck loaded with six men going very fast whizzed alongside and came to a sudden stop directly in front of my car. I was forced to throw on the brakes to prevent crashing into the rear of the truck. Before I had taken my hand off the emergency brake one of the men in the truck jumped out and ran back to my car. All the men wore blue pants and jumpers like railroad engineers.

Harding Goes Further North Than Any Other President

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, July 15 (Associated Press).—President Harding has reached a point further north than any other American President and with his arrival in Fairbanks tonight he was within 150 miles of the Arctic Circle.

His arrival here marked the end of a two and one-half days ride over the Government railroad from Seward. Tomorrow he begins the trip south over the Richardson trail.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

McKINLEY PARK, Alaska, July 15.—After spending the night at Broad Pass, near the top of the Alaskan range, where his special train was sidetracked on its arrival just before midnight, President Harding left this morning for his third and last day's journey into the interior of Alaska over the Government railroad. He is due to reach Fairbanks, the railroad's northern terminal, about 9 o'clock this evening.

The President's Sunday program includes crossing the railway pass at Summit, where a splendid view was afforded of Mount McKinley, sixty miles distant, skirting McKinley Park, passage through a canyon with magnificent scenery and stopping at Tanana Bridge, 415 miles from Seward and fifty-six from Fairbanks, to drive a golden spike, which marked the official completion of the Government railroad.

President Sees Reindeer Herd.

President Harding's first experience this beautiful bright Sunday was one of the most interesting of his tour into the interior of Alaska. It came at Cantwell, a little railroad station with a group of picturesque log houses. For the President's benefit the herd of more than 1,000 reindeer, most of them owned by the Government, were driven through the settlement by Esquimaux herders.

Part of the herd was furnished by Miss Ruth Reat, a young woman who has gone into the reindeer breeding business on a large scale. Last year, finding that the herd was being depleted through desertions to a herd of wild caribou, Miss Reat drove her reindeer from Akiak, at the mouth of the Kuskokwim River, a thousand miles in the interior, to the vicinity of Cantwell, where they are now pastured.

Today as she chatted with the President and Mrs. Harding she presented an attractive figure in khaki knickerbockers and flannel shirtwaist. The visitors from Washington learned she was graduated from the University of Illinois, likes the great open spaces of Alaska and finds profit in her reindeer venture.

There were other features seen at Cantwell which made it interesting to the President and his companions. A team of big huskies, the motive power for the snow-covered trails of this vast wilderness country, raced past the President dragging a wagon. An Esquimaux woman with two children chatted in halting English with Mrs. Harding. Secretary Work examined Esquimaux boys who were herders of the Government reindeer.

No less picturesque were some members of the Presidential contingent. They had been told that rough costumes were required for the interior journey and a number of them bought outfits which would qualify them as characters in a wild Western moving picture production. Blue flannel shirts, khaki trousers and leather or canvas

FULLER AND M'GEE MAY STAY IN JAIL

Lawyers Doubt if All Papers Have Been Returned and Contempt Purged.

TO ASK DEFINITE SENTENCE

Trial on Clarkson Indictment Pending Term in Sing Sing Another Problem.

In case Federal Judge Goddard frees E. M. Fuller and W. Frank McGee from the continuing contempt of court order on which they are now confined in Ludlow Street Jail, it was learned yesterday, attorneys for the trustee and creditors of E. M. Fuller & Co. may apply for a new order sending the brokers back to jail on the same charge of contempt, but for a definite instead of an indefinite length of time. The lawyers in the case have been conferring on such a move since the announcement on Saturday that the missing papers, failure to produce which caused Judge Goddard to commit the brokers to jail until they should be produced, had been returned, and that Griffiths & Content, the brokers' new counsel, would move on Wednesday for dismissal of the contempt of court charge.

Lawyers on both sides agreed that Judge Goddard had the power to recommit the brokers for a definite length of time even though the papers have been returned, as a punishment for their failure to produce the papers when ordered by Federal Judge Mack. Counsel for the brokers, however, intimated yesterday that they would appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals if Judge Goddard took this course. The basis of the appeal, it was indicated, would be that Fuller and McGee did not "wilfully" fail to comply with Judge Mack's order, because they did not have the power to return the papers when they were ordered to do so.

To Oppose Brokers' Release.

Carl J. Austrian, of counsel for the trustee, refused to say yesterday what he intended to do, except that he would oppose the motion to dismiss the present contempt of court charge and release the brokers from Ludlow Street Jail. He said his opposition would be made on the grounds that the brokers have not purged themselves from the contempt of court charge. It was not Fuller and McGee who returned the missing papers, and it was not to the trustee in bankruptcy, as ordered, that the papers were returned, the lawyer says, so the order was not complied with.

Judge Goddard, as well as the lawyers for the trustee and the creditors of Fuller & Co., are said to doubt seriously that the package returned to Judge Goddard's chambers contained all of the missing documents. The mysterious package has not been examined by Mr. Austrian or Francis L. Kohlman, his partner, who have the records of what documents were missing, so that it is not known yet whether the papers returned are complete. A check up on the list of documents will probably be included in the court proceedings when [illegible]

If Judge Goddard imposes a definite sentence, the lawyers said, it would take precedence over the term of imprisonment in Sing Sing to which the brokers were sentenced recently in the State courts on the bucketing charge. They would have to serve out the Federal term before going to Sing Sing.

Egypt Halts 'Holy Carpet' Pilgrimage to Mecca, Incensed by Hussein's Action

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAIRO, July 15.—The Egyptian Government today took a decision which will cause a sensation throughout the Moslem world. It recalled from Jeddah on the Red Sea the historic caravan with its thousands of pilgrims escorting to Mecca the famous "Holy Carpet," which is sent to Mecca every year by the Egyptian Government.

It has been the custom to send with this caravan an Egyptian medical mission to safeguard the health of the pilgrims—a precaution rendered necessary by the total lack of sanitary protection in the Hedjaz.

This year King Hussein declined to allow the medical escort to enter his territory, declaring that the sending of it constituted an infringement of the independence of the Hedjaz, although he offered no protest against the escort of Egyptian soldiers which always protects the caravan.

The Egyptian Government took a firm stand, consulting the greatest religious dignitaries, the Grand Mufti and the rector of El Azhar, the Moslem University in Cairo, whose influence extends throughout the Mohammedan world. These authorities declared that Hussein's attitude was contrary to the precepts of God and the Prophet and supported the Government's action.

The recall of the caravan, it is estimated, means a loss to the Hedjaz of upward of $200,000, consisting of the annual subsidy paid to the Hedjaz by Egypt plus the money spent in the Hedjaz by the pilgrims.

The Egyptian press attributes Hussein's action to spite, because he was bitterly attacked in the Egyptian press after the publication of the terms of the Anglo-Arab Treaty, as the tool of Great Britain. If this assumption is justified, Hussein has not improved his position, since the action of the Egyptian Government is likely to create feeling against him throughout Islam.

HYLAN BACK TO LEAD BUS FIGHT; M'ANENY OFFERS A SOLUTION

WILL OBEY COURT ORDER

REVOCABLE AT ANY TIME

Whalen Does Not Expect to Be Served With Notice in Time to Stop Operation Today.

Mayor John F. Hylan returned last night from a week's vacation at Saratoga Springs because of the transportation situation resulting from the decision of the Court of Appeals in the bus injunction case, which bars city supervision of bus lines. Under the decision the buses must cease operation today.

The Mayor was grim and apparently full of fight because of the blow to his bus lines, and said it was a shame that the people of the city could not ride in automobile buses for a five-cent fare. He made it plain that he would do everything in his power to bring about a special session of the Legislature so that the city could operate its own buses legally.

Commissioner Grover C. Whalen, who returned with the Mayor, said that he had not been served with the order of the Court as yet, and that he did not think he would be served in time to end the operation of the buses today. There will be no attempt, however, to evade the order, he said, although it would leave City Island without any transportation whatever. He said 250,000 persons used the buses daily.

The Mayor said that the first thing he would do would be to call a meeting of the Board of Estimate and attempt to have them request Governor Smith to call a special session of the Legislature so that a bus bill could be passed giving the city authority to operate its own buses. He decried the idea that franchises could be granted for short periods, franchises which would be revocable at any time, and which would serve the present emergency, as suggested by Chairman McAneny of the Transit Commission.

Calls Franchises Illegal.

Franchises can only be issued to corporations, he said, and he had been advised by the Corporation Counsel that such franchises as Mr. McAneny mentioned were illegal. Even the Fifth Avenue bus line franchise has been declared illegal by the Corporation Counsel, said Mr. Whalen.

Both the Mayor and Mr. Whalen said that there would be nothing to do but stop the buses when the order is served, unless the Corporation Counsel can find some way out of the difficulty.

"The issue has been put squarely up to them now," said the Mayor, referring to the Legislature. "If the New York Republican Assemblymen, with either Speaker Machold or Senator Adler, the majority leader, will support such a bill, it will go through. I will appeal to them to help the people of the City of New York."

Chairman George McAneny of the Transit Commission took issue with the Mayor on this point, saying that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment already had the power to grant franchises revocable at any time, franchises which could be issued during an emergency and revoked when some other way had been found to operate them.

50,000 Use Buses.

Mr. McAneny estimated last night that 100,000 fares a day were collected by these buses, which would mean that about 50,000 persons used them to ride to and from work. Many of the buses are owned by private individuals, who have paid from $6,000 to $9,000 for them, and their inability to maintain routes will mean a large financial loss to them.

He further stated that a number of applications for franchises have been pending before the Board of Estimate for some time, but that action on them has always been delayed.

"This action was anticipated by the Transit Commission some time ago," said Mr. McAneny, "and it was pointed out that something would have to be done unless the people were greatly inconvenienced. The commission will be glad to do anything in its power to [illegible] venience and necessity, as in any emergency case, and the line might be kept running."

Mayor Hylan, who has consistently opposed granting any franchises, said in a statement yesterday:

Hylan's Statement.

"The public should thoroughly understand the effect of the Court of Appeals decision in the Schafer bus case. Schafer is connected directly or indirectly with one of the traction companies. If buses are allowed to be operated municipally it will eventually drive surface and elevated junk from the streets of the city.

"The effect of the decisions means this: Either the people of the city must be empowered to operate buses by a special session of the Legislature or the Board of Estimate and Apportionment will be forced to grant these valuable bus franchises to the traction corporations or their friends. This is just what the traction gang desires, and is the real reason they brought the injunction suit.

"If the Board of Estimate and Apportionment is compelled to grant franchises because of the failure of the Legislature to act, then these bus franchises will be capitalized and the stocks will be watered, juggled and peddled in the same manner as the traction crowd did with the trolley stocks.

"The history of the scandal incident to the manipulation of the traction crowd will be repeated with the bus franchises, and the honest investing public will again be fleeced. The question for the people to settle is whether they desire to retain the valuable bus franchise privileges and municipally own, operate and control their own bus lines, or do they desire the valuable bus privileges given away to private corporations?

"I shall return to New York immediately and will do all I can to bring about a special session of the Legislature to save the people, if possible, from further traction jobbers."

BROWNE DEFENDS LEASE.

Declares No Clause Violates or Attempts to Waive Rent Laws.

Stewart Browne, President of the United Real Estate Owners, sent the following statement to the newspapers:

"We are the only realty organization that stood for rent laws from 1919 to date (except the 1923 Roseman bill) for new building tax exemption and for the tenement house department, and the only organization which refused to contribute one cent to defeat the rent laws in court or otherwise.

"Mr. Untermyer sent to the 1922 Legislature the strongest possible endorsement of our activities.

"Not a single clause of our lease in the slightest degree violates or attempts to waive the rent laws, statutory laws or the penal law. One-half of the clauses in the lease have already stood the test of the courts and we believe the remainder will do likewise. We are ready to go to the Court of Appeals on every one of them. We will be delighted to have Mr. Untermyer in opposition. If the lease bears the interpretation Mr. Untermyer puts upon it and it is illegal why all this hullabaloo? The reason for Mr. Untermyer's criticism is that he follows his usual custom and sees an apparent opportunity to help establish himself in the respect of the people at some one else's expense.

"The lease is to protect decent landlords from rent-gouging tenants and from the unlawful practices of the courts. It must stand the test of the courts and of public opinion, and we say it will do both.

"As for a certain taxpayers' organization, they have not been affiliated with the United for a year. They are composed of the owners of the cheapest tenement houses in the city; they noisily and bitterly opposed every rent law bill, the building tax exempt bill from 1920 to date, including the bill requiring landlords to make repairs, and they use an agreement under which the tenants agree to waive the rent laws. Affiliation was discontinued because they objected to my pro-rent law and pro-tenant views and claimed I had no sympathy with the owners of cheap tenements.

"It is rather amusing that the man who has been violently abused for four years by landlords for being pro-tenant and should now be abused by rent-gouging landlords and others as being pro-landlord and the author of a lease which is illegal and unfair to tenants.

"Any one can get a copy of the lease in question and my brief in explanation of every clause of it."

PANHANDLER IS ARTISTIC.

The impersonator of George McManus, the cartoonist, was working Forty-second Street, between Broadway and Sixth Avenue, last night.

"Say, Buddie, can you give me a cigarette?" was the indirect approach. "They say we newspapermen are a bunch of bums," he continued, "and I guess we are. I'm George McManus, the cartoonist, you know. Got a pencil, I'll draw you a picture."

After drawing a passable likeness of Jiggs, Mr. McManus's cartoon character, he made further revelations. "My wife and two children are staying down at Long Branch, N. J., and I have been up to New Rochelle on a party with Bud Fisher and Jimmie Swinnerton. I don't know how or when I left them, but here I am.

"I'm staying down at the Press Club, 9 Spruce Street. Come down and see me sometime. Miss Rosenkrantz is my Secretary. Say, could you let me take subway fare to get home. I haven't got a cent with me? Come down to the Press Club tomorrow and I'll give it to you and we'll have a bite to eat."

He returned the proffered nickel, saying, "I need more than that. I have to get to New Rochelle. It's 47 cents there." He pocketed the money and declined an offer of companionship to Grand Central because he had to "stop over here," as he made his way to Broadway.

Mr. McManus complained to the police in 1920 that some one was impersonating him and borrowing money under his name. He said that few days passed that he did not receive a letter from some one who asked for the return of money which had been lent to a man representing himself as "George McManus." In March last, a Brooklyn hotel gave $15 to a man on the strength of a few drawings and a claim that he was George McManus and "a little short just now."

WORLD-WIDE MOVE FOR WORLD COURT

TO BE HELD, JULY 28-29

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The National Council for the Prevention of War announced tonight plans for getting a nationwide expression of opinion on the World Court. It has arranged for demonstrations in thirty-six States and eighteen foreign countries on July 28 and 29—the ninth anniversary of the beginning of the World War—in observance of "Law—Not War" Day. Among the cities where demonstrations will be held are New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Washington, Chicago and Indianapolis.

Mrs. Maud Wood Park, President of the National League of Women Voters, issued today an appeal to the women of America to help remove the menace of war.

After hearing Mrs. Park's report on conditions in Europe, which she recently visited, the Executive Committee of the League has adopted a resolution reiterating the League's endorsement of the United States adhering to the World Court in the form in which that proposal was submitted to the Senate in February.

Mrs. Park was sent to Europe by the League of Women Voters at the head of a special committee which included Mrs. James Paige of Minneapolis, Mrs. James Morrison of Chicago and Mrs. Ann Webster of New Mexico. They were instructed to find out what European women think of the effect of war on the special concerns of women and how further war may be prevented. They made what the league describes as a "woman-to-woman" tour abroad.

Sought Facts from Women.

"You can find in Europe," stated Mrs. Park, "confirmation of any theory you may take over with you—provided you can see everything through the lenses of your pre-conceived idea.

"The theory I took over with me was that women had something special to say to the women of the United States and that I might learn facts from them.

"At the Suffrage Congress in Rome we talked with women members of the Finnish Diet, the German Reichstag and the Baldwin Parliament. We talked too, with the only woman member of the Mandates Commission of the League of Nations. I attended sessions of three Parliaments in which women sit—the English, the Hungarian and the Austrian.

"If the beliefs we have brought back are one-sided it is because they are woman-sided. They are based on talks with many women.

"We believe, on the basis of the facts we learned—and we made every effort to obtain confirmation of all we were told—that there is real danger of wars unless there can be co-operatoin, not merely between this country and European countries, but between the countries of Europe.

"Until each country can come to an understanding with her neighbor there cannot be permanent peace. I believe the fate of Europe depends on the wisdom of America, and I urge all American women to work with all American men on the problem of how best the menace of war can be averted."

Women's Associations Interested.

The plans of the Council for Prevention of War for greeting President Harding on his return to Washington with a national expression of opinion on the World Court include demonstrations by church organizations, the National League of Women Voters, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and the National Council of Jewish Women.

The council announced tonight that in New York City an independent "no more war" demonstration will be directed by the Fellowship of Reconciliation, the Women's Peace Society and the Women's Peace Union.

In Philadelphia a Citizens' Committee for a World Court, including 100 prominent men and women, has arranged a two days' program. All religious denominations are represented on the committee, as well as business organizations, labor unions, women's organizations and educators' and young people's groups.

In Dayton, Ohio, the Council of Churches has, in co-operation with the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, obtained the active help of the Federated Clubs, the Parent-Teacher Societies, the Catholic societies, the labor unions, the Jewish organizations, the Women's Missionary Society, the League of Women Voters, the W. C. T. U., the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. The plans include "a poster in every home."

Unique among the demonstrations will be that of the Business Council of the Blackfeet Indians, one member of which recently wrote the National Council for the Prevention of War:

"My people are beginning to be interested in national questions and they all are for peace, especially the old chiefs, who say that the Great White Father made them sign treaties of peace and that therefore the United States should sign such treaties with other people."

Acting With the Council.

Among the national organizations affiliated in the National Council for the Prevention of War which it says are behind the plan are the League of Women Voters, the American Farm Bureau, National Board of Farm Organizations, International Association of Ministers, United States Societies of Christian Endeavor, Farmers' National Council, Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom, Young Women's Christian Association, National Council of Jewish Women, World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, National Education Society, National Women's Trade Union League, National Federation of Temple Sisterhood, American Association of University Women, Women's Missionary Union of Friends in America, American School Citizenship League, National Association of ex-Military Reconstruction Aides and International Lyceum and Chautauqua Association.

Co-operating with these are organizatioins interested in the promotion of special plans for the substitution of law for war—the World Court, the League of Nations and the outlawry of war.

The other nations in which anti-war demonstrations will be held include England, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Austria, Russia, France, Holland, Poland, Spain, Switzerland, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Egypt, China, India and Japan.

FISH GOING TO RUSSIA IN ARMENIA'S BEHALF

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

LAUSANNE, July 15.—Representative Hamilton Fish Jr. of the House Foreign Affairs Committee is planning to go to Moscow next week to discuss with George Tchitcherin, the Soviet Foreign Minister, the latter's project for a national home for Armenians in the Russian Caucasus. M. Tchitcherin proposed this home at the first Lausanne conference.

Mr. Fish came to Lausanne to see Ismet Pasha, who assured him that Turkey was not opposed to the establishment of this home or to the 100,000 Armenian orphans scattered throughout the Near East being escorted to it across Turkish territory.

Tomorrow Mr. Fish is going to Geneva to see representatives of the Near East Relief and learn if they will accept the plan.

He will start for Berlin Thursday and already has a visa for Russia.

LAUSANNE, July 15 (Associated Press).—Representative Fish issued a statement in which he said that in consequence of his investigations he would on his return to American oppose the project of the United States joining the World Court, because it had no power to enforce peace. He added that he would also oppose the United States joining the League of Nations "until there is a moratorium on hatred and a desire for peaceful relations among the European nations."

SAFETY CAMPAIGN REDUCES ACCIDENTS

Special Educational Work in Public Schools Brings Decrease in Deaths.

The safety educational cmpaign in public schools of the city has resulted in a substantial decrease in the number of accidents to children during the first six months of this year as compared with the same period of last year, according to a letter from Special Deputy Commissioner Barron Collier of the Bureau of Public Safety to Dr. William L. Ettinger, Superintendent of Schools. Mr. Collier says:

"We are pleased to advise you that there has been a most gratifying reduction in accidents to children during the first six months of this year, as compared with the first six months of last year. In the first half of 1922 there were 242 children 16 years of age and under killed, and 5,623 injured in street accidents. During the same period this year only 200 children 16 years of age and under were killed and 4,801 injured, a reduction of forty-two fatalities and 822 injuries to children.

"This showing was made in spite of the fact that there were 45,669 more motor vehicles registered in the city July 1 of this year than were on the same date last year.

"This shows what can be accomplished by carrying on a continuous and whole-hearted safety educational campaign. The splendid co-operation that has been given continuously by yourself and by the district superintendents, principals and teachers in the public schools to the representatives of the Bureau of Public Safety has borne fruit.

"With the opening of the schools in the Fall the campaign against accidents and the elimination of accident causes will, I am sure, be taken up with increased vigor."

régime, which it has been necessary for American labor to combat are briefly set forth in a memorandum published by the Federation on June 29, 1923, a few copies being enclosed herewith.

"Nor do the activities of these Soviet agencies affect the welfare and progress of American labor alone, their avowed purpose is not only to destroy the American labor movement and replace it by a system of revolutionary unions which would deprive the workers of all control and leave them mere tools in the hands of an alien Government. They would go much further.

"These Moscow world plotters plan to employ 'revolutionary unions' as the instruments for the overthrow of the American republic. No one cognizant of the underground activities of Bolshevistic propagandists in this country will deny the truth of this.

Farmer-Labor Party.

"Doubtless you have followed the proceedings of the recent Farmer-Labor Party convention in Chicago, which was captured by the Communists under the guise of a Workers' Party, following the minute instructions received from Moscow. You also noted that all pretense was finally thrown to the winds, and that it was openly admitted by the Communists that in that move they were representing the Soviet régime.

"And now we have the spectacle of a Communistic Party formally launched in this country, with its policies and tactics directed from the seat of Bolshevist rule in Russia and its objective the violent overthrow of the American Government. Notwithstanding this, American citizens, actuated in most instances by the highest motives, are daily lending themselves to the widespread and shrewdly directed program in the United States for recognition of that same Bolshevist government.

"Little do these citizens realize that such recognition contemplates the establishment of consulates throughout this country which would serve as so many centres for the furtherance of the entire program of Moscow through which it would strike down every existing institution in our republic.

"The workers of America, before they can urge or support the recognition of any foreign régime, must be satisfied that such a Government shall not attempt to interfere with the liberty of the American people or with the independence of the American labor movement.

Information That He Wants.

"To satisfy the workers of America that the Soviet Government does not plan any interference with the internal affairs of their country, it is essential that information and assurances on certain points be given them. It is possible you can secure the needed information and assurances while you are in Russia. The following are specific points which are of special interest at the present time:

"1. Is it true that there is no free press in Russia? Is an opposition press permitted to function? Is the existing official press censored by the Government? Are foreign correspondents permitted to freely communicate their dispatches?

"2. Are workmen permitted to organize without interference from the Government? To what extent are workmen permitted to criticise the Government and the conditions under which they work?

"3. Is it true that the leading officials of the Soviet Government, of the Communist Party and of the Third Internationale are the same persons?

"4. To what extent is the Soviet Government supporting, or at least permitting, the Third Internationale to conduct propaganda hostile to foreign Governments?

"5. Individually and unofficially, responsible spokesmen of the Soviet Government declare that the Government is no longer a strictly Communist organization, but that, on the contrary, it is almost a model of such republics as the United States. If this is really the case, why does not the Soviet Government actually and officially change its character to conform to the declarations just mentioned?

"6. If the Soviet Government is willing to acknowledge its legitimate obligations, why does it not definitely, at least in principle, go on record to such effect?

"7. It is claimed that the Soviet Government strictly adheres to its promises and agreements. Why is it, then, that such Governments as Czechoslovakia, Turkey, Finland, Latvia and Poland, not to mention Great Britain, all of whom have official relations with Russia, have at the present time strained relations with the Soviets, who, they charge, have not lived up to their agreements?

"It is definitely reported that only recently the Turkish Government was obliged to cancel the exequators of certain Soviet Consuls on the ground that they were engaged in Communist propaganda in Turkey. The Treaty of Peace between Soviet Russia and Poland provided for the payment of an indemnity to Poland, due in April, 1920. At the present moment citizens and officials of Latvia are virtually barred from entering Soviet Russia because of strained relations between the two Governments. Finland is appealing to the League of Nations to obtain a decision regarding the status of Karelia, despite the fact that in the Treaty of Peace between Finland and Soviet Russia the Soviets agreed to a certain settlement which they now repudiate.

"8. Is it the intention of American visitors in Russia to be as Soviet guests in Russia even if a part of their expenses is paid by themselves; are such visitors to travel to Moscow only on the 'guest train' and to stop at the 'guest hotels' at Petrograd and Moscow; to visit only the 'guest schools,' factories, mines, model farms, co-operative societies, trade unions, &c.; to witness army manoeuvres; to read only Soviet reports and statistics, and to use a Soviet-paid interpreter? Or are the Americans planning to travel freely while in Russia in order to find out what is really happening behind the scenes?

Hits Proletariat 'Dictatorship.'

"Permit me to assure you that I do not in the least underestimate the intelligence, keenness of your observation or the earnestness with which you are imbued to undertake the visit to and investigations of conditions in Russia.

"My purpose in writing this letter is to acquaint you with some of the facts and conditions of which possibly you may not be aware and about which you certainly would want to ascertain definitely and accurately.

"American labor stands determinedly opposed to the dictatorship of Big Business and High Finance, as it is opposed to the dictatorship of the so-called 'proletariat.' American labor is aware of the subtleties of both these two extremes—contending against both, so that we may press on the movement of natural and rational progress for freedom, justice, democracy and humanity."

BRITISH TO GO AHEAD WITH DRAFT OF NOTE

MOST PAPERS DEPLORE IT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 15.—The draft of the note which the British Government purposes to submit to the allied Governments with a view to its being sent later to the German Government is not yet completed, but it is expected that it will have assumed its final shape on Tuesday. The greatest secrecy is maintained concerning its contents.

Notwithstanding M. Poincaré's discouraging speech at Senlis, the draft of the note will be sent to Paris as arranged, but whether it will be altered in any way as a result of the French Premier's apparently uncompromising attitude cannot be foretold.

The London Times Paris correspondent says it must be confessed that M. Poincaré's speech holds out even less hope than might have been anticipated from the manner in which the declaration of Mr. Baldwin was first received.

May Be Diplomatic Move.

"It may be asked, however," adds the correspondent, "whether it is not merely to be taken as a diplomatic move, an attempt to refute the allegations made against France, and to establish the general French case before admitting some compromise on specific points. It would be better to keep an open mind as yet and to await this week the receipt of the British proposals, which M. Poincaré probably wishes to influence by his statement."

The London Times editorially refuses to believe M. Poincaré has spoken his last word.

"We are convinced," it says, "that he will give the British plan when it is made known the patient examination which for six months we have accorded to his."

The paper thinks it is unfortunate that M. Poincaré should have chosen the occasion of the unveiling of a war memorial to make his indirect reply to Mr. Baldwin's statement, since "war memorials are apt to stir emotions that lie outside the range of present European problems," and it protests against his assumption that Britain no longer supports the Versailles Treaty.

"It would be difficult," it says, "for M. Poincaré to point to any single act of the British Government that shows any departure from its provisions. The policy of the British Government is based on the Treaty of Versailles."

Other papers are not so hopeful as The London Times.

The Daily News says M. Poincaré's speech leaves little hope of a favorable reception for the British proposals, but it adds: "To say that it insures our ultimate failure would be to despair prematurely."

The Daily Express says:

"The speech puts an end to the high hopes of the nation. The reception of the British note of next Wednesday is now a foregone conclusion and France will reply, perhaps weeks from now, that she intends to go on proceeding against Germany in the future exactly as she has been doing in the past."

Alternative Courses Discussed.

The Daily Express then discusses alternative courses open to Great Britain and advocates the following plan of its own:

"It is to clear out of Europe and while taking what we can get out of the European markets to devote our surplus energies to peaceful development of the British Empire. This we shall never be able to do as long as the national attention is concentrated on Paris or Berlin and the national pocket drained by ensuring safety by armaments against some war in Europe into which we shall be dragged inevitably unless we cut completely clear of the tangle."

The Daily Chronicle sees no hope of M. Poincaré accepting the British draft reply.

"The French Prime Minister," it says, "tells us in advance that he intends to reject the reply; that he will concede nothing; that he will in no way modify his own program, and that Britain must in every respect follow where he dictates.

"How can we keep up the working of the Entente under these circumstances? How can we still maintain the hollow pretense that the French politicians want what we want—namely, reparations from Germany? If they really wanted reparations they would not pursue this policy of invasion and terror in the Ruhr which has cut off a large part of the reparations France was already receiving.

"But how can the rest of the world look on calmly while France, asserting her own military supremacy, is destroying the trade of Europe? She herself, being so nearly self dependent, is growing in prosperity. Her industries are flourishing. She has no unemployed. She is not heavily taxed and avoids the burden of her foreign debt.

"No matter to her that her allies, Italy and Belgium, are suffering and all neutral countries in the north of Europe. No matter that we who bore the heat and burden of the war with her are stricken with paralysis of trade and disaster of continuous unemployment. Very lightly the French, prosperous themselves, are performing acts of violence in the Ruhr which are depriving us of the means of recovering.

"Every day that France insists on holding those so-called pledges she is keeping tens of thousands of British men and women out of work. That is no overstatement of the case. French policy in the Ruhr means British unemployment."

One Paper in Accord With Poincare.

On the othe hand, The Morning Post find, itself in accord with M. Poincare, whose words it says are plainly not his alone but the words of France.

"If we were to insist upon evacuation of the Ruhr as a condition of friendship with France," says the paper, "it is obvious from this speech that France would reply that she cannot and will not do it. We should thus drift away from our friends, and as there is no alternative we should be forced into a policy of isolation.

"We know our Government does not propose to itself a policy of isolation, but that is the probable consequence of its attitude. Therefore let it frankly face this consequence and let the British people also face it.

"Have we armaments equal to a policy of isolation? Are we strong enough to dispense with allies? Have we, for example, a sufficient force of airplanes and of submarines to meet the liabilities that isolation entails? Have we a national army or any system of training in arms which would enable us to confront such a future with equanimity?

"There is only one answer to these questions: We are not prepared for a policy of isolation. We should have to add enormously to the cost of our defensive measures. Moreover we should gain nothing, for France is determined not to withdraw from the Ruhr until she has had full satisfaction from Germany.

"The only policy by which we can hope for satisfactory results is cordial and whole-hearted co-operation with France to force Germany to accept our joint terms."

SEIZE RUHR FAKERS OF "ATROCITY" PICTURE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUESSELDORF, July 15.—The French yesterday arrested three Germans guilty of having faked pictures of alleged French "atrocities" against the Ruhr population. All three were in the employ of the German Propaganda Department. They are August Arnold, photographer, of Bochum; Hugo Rovermann, medical practitioner, of Dortmund, and Theodore Gauteför, an official of the Dortmund municipality.

In its April issue the Sud Deutsche Montatshefte published a picture under the heading, "Terror and Martyrdom on the Rhine and Ruhr," showing a man with his back covered with terrible wounds and bruises said to have been inflicted by French soldiers with heavy leather thongs. The French Intelligence Service opened an inquiry which terminated in the arrests just mentioned.

The shortage of cash for continuance of passive resistance is making itself increasingly felt. Both Krupp and Stinnes are now paying part of the wages of their men with privately issued script.

It is not the first time that large German undertakings have resorted to this method. During the war, notably, the famous Radische Anilin Works paid the men with private script. This, however, was only used inside the works themselves at co-operative stores. Now Ruhr storekeepers are willingly accepting Krupp or Bochumer Verein script—the latter being Stinnes's concern—as paper marks.

For the first time yesterday the French seized funds in a private bank when they took 220,000,000 marks from the coffers of the Dortmunder Bank, Dortmund, which had been destined to pay railroad workers for doing nothing. The reason for this departure was the receipt of information that the Reichsbank was using private concerns as agents to carry out passive resistance operations, owing to fear of seizure.

ALLIES TRY TO BREAK NEAR EAST DEADLOCK

Ask the Turks to State What Points They Recognize as Agreed Upon.

RESPONSIBILITY IS DENIED

Blame Clash of Antagonistic Interests, Apparently Alluding to American Concessions.

LAUSANNE, July 15 (Associated Press).—The Allies made an effort tonight to break the deadlock in the Near East conference; they sent a note to the Turkish delegation proposing a joint meeting of experts tomorrow morning to pave the way for a later assembly of the plenipotentiaries. The Allies called upon the Turks definitely to recognize the points already agreed upon, so that both sides might know where they stood.

The note contained a detailed statement relative to the matters in controversy as the Allies understood them, and asked the Turks to come to an agreement on these points.

The Turks today threw the blame for the deadlock over concessions on "the clash of antagonistic interests which revealed themselves in the recent Lausanne pourparlers."

This opinion was expressed in a statement which the delegates to the Near East conference interpreted as alluding to the attitude of the United States on economic development contracts. The Turks are said to have repudiated none of the principles on which the concessions agreement was reached, but, as the interests of the concessionnaires conflict, the statement contends, it is not within the power of he Turkish delegation to reconcile them with the vital interests of the Turkish nation, adding: "The delegation is ready, if necessary, to submit for world judgment all the facts down to the smallest details."

Conference circles had difficulty in interpreting the exact meaning of the document, but concluded that the Turks were seeking to show that the new troubles of the treaty-makers ought not to be left at their door, and that new circumstances had developed which obliged the Turks to safeguard their national interests and protect their economic freedom.

The statement is regarded as alluding to the United States because the American representatives protested against the treaty confirming the concession of the Turkish Petroleum Company, on the ground that it was invalid and still subject to negotiations with the United States and England.

Joseph C. Grew also registered America's objection to the treaty incorporating preferential contract rights to British and French companies during a period which was originally ten years, but was reduced to five at the suggestion of the Allies. America contends that this is a monopolistic violation of the principle of equal opportunity.

The Allies declare that it merely gives priority on concessions logically connected with investments already made and point out that their companies must bid as high as the others if they wish to obtain the contracts. The allied spokesmen insist that the Chester concession also has privileges for future development.

LAUSANNE, July 15.—Steps were taken this afternoon by the Allies to reopen the negotiations which were brought to an abrupt halt Thursday night, at the moment when it was believed that the treaty was about to be signed, by the Turkish delegates balking at the agreements they had made in return for allied concessions.

The overtures of the Allies this afternoon followed a statement issued to the press by Ismet Pasha, in which he declared that the Turks had not gone back on the principles on which an accord had been reached, but had met with a check from conflicting influences which they were unable to reconcile while safeguarding their own position.

In response to this statement the allied delegates sent to Ismet Pasha a note saying that if the Turks maintained the principles on which the accord had been concluded a meeting of experts to examine the secondary points could take place tomorrow at 10 o'clock.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 15.—The Acting High Commissioner for France seized the occasion furnished by yesterday's celebration of Bastile Day to remind Turkey how much she owed to French sympathy and aid, and expressed the confident hope that the mutual interests of the two countries were so closely bound up that they could not be permanently affected by the fluctuations of politics.

This reminder was the more seasonable inasmuch as, according to the latest telegrams from Angora, the Turks appear to be more inclined to seek an agreement on the outstanding British concessions than on those held by the French.

FRANCE WILL REFUSE ANY CONCESSIONS

been empty handed instead of holding the guarantees she does, "and which she stands able to keep."

The Premier then told how before the war he had acted against powerful influences seeking a rapprochement between France and Germany for the purpose of establishing an entente cordiale.

"No one would be more grieved if a shadow, even a passing one, could obscure that other friendship for which I worked," he went on, "but I always conceived this friendship as leaving to the two peoples their independence of opinion and freedom of expression, as designed to conciliate their interests and not subordinate one to the other, and as finding its best support in a constant effort of reciprocal comprehension and mutual respect and equality.

"We know our Allies are as honest as we, and that is why we are confident that after reflection and in face of the facts in the case they will finish by seeing we are right."

M. Poincaré ended by saying that France stood for respect of the treaties which had established postwar Europe, and that if one of them were allowed to go into the discard all the smaller nations would demand the same escape from their obligations as Germany would have gained. Therefore, he concluded, in insisting on the observance of the Treaty of Versailles France was working for world peace.

Speaks Where Germans Shot Hostages.

SENLIS, France, July 15 (Associated Press).—Premier Poincaré today proclaimed the French Government's unalterable decision resolutely to stand for the complete execution of the Versailles Peace Treaty, with the German debt at 132,000,000,000 gold marks, as agreed upon by the Allies at the London conference, and against any international financial committee to replace the Reparation Commission.

M. Poincaré chose for his pronouncement this town, which marks the furthest advance of the Germans and where the Germans executed hostages, placed civilians in the line of the French fire and burned part of the town in reprisal against alleged civilian resistance.

M. Poincaré professed to have no hatred and no spirit for revenge for the devastation, the traces of which were visible from where he spoke. "We should like no longer to talk of devastation or to think of it," he declared. "We should like to forget—even to forgive."

France, said M. Poincaré, had been no better treated in reparations than in the concessions wrung from her and the security denied her.

M. Poincaré asked if any one imagined that Germany would stabilize the mark and put her house in order "if France watched with arms folded."

"For three years," he said, "the Allies have followed this mirage and for three years things have been going from bad to worse. If we were not in the Ruhr, Germany would have continued to slip into the abyss she dug, but we would have come empty-handed, while now we hold security, and we are powerful enough not to have to let go."

France, the Premier asserted, unceasingly had been making concessions. "Then," he added "why have we said we have reached the end? It is because until now they always have been at our expense." The peace treaty had promised reparations and security. For security the right was given to France of temporary occupation on the Rhine that was to cease at the precise moment Germany should become stronger."

A guarantee compact also had been promised to France, but this had not been fulfilled and nothing had been offered to replace it, for "the new guarantee pact propsed by Mr. Lloyd George was for a shorter time than occupation and without precise engagements. Military aid was nothing; it was only a dangerous deception."

M. Poincaré emphasized the Government's and his own personal feeling in favor of close relations between France and Great Britain. He recalled that it was he who brought about the alliance with Great Britain before the war when others were advocating better relations between France and Germany.

The Premier concluded with what was interpreted as a carefully worded reminder of France's supreme position on the Continent and the danger of attacking the Treaty of Versailles. For, he said, "through a breach opened in the Versailles Treaty other propositions would pass that would reopen the entire peace settlement, destroy the new status of Central Europe and menace our friends, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Jugoslavia."

Commenting on Premier Poincaré's speech the Matin will say editorially tomorrow:

"After this discourse, moderate in tone but strong in arguments, Mr. Baldwin and Lord Curzon know two things. The first is that we will not evacuate the Ruhr without being paid. The second is we will not consent to the replacement of the Reparation Commission by a committee of international financiers who represent, in M. Poincaré's words, a coalition of interests opposed to ours.

"France will maintain her rights. Though ready to discuss any arrangements which concern methods of payment and extinction of the interallied debts by abandonment of part of her claim on Germany, she will not allow the amount of her claims to be reduced in exchange for mere promises.

"The British Government is cautioned that a policy which does not take into account these essential conditions will be considered by France and by other nations as a flagrant violation of treaties."

SAYS GERMANY CANNOT PAY.

Director of Institute of Economics Tells of Result of Investigation.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Belief that Germany at present can make no further reparation payments was expressed tonight by H. G. Moulton, Director of the Institute of Economics, who declared this was the chief conclusion to be drawn from an analysis of Germany's capacity to pay which has just been completed by the institute.

"The total that may in the long run be paid," Mr. Moulton added, "depends upon the state of European trade and industry—in other words, upon factors over which Germany has relatively little direct control."

Characterizing Germany's present economic condition as "extremely grave," Mr. Moulton said that since that nation's gold supply "is not sufficient to meet her obligations for more than a few months, and her paper is not acceptable to the Reparation Commission, she can pay for her imports only with the proceeds from exports."

"It must be emphasized," continued Mr. Moulton, "that Germany cannot possibly utilize all these proceeds from her exports in meeting reparation obligations. This is because she must have imports of raw materials and foodstuffs if her economic system is not to break down completely, and she can pay for these only with exports.

"The crux of the whole German problem may be stated thus: A country with an area only two-thirds the size of Texas, has as a result of the great industrial expansion of the last forty years come to have a population of more than 60,000,000 people, of whom roughly one-fourth are dependent upon imported foodstuffs for their very existence. Moreover, the industrial system thus built up can operate only if raw materials are brought in from abroad. These indispensable food and raw material imports can be paid for only in foreign money derived from the sales of exports.

"Hence, if the entire German population and the German industrial system are to survive, the first claim on the proceeds of exports is to meet the cost of necessary imports. Only if Germany can export more than is required to pay for indispensable imports will she be able to meet reparation obligations. And she can export only to the extent that other countries can and will buy German products."

GERMAN POLICE CATCH VANDALS FOR FRENCH

Turn Over at Essen Five Germans Seized in Act of Cutting Telephone Wires.

ESSEN, July 15.—The German police arrested five Germans caught cutting French military telephone lines this afternoon, turning them over to the French authorities for court martial.

As far as is known this is the first time the German police have ever tried to suppress sabotage in the Ruhr.

MUSSOLINI CARRIES ELECTORAL REFORM

SCORES PERSONAL VICTORY

Ex-Premiers Congratulate Him and Deputies Take Him on Shoulders About Chamber.

HE WARNED HE WOULD RULE

Says There Is No "Absolute Liberty" and Scores the Popularists and the Socialists.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, July 15.—If any doubt existed in any one's mind whether Premier Mussolini would get his way about electoral reform—and many people in Italy had their doubts about it—these doubts were dissipated after his speech today in the Italian Chamber of Deputies. The last words were hardly out of Premier Mussolini's mouth when Deputies of all political beliefs, except the Socialists, Communists and Republicans, made a rush at him as though they intended to mob him. Some Catholics who were his most bitter opponents participated in this rush. With a wild shout of the Fascista cry the Deputies hoisted Mussolini on their shoulders and carried him in triumph around the Chamber, while all spectators in the public tribunal stood up, lustily singing Fascista war songs.

Mussolini spoke without any notes and without any gestures except an occasional powerful blow of his fist on the table. He seemed to realize that he was perhaps fighting the greatest battle of his life and made the most of his opportunities but he did not appear before the Chamber as a suppliant, rather he seemed to command.

The Fascisti have made approval of their reform such an integral part of their program that its rejection by the Chamber would result in a tremendous blow to their prestige. It seems certain that they will come out of their first serious parliamentary battle not only with the reform bill actually in their favor, but also with their power greatly increased.

ROME, July 15.—Premier Mussolini obtained success in the Chamber of Deputies tonight. Until last night a vote of confidence and the passage of the Election Reform bill seemed uncertain, but after Premier Mussolini spoke it became obvious that the Chamber would stand by him. The result of the vote was 303 favorable and 150 contrary for confidence and 335 favorable and 139 contrary for the bill.

ROME, July 15 (Associated Press).—At the conclusion of one of the most historic speeches ever delivered in the Italian Chamber, Premier Mussolini today scored a triumph in defense of his electoral reform bill, which is quite unprecedented in the annals of the Italian Parliament. Former Premiers Orlando and Giolitti were among the first to shake hands with Mussolini and congratulate him, and the Premier was deeply touched by the unique demonstration.

Not less than 400 Deputies heard Mussolini defend his bill against the attacks made upon it by the strong opposition. With reference to the Popularists, who have had differences with the Premier, resulting in the resignation from the Cabinet of all the Ministers belonging to the Catholic Party, Mussolini said:

"The collaboration of the Popularists is not clear and is too veiled to be appreciated by the Government. In politics the Government is absolutely intransigeant and is not aiming at small acts, and the collaboration proposed by the Popularists is Malthusian. Fascism has in its hands the power and will to hold it. Revolution has not been talked of since we expressed the will to maintain our power."

Regarding the accusation that his bill was suppressing liberty, he asked "What is liberty? and declared:

"There is no such thing as absolute liberty, yet many forms of liberty exist. The Socialists always assert that there is liberty, and clamor for liberty of work; yet these same Socialists do not hesitate to commit injuries against free work."

Turning to the Socialists he exclaimed: "In Russia is there liberty of assembly, of Parliament?" and he answered emphatically, "No!"

WILL PROROGUE THE CORTES

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

MADRID, July 15.—The Cabinet today formed a decision to prorogue the Cortes at the end of this month, in order to have a free hand to dispose of General Aguilleras, the Fascista chief and present head of the Supreme War and Navy Council.

General Aguilleras's defiant attitude is unchanged, and it has become increasingly obvious in the last week that he is supported by Parliament.

In order to forestall his plan to force the political as well as military chiefs responsible for the disastrous Moroccan operations, the Government finds itself faced with the necessity of removing the General from his high command or running the risk of a coup d'état.

The Government 's procedure, it is authoritatively understood, will be, first, to prorogue Parliament and, second, to register a request in writing that General Aguilleras's parliamentary immunity from arrest be removed. Such a demand could not be discussed until Parliament met again, but meanwhile General Aguilleras would be obliged to resign immediately. What the fiery military leader would do in such an emergency is a matter of anxious speculation.

Parliament has already drawn up papers accusing all the Ministers and army officials considered responsible for the Moroccan disaster. A commission to make preparations for the trials was named yesterday at General Aguilleras's insistent request.

The Government's wish to avoid the trials is based on knowledge that some of the highest officials in the kingdom are sure to be drawn into them.

Canada to Sell $22,500,000 Rail Bonds.

OTTAWA, July 15.—Minister of Finance Fielding announced today that arrangements have been made for the issuance in Canada of $22,500,000 bonds of the Canadian National Railway Company, with interest and principal guaranteed by the Canadian Government, which owns all the stock. The bonds are to be used to purchase new rolling stock, it was stated.

URGES STATE ACTION TO DEVELOP POWER

Instead It Has Found the Washington Board Ready to Co-operate With Albany.

ALBANY, July 15.—New York State has not yet suffered from Federal encroachment of her water powers under the Federal Waterpower act, but the State should at once adopt a comprehensive plan of State development, ownership and control over its waterpowers to the end that the people may receive the benefit, according to the report of the New York State Waterpower Commission, submitted to Governor Smith today.

The commission, consisting of the Attorney General, the State Engineer and their counsel, was appointed to investigate and report on the status of the case against the Federal Government begun by New York State to contest the constitutionality of the Federal Waterpower act, wherein the Federal Government asserted its rights to control or lease the use of water for power purposes on navigable streams within the State.

Conferences were held at Washington with the Secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture and members of the Federal Power Commission, and the report which resulted from the conference is concurred in by all members of the State commission.

"For all practical purposes in the immediate future," the report states, "the pending suit against the Federal officials has accomplished the objects for which it was brought. The acceptance by the defendants, in their answer, of the leading propositions constituting the basis of the complaints and the full and frank confirmation thereof at this conference between the representatives of the Federal and State commissions have apparently settled the principal propositions for which the State of New York has contended and which the Federal Power Commission had previously seemed unwilling to accept.

"The disavowal by the Federal Power Commission of any intention to interfere with power developments in connection with the Barge Canal and the expression of willingness to co-operate with the State and the International Joint Commission in State development of the power possibilities of the Niagara and St. Lawrence Rivers, without claiming property right on the part of the Federal Government to share in profits therefrom, has now cleared the way, so far as the Federal Government is concerned, for power developments on those boundary streams by virtue of the concerted action of the State, the Federal Power Commission and the International Joint Commission."

Concluding, the commission recommended that the State, with the permission of the United States Supreme Court, permit the suit to stand, unless and until the Federal Power Commission should change its present conciliatory attitude; that the State enact the statute for State waterpower development recommended by Governor Smith; that the State Waterpower Commission continue in close touch with the Federal Power Commission, that development of the waterpower resources may be accelerated, and that during the coming session of Congress the State be represented at committee hearings on waterpower measures

RUHR TOWNS SWELTER WITH WINDOWS CLOSED

Copyright, 1923, by the Chicago Tribune Co.

BERLIN, July 15.—All windows must be closed from 9 P. M. until 6 o'clock in the morning, is the military order in Essen and other Ruhr towns, although a temperature of nearly 100 degrees is now crushing Central Europe.

In an appeal to the French generals the labor unions of the Rhur today demanded permission to open windows at night and to allow the street cars to run, since under the present traffic restrictions many workers walk hours until they reach their jobs and many casualties are caused by these exertions in the sweltering heat.

The labor unions also ask that the telephones be freed, since doctors cannot be reached even in unexpected cases, however serious the case may be where they are needed.

BERLIN, July 15.—Berlin and the provinces continue to swelter under the heat wave which is overwhelming Western Europe.

The temperature today averaged 95 degrees Fahrenheit in the shade. Notwithstanding the intensity of the heat, there has been a conspicuous absence of fatal prostrations.

PARIS, July 15.—Heavy showers in northern France today broke the heat wave which has existed for eight days, seriously injuring the vegetable and fruit crops and threatening grain.

The sunshine had been badly needed after the extremely late and cold Spring, but the intensity of the heat wave is believed to have done more harm than good.

BODY FOUND IN CAR; TWO MOTORIST HELD

GENEVA, N. Y., July 15.—Horace Sisson, 54, of Holcomb, and Harry Conklin, 45, of Hudson Falls, are being held in Geneva on an open charge following the finding of the body of Thomas Bolger, 50, who lived near Seneca Castle, in the rear seat of the automobile in which they were riding.

Sisson and Conklin reported to police tonight they had just discovered Bolger's body in the automobile. Residents of Geneva claim to have noticed the prostrate form of the man in the car several hours earlier.

Bolger's head was crushed and a rear wheel of the machine was stained with blood. Changes in the version of the report offered by one of the men resulted in their arrest.

1,000 HERE HAIL DANISH PRIMATE

Bishop Harold Ostenfeld Brings Message to 75,000 Danes of Two Synods in America.

SPANS CONTINENT ON VISIT

Americans of Danish descent gathered from all parts of the city at 1 P. M. yesterday in the Bethlehem Swedish Lutheran Church, Pacific Street and Third Avenue, Brooklyn, to greet the Right Rev. Harold Ostenfeld of Copenhagen, Bishop of the Diocese of Shaelland and Primate of all Denmark, on his first visit to America.

It was the first public appearance of the Bishop here. He arrived Saturday from the Pacific Coast, after preaching in Danish-American churches all the way across the continent. He delivered seventy sermons en route. The Bishop is accompanied by his wife.

Dr. Ostenfeld will sail Wednesday on the Esthonia of the Baltic Line. Before returning to Denmark he will attend the Lutheran World Convention in Saxony.

Most of the 1,000 persons at the services remained for a reception and luncheon which followed. The service, sermon and speeches were in Danish. The musical program was also in Danish.

The Swedish Lutherans held their regular 11 A. M. service and then lent their church to the Danes.

Bishop Ostenfeld was welcomed by the Rev. Rasmus Anderson, rector of Our Savour's Danish Lutheran Church, Ninth Street, Brooklyn, and dean of Danish pastors in New York. Other Danish Lutheran pastors present were the Rev. A. J. Tarpgaard, Trinity Church, Hoe Avenue, the Bronx; the Rev. Jens Knudsen, Salem Church, Thirteenth Street, Brooklyn; the Rev. C. S. Kirkegaard, Bethany and St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Church, North Plainfield, N. J.

The Bishop, or Primas, as he is officially designated in Denmark, preached on the miracle of "feeding the four thousand." He thanked the Swedish congregation for allowing use of its church, and said he appreciated the friendly relations existing between the Scandinavian churches.

An official greeting from the Church of Denmark was presented by Dr. Ostenfeld, who said the occasion constituted a greeting from the mother Church to her daughter in America.

Last night Bishop Ostenfeld preached in St. Stephen's Lutheran Church, Perth Amboy, N. J., where a reception was held.

This evening the Bishop will be the guest at a dinner in the Astor Hotel given by executives of the National Lutheran Council and the United Lutheran Church in America. At 9 P. M. the prelate will preach at Trinity Church, the Bronx. Tomorrow evening he will preach at Our Saviour's Church, Brooklyn. He and his wife are at the Commodore Hotel.

The special object of the visit of the Bishop was to bring a message to the two Danish synods in the United States, which have a membership of 75,000.

How Credit Bears The Burden of Business

THANKS to the modern use of credit, a manufacturer no longer need tie up capital in raw materials and in finished products to be sold as demanded.

Commercial banking credit supports the entire structure of business, from credit used by the manufacturer to buy raw materials and pay labor, to credit used by the retailer to purchase stocks and carry them until they are sold to the ultimate consumer.

The enormous supplies of banking credit necessary to carry on business are provided by the commercial banks of the country—among them the Bankers Trust Company, with offices in New York and Paris doing a world-wide business.

HARDING IS HAPPY AS HE SPEEDS NORTH

leggins was the conventional costume. President Harding, however, wore a brown business suit with gray-gold cap.

The whole setting was made more picturesque by the lofty mountains in the near vicinity, while in the distant background the white dome of Mt. McKinley showed plainly, surrounded by lesser but still noble peaks.

At 10 o'clock last night the special train stopped to enable the President and his party to inspect the cable suspension bridge, 300 feet over Hurricane Gulch. It was broad daylight then and the President, accompanied by Mrs. Hoover, Mrs. Jennings and several male members of the party, walked across the ties of the bridge to get a glimpse of the bottom of the gulch through which the mountain stream rushed.

Land of the Midnight Sun.

President Harding is now in the Land of the Midnight Sun. It was broad daylight when his special train left Anchorage over a spur of the Government railroad at midnight Friday. While the President retired soon after the train got under way some members of his party remained up to see the sun go down. What they saw was a merging of sunset and dawn, the first streaks of daybreak showing as twilight in another part of the heavens gradually faded into the semi-darkness of the horizon. At no time during the "night" was it impossible to read a newspaper.

The Presidential special arrived at Chickaloon at 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning and was sidetracked there until 10 o'clock. President and Mrs. Harding had breakfast in their private car and then went out to see the anthracite coal mine, owned and operated by the United States Navy. That is, it was once operated by the naval authorities. But it is now inactive. After the expenditure of more than $1,000,000 on the project the production of coal was suspended on account of the heavy expense.

Leaving Chickaloon at 10 o'clock the President's train proceeded to Matanuska, where the track rejoined the main line of the Government railway. It was a beautiful bright day with a balminess in the atmosphere which was a great relief to the members of the party after the chilly, rainy weather of the last few days. The scenery was less impressive than on Friday. The mountains were not so high and much of the country was covered with scrub growths of spruce and hemlock. But gorgeous coloring was seen along the way in the large patches of fire flower.

At Matanuska, where the train arrived at noon yesterday, the regular train from Fairbanks was sidetracked to enable the passengers to greet the President and his traveling companions, who are enjoying their Alaska experience greatly. The population has been extremely cordial in receiving him, to show its appreciation of his visit.

Glacier Named for Harding.

To commemorate the President's Alaska venture several natural objects will be named in his honor. A huge ice pack 90 miles long by 40 miles wide, extending from Seward to Seldovia, has been christened "Harding Glacier." The name of "Harding Gateway" has been bestowed on the narrow water passage to Resurrection Bay, the magnificent harbor on which Seward is built. Governor Bone of Alaska, who is accompanying the President on his Alaskan tour, has constituted himself a board of geographic nomenclature and is making selection of places to be named in the President's honor.

President Harding helped pass the time on the trip by running the engine of his special and taking a hand at painting a railroad section house. His venture as a locomotive engineer took place between Wassila, 160 miles from Seward, and Willow. With Mrs. Harding beside him in the cab he ran the engine for twenty-six miles in fifty-one minutes. This work was pretty well done, the only mishap being the breaking of eleven pieces of crockery in the dining car through a jolt caused by Engineer Harding bringing the train to a halt too suddenly.

At Willow two young employes of the Government railroad, H. M. Wilson of Anchorage and F. L. Hilton of San Francisco, asked the President to help them paint a new section house. They explained that these houses were just completed or being built and that the one at Willow was the first to need a coat of paint. The President readily complied. He spread green paint on the virgin sides of the building during the short time the train remained at Willow. When he finished his hands were smeared with green.

Views McKinley Range.

Most of yesterday's run of the Presidential special train was through a country devastated by forest fires and watered part of the way by the swift Sushitna River. One of the most attractive portions of the journey was along the shores of Lake Nancy, named for Nancy Lane, daughter of the late Franklin K. Lane, who projected the Alaska Railroad when Secretary of the Interior. She is now Mrs. Phillip Kaufman of Washington. In the late afternoon the train stopped at several places to give the Presidential party an opportunity to see snow-covered Mount McKinley range, but owing to poor visibility the great peak of Mount McKinley itself, the highest mountain in North America, could not be seen distinctly.

Yesterday morning after a conference with Colonel James G. Steese, Chairman of the Government railway and President of the Alaska Road Commission, President Harding decided to take at least part of the projected journey over the Richardson trail, the Government highway constructed from Valdez into the interior of the Territory to Fairbanks by Colonel Wilds P. Richardson, who spent many years in Alaska building roads for the Government.

Since coming to Alaska the President has heard much of the discomforts of travel in automobiles over the Richardson trail. It was particularly impressed upon him that the fatigues of this journey, not to speak of the pestiferous attentions of myriads of mosquitoes, might be hazardous to Mrs. Harding's health after her grave illness of last Autumn and Winter. Mrs. Harding served notice that she was going if the President made the trail trip, and this consideration resulted in a virtual decision to cancel the trail from the itinerary.

After talking over the matter with Colonel Steese this morning the President agreed to cover the first ninety miles of the original trail itinerary. This will take him to McCarty on the Tanana River, where he and the members of the official party will spend noon on the Government steamer General Jacobs. Whether the trail journey will be continued for the entire distance of 300 miles will be determined at McCarty.

The start over the trail will be made from Fairbanks at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon. Automobiles have been provided for seventy-five members of the President's party.

May Change Alaska Capital.

As a result of President Harding's visit to Alaska, serious consideration is being given to the removal of the territorial capital from Juneau, in the southeastern peninsula, to some place more accessible to the interior. Seward and Anchorage are the places between which a choice is to be made. Seward is the southern terminal of the Government railroad, while Anchorage is nearer the interior country tapped by the railroad, but also on deep water.

Seward is situated on Resurrection Bay, an arm of the Gulf of Alaska. One objection used against it is that with the lay of the land there it does not afford an opportunity for the spread of a large city such as the Government officials concerned see the Territory capital become ultimately. Another objection is that the water is so deep in the harbor that it is difficult for vessels to get secure anchorage. The answer to this latter contention is that the largest vessels tie up at the Seward docks and that ships in the harbor have never been endangered through inability to get good ground for anchorage and shelter from storms.

Anchorage is a new town which has received impetus through the establishment there of the various offices and establishments of the Alaska Road Commission and the Government railroad. This place lies at the head of Cook Inlet, a branch of the Gulf of Alaska. The difference in the tidal rise and fall is forty feet, but the largest ships can reach the docks at high tide. Anchorage is also on the Government railroad and is 114 miles nearer Fairbanks, the interior terminal of the railroad, than Seward.

There is evidence that the Federal Government is anxious for the development of the interior region. The people in the southeastern peninsula allege that the whole Government effort is being directed to the building of the interior and the country adjacent to the Government railroad with a consequent slighting of the southeastern section. The railroad is now being operated at a loss. The original estimate of cost of this experiment in Government ownership was $35,000,000, and Congress authorized that amount in 1914. The actual cost, however, has been $56,000,000.

Another important development of the President's tour of Alaska to determine what should be done to overcome the present stagnation of the Territory is that a greater measure of authority will be given to the Territorial Governor. The President and the Cabinet officers accompanying him on the Alaskan tour have great confidence in Governor Bone and desire to see his authority extended.

An increase of the Governor's functions will be accomplished for the present without asking Congress for legislation. But it is likely that legislation along this line will be recommended later by the President, who contemplates an extensive plan for the reorganization of Federal control of Alaska.

Impressed by Possibilities.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, July 15 (Associated Press).—President Harding told members of his party before his arrival here that the railroad trip had given him a new vision of Alaska and that he had been impressed not only by the matchless scenery but by the wonderful possibilities of the great valley region, heavily forested and covered with luxuriant vegetation, wild grasses and brilliant flowers.

The weather was ideal on the last day of the 450-mile railroad trip, the warm July sun bringing the temperature above 80. The sun was still shining brightly when the party arrived here at 9 o'clock tonight and the members came to a realization that they were in the land of the midnight sun.

Arriving at Cantwell, the party left the train and soon over a near-by hill appeared a herd of 1,000 reindeer, a portion of the 300,000 which have been developed in twenty-five years by the Bureau of Education from the original thousand imported from Siberia and Lapland. The President and Mrs. Harding, on viewing the sight, said "that herd would gladden the hearts of the American children and pull all Santa Claus's sleighs to their homes on Christmas."

Passing along the edge of the McKinley Park, the train arrived late in the day at Tanana bridge, where President Harding drove a spike made of gold significant of the connection of steel joining the Pacific and Arctic Oceans through navigation of the Yukon River.

Secretary Work, presiding, introduced the President, saying:

"Representing the Government department which is charged with supervising the construction and financing of the Alaska Railroad, it is a pleasure to report its completion. No one would have conjectured when the project was entered upon that the nation's Chief Executive himself would drive the last spike. This simple ceremony and this spike will become historical. They complete and dedicate to public service 473 miles of commercial highway and mark the passing of the last frontier.

"Mr. President, these steel bands you join will almost connect the Pacific Ocean with the Arctic Ocean, through the Yukon. From this great waterway will come travelers and traffic and it will receive the products of this new principality with those of older countries."

"Speaking for the hardy workmen who suffered cold and defied death, I present the work their hands have wrought. It means more than wood, stone, and steel, although fabricated with consummate skill into bridges and tunnels and towers. It means domination of the natural elements and is a monument to the pioneers and a table to unconquered American courage. It has been said that every great achievement is but the shadow of a man. This great builder has woven himself into the fabric of this railroad and enshrined in the hearts of all Alaskan people the name of Frederick Mears.

"Fifty-six million dollars was expended by him in a wild country with little supervision, but without avoidable error. In tribute to your executive cooperation and your sympathy with the hopes of Alaskans, Colonel Mears wishes you to drive the golden spike presented to him by the people of Anchorage and drive the tie that will bind Alaska's commercial relations to the United States and signify an empire's pledge of loyalty to your administration."

RODE WITH CONVICTS IN DASH TO LIBERTY

that Edwards sped south over Cobb's Creek Boulevard and into the open country, where he stepped on the gas and "let her out to the limit." All the time, he said, the convicts kept up a running conversation of their escape and declaring that they would never be captured alive.

Brown, he said, told the others that it had taken him thirty-six hours to construct the ladder, while Edwards boasted of how he had "used his head" and disconnected the telephone from the sentry box in the prison yard.

"We detoured around Chester," continued McAllister, "and a little later Edwards said to the others: 'Boys, we got to get some clothes. The wires will be hot now.' We were passing a farmhouse and Edwards drove the car right up to the house.

"It was Anthony Smith's place, about five miles from Wilmington. Malone went to Smith, who was working in the field, and told him he was wanted at the house. George Brown and Williams, with revolvers in their hands, took me by the sleeve and we walked into the kitchen. When Malone came in with Smith the convicts all stuck the farmer up.

"Then Edwards and one of the others went upstairs and started to ransack the place. They came down with their arms full of clothing and other stuff. Edwards came down with Smith's watch and chain in his hand. But Malone took it away from him and gave it back to the farmer. It looked later on in the machine like they were going to fight about this, but the matter blew over.

Chip in $30 for Farmer.

"When we got back in the car two of the convicts were dressed in civilian clothes. They had left their prison uniforms at the farm. The others changed their uniforms in the car. Before they left they took up a collection among them and raised about $30, which one of them ran back with and left with Smith.

"Among the loot they obtained were a shotgun and revolver, which Edwards said would 'come in handy for the State police.' There were also shotgun shells in the bottom of the car when I got back with my guard. I heard them say they had tied up Smith and his family."

From the farmhouse, McAllister said, the convict car took a back road to Wilmington. Driving at terrific speed through the centre of the city, they narrowly missed hitting a policeman on Market Street. This, however, did not slow them up. They did not slacken speed, he said, until after passing Newark, Del. About a mile below that city Edwards drove the car into woods to await darkness.

"Then," said McAllister, "we drove onto the road again. Pretty soon we passed a store. They went in and bought crackers, soda water and ham, but I didn't get any of it. At Newark they had purchased two pairs of trousers and two straw hats. Then we drove through Elkton and they stopped to buy more food.

Fed Victim Before Binding Him.

"After we passed Elkton they gave me something to eat. Then Edwards drove off the main road again and went into the woods. Pretty soon Gillian and Malone tied my hands and feet with part of the coat they had taken from Smith's house. One man tore off the bottom of his shirt and made a gag which they put in my mouth. They left me in the car and told me not to move until daylight. They then went away.

"I started to wiggle about five minutes after they left. But Edwards came back with his revolver in his hand and with an oath and a kick said: 'If you try to get away before daylight we'll plug you good. Don't move, you rat.'

"They had taken their guns from the car. When they finally disappeared I started wiggling myself loose. I was weak and weary, and it took a long time. After I was free I lay still to see what would happen. They didn't come back, so I cautiously started the car and drove back to the road with my lights dimmed. The motor was throttled down so as not to make much noise.

"I then drove to Elkton and went to the police station, gave my name and reported my experience. Then I telephoned my wife and hurried back home."

Bandit-Chasing Cars Scour Roads.

The police expressed the belief tonight that after leaving McAllister the convicts scattered. Several local detectives went sent to lower Delaware and Maryland to assist in the search for them. In the counties surrounding Philadelphia the detectives were aided by the State police in bandit-chasing motors.

The escape of the convicts involved the disposing of two guards, the scaling of the prison wall, forty feet high, the theft of two automobiles and the eluding of thirty-two detectives in eight automobiles.

Colonel John C. Groome, newly appointed Warden of the institution, believes that "laxity of the guards or worse" was responsible for the jail delivery.

"I do not know how the convicts got the guns they used," said Colonel Groome, "but they obviously were smuggled in from the outside. Families of prisoners are allowed to visit them once a month, and during a lax moment on the part of one of the guards they may have slipped revolvers into the cells.

"All these men occupied cells within a short distance of one another. It would have been possible for them to converse with each other for a few minutes going to and coming from their cells without attracting suspicion. It is probable that they hatched the plot in this manner.

Frequent Riots in Prison.

Colonel Groome, Chief of the Military Police of the American Expeditionary Force in France and organizer of the Pennsylvania State Police, was appointed Warden of the penitentiary about a month ago. He succeeded Robert J. McKenty, who resigned when a Grand Jury headed by Mrs. J. Willis Martin, reported to the Court that traffic in liquor and narcotics, as well as other evils, flourished at the institution under the system of prisoner government.

Frequent riots have been reported at the penitentiary. The most recent outbreak was last April when many of the 1,700 prisoners rebelled against the government by a group of inmates known as the "four horsemen." So desperate was the situation that State and city police were stationed near the prison walls. Members of the Board of Prison Inspectors declared that action had been taken just in time to prevent possible loss of life and much bloodshed.

The "four horsemen" and thirty-six other prisoners were removed to the Western Penitentiary at Rockview.

Before the delivery yesterday a total of only five prisoners had escaped from the institution in the last fifteen years, while the records for sixty years show only fourteen escapes.

The crash of a stolen automobile against the walls of the penitentiary today led to rumors that another jail delivery had been attempted and resulted in the injury of six detectives and two other men who were speeding to the institution in a motor car in response to a riot call.

The detectives' car collided with a newspaper truck and was completely wrecked. All the occupants were hurled to the street. George Niedenthal, driver of the detectives' machine, was the most seriously hurt. It is feared his skull was fractured.

SHIP LANES SAFE, ICE PATROL ENDS

Coast Guard Withdraws Vessel That Had Been Guarding the North Atlantic.

FEWER ICEBERGS THIS YEAR

Of 300 Reported South of Newfoundland Since March 15, Nearly All Have Melted.

Announcement was made yesterday that the International Ice Patrol, maintained by the United States Coast Guard, which had been in operation this year since March 15, had been discontinued at midnight on July 12. This does not signify that no more icebergs will be found drifting in the North Atlantic before next Spring, but it means that the chance of an iceberg menacing vessels in the Atlantic steamship lanes is quite remote. This should be welcome news to persons of a nervous temperament who have booked passages across for the Summer and Autumn.

Lieutenant Edward H. Smith, the oceanographer detailed to the ice patrol, states in his report that contrary to popular belief, there were fewer icebergs in the North Atlantic this Spring and early Summer than normally. The ice patrol has rendered a great service to the steamships in the North Atlantic trade by gathering reports of 300 icebergs south of Newfoundland this Spring. Most of all these have since melted. When the ice patrol ship left the patrol grounds on Friday at daylight there were not more than twenty icebergs remaining. These were confined to the northern parts of the Newfoundland Banks. Last year 420 icebergs were reported by the ice patrol.

Although there were fewer icebergs this year than usual, the strong currents from the north required vigilant watch on the part of the patrol lest an iceberg escape to the southward, the first warning of its presence being another Titanic crash in treacherous fog. Two, caught in the strong current, May 17 to May 25, were borne down across the steamship lanes. The ice patrol ship clung closely to them as they swirled along. Every two hours radio flashes were broadcasted warning all approaching Atlantic liners.

Twice each day the patrol ship broadcast the location of all icebergs and a summary of the ice situation. In addition to the 195 steamships appealed to the patrol for special ice information and received detailed instructions to fit their particular cases. It was found necessary to warn forty-six steamships, which unawares, were standing directly toward perilous icebergs or field ice.

Destruction of the two icebergs that drifted down on the steamship lanes was hastened by the use of wrecking mines. This was the first time that explosives had been used in the destruction of an iceberg.

During the four months the ice patrol has been in operation several freight steamships of low power, became jammed in the icefields off the coast of Newfoundland and the masters were directed by radio how to extricate their ships. All were saved from serious damage.

The majority of the big Atlantic passenger liners obey instructions and keep to the tracks that are laid down for them by the ice patrol and the United States Hydrographic Bureau, but a few of the captains, Lieutenant Smith states, are prone to "cut corners" to make record passages. By so doing, he says, they make port a few hours sooner, but they endanger their ships.

BROKER, FACING SUIT, COMMITS SUICIDE

Special to The New York Times.

MILFORD, Conn., July 15.—Smith Weygant, a broker with offices at 115 Broadway, who was to have been a defendant in an action involving $60,000 given to him for investment, at the Criminal Courts Building tomorrow morning, shot himself through the heart here today and died instantly. He had been spending several days with his wife and son at the Wyndblow Cottage, Pond Point, near here.

Weygant and his wife were preparing to leave for New York when the broker went into a washroom of the cottage. A few minutes later Mrs. Weygant heard a shot and the body of her husband was found. Dr. Fisher, the Medical Examiner, who pronounced Weygant dead and ordered the removal of his body, was only able to learn that the broker had committed suicide for financial reasons. He had been much worried, Dr. Fisher learned, over his impending trial.

The pistol, a .38-calibre Smith & Wesson, had been brought by the broker from New York in his luggage. Mrs. Weygant said that when the time came for them to return to New York her husband grew moody, but made no mention of the reason for his sudden change of front. The Weygants lived at 57 West Seventy-third Street, New York City.

Little could be learned about Smith Weygant here last night. Assistant District Attorney Thomas Geraty, who probably would have tried Weygant's case, could not be found. Laurence Tweedy, President of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, said he had never heard of Weygant and was sure he was not a member of the Consolidated. John W. Curtiss, President of the Curb Market Association, could not be found. At Weygant's home in West Seventy-third Street it was said that he and Mrs. Weygant occupied several rooms there.

Weygant is the second broker to commit suicide within a week. Kenneth M. Eyland, one of the wealthiest members of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, killed himself at his home in South Orange, N. J., last Thursday. No reason was assigned for the act. Weygant was 52 years old.

CLUB USED ON LANDLORD.

Tenant Held After Fight in Which Wives Were Involved.

Tony Blondi, 34, of 249 East 113th Street, was held in $500 bail yesterday by Magistrate Edgar V. Frothingham in Harlem Court on a charge of striking his landlord, Guido Comado, same address, on the head with a club. The fight, as described by Patrolman Lasnowsky, followed a hair-pulling between the wives of the landlord and tenant.

The encounter between the two women is said to have been caused by a rent dispute. The landlord, according to the police, demanded that Blondi make his wife apologize to Mrs. Comado. The landlord said the tenant's way of settling the matter was by striking him with a club. Comado alleged that his wife who ran to his assistance was also clubbed by the tenant. Mr. and Mrs. Comado were taken to Beth Israel Hospital, where several stitches were taken for scalp wounds.

WOMEN GET $300,000 FOR CAMPAIGN FUND

Part Will Be Used in Preparing Headquarters for Coming Woman's Parliament.

5,000 GOING TO CONFERENCE

Pilgrimage to Susan B. Anthony's Grave Next Sunday Will Be Part of New York Meeting.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—On the eve of the conference of the Woman's Party, which will assemble at Seneca Falls, July 20-22, where the movement for women's rights was started by Susan B. Anthony, announcement is made that more than $300,000 has been subscribed to the equal rights campaign opened by this organization.

Some of this money will be used to push forward the campaign to modify laws now unfriendly to women, and a part of it will be employed to put the headquarters of the Woman's Party, opposite the Capitol, in shape for the holding of a woman's parliament. This parliament, it was announced recently, will hold its meetings while Congress is in session and will discuss the same questions.

In connection with the conference there will be a pilgrimage to the grave of Susan B. Anthony in Mount Hope Cemetery, Rochester, next Sunday, which will be undertaken by delegates to the convention and leading women of the country. It is estimated that fully 5,000 persons will attend the memorial, which is being arranged by the Rochester Chamber of Commerce.

New York City women who will attend the conference and memorial are: Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. John Winters Brannan, Mrs. John Jay White, Mrs. Robert [illegible], Miss Adelaide Stedman, Mrs. Robert Adamson, Mrs. [illegible] Whittig, Miss Marion May, Miss Ruth Pickering, Miss Lettie [illegible], Mrs. Marcus Marks, Consuelo Furman, Mrs. Clarence M. Visiting from Connecticut will be Elsie Hill and Florence [illegible], New Haven, and Harriott Stanton Blatch, Greenwich.

New Jersey women will include Mrs. Elinor [illegible] Levey, Ridgewood; Miss Agnes Campbell, Short Hills; Miss Vera Saunders, Atlantic City; Margaret B. Laird, Newark, and Alice Paul, Moorestown.

From Pennsylvania will be Mrs. Mary Manly Power, Mrs. R. A. Fowler, Miss Anne Pennypacker and Miss Martha [illegible], Philadelphia, and Miss Mary Winsor, Haverford.

SMITH WINS AT GOLF.

Special to The New York Times.

MANCHESTER, Vt., July 15.—Governor Alfred E. Smith of Albany spent an agreeable day here today. He attended service at St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church and then called on Robert T. Lincoln at the latter's Summer home for about an hour. Later he was a victor in a golf match in which he and [illegible] D. Hecox defeated C. M. Winchester and Arthur D. Hecox. The Governor's party left Manchester in time to reach Albany early in the evening.

Preus in this county can save the State. The Farmer-Laborites concede the county to Preus, but insist that his majority will not exceed 5,000. The Republicans are hopeful of carrying it by at least 10,000, and in that event, they assert, the Governor, with the majority he will get in the Southern counties, should be able to "squeeze through."

Features of a Strange Campaign.

It has been in many respects one of the strangest campaigns in the political history of the country. In the first place, a Republican President has been denied the opportunity to say a word in favor of the Republican candidate. It is known that President Harding wanted to write a letter endorsing Preus, but even that contribution to the campaign was denied to Mr. Harding.

The old guard leaders, including Senators Lodge, Watson and Smoot and the other Administration leaders also were barred from participation, as were the members of the Senate farm bloc, of which Senator Capper of Kansas is the head. Senator Capper was ready to enter the State to speak for Preus, but when the matter was put before the Governor's managers they vetoed the proposition. This was a low tariff fight, it was said, and the men who put over the high agricultural rates of the Fordney-McCumber law were not wanted in Minnesota.

All of the candidates have repudiated the new tariff law, so, no matter how the election goes, Minnesota will have voted adversely so far as that Administration achievement is concerned.

The World Court was never mentioned by the Republicans during the campaign. On the other hand, the Farmer-Labor campaigners denounced it at every opportunity. The same was true of the record of the Administration as a whole. The Republicans kept silent. The opposition lambasted it in unmerciful fashion.

Indications, according to the political managers, are for a total vote of probably 500,000 in the State. This is a little more than 60 per cent. of the normal vote. The result, owing to the late hour the polls close, probably will not be known until 3 or 4 o'clock, Central time, Tuesday morning.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 15 (Associated Press).—The vote at Minnesota's special Senatorial election tomorrow may exceed the most sanguine expectations, for the campaign has been marked by rapidly increasing interest in the closing days, and many political leaders hope the vote will be double that of the primaries.

There are 800,000 qualified voters in the State. In the special primary last month only a few more than 300,000 votes were cast.

The principal gauge in measuring the relative strength of Governor Preus and Magnus Johnson is the general election last Fall, when Governor Preus was re-elected Chief Executive over Johnson by a plurality of 14,000 votes. In the same election Dr. Henrik Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite, was sent to the United States Senate, defeating Senator Frank B. Kellogg, Republican, decisively.

Johnson's supporters declare the effort of the Farmer-Labor Party was concentrated last Fall on the Senatorial contest and little attention was given to the Gubernatorial race. They say that, with all effort devoted to Johnson's Senatorial candidacy, his showing tomorrow should be comparable with that of Senator Shipstead last Fall.

There is No Greater Deception than Self-Deception though three-fourths of the human family probably are not aware of that fact.

We feel so sure of our own native ability to cope with every question and to be right in our judgments, and we are so unwilling to ask advice and so ready to jump at conclusions that, like Benjamin Franklin, we "pay too much for a whistle," as he so often told his friends.

This quaint and very chic silhouette revived and interpreted anew at the Paris openings last Spring, is becoming more and more important in the mode.

It is the inspiration of these delightful frocks that make use of so many of the features of today's fashions—fine, incredibly fine accordion pleating for the entire skirt; the deep tier ruffle on the bodice; and the beige dyed Valenciennes patterned lace that edges the collars and cuffs and marks two irregular border lines at the hem.

The Wanamaker August Sale of FURNITURE

Opens This Week

As usual it opens with Days of Courtesy on which selections may be made in advance, deliveries to begin August 1, and charges to be made on August bills, payable in September.

This plan is made necessary by the tremendous growth of these sales. So much furniture is sold that we cannot properly handle it in one month; so we pull August back into July.

Everything, practically, is in readiness now, and you may come any day this week that is most convenient. You will find furniture coming to the floor in great van-loads, and there may be a little disorder in arranging the displays; but what is that when you get first pick of the new things?

Some people want first August chance at the old things—the period furniture that is always on our floors and whose design rarely changes; they want first chance at the new low August price.

All right! Come along. The whole stock of furniture of the four galleries of the new building will be offered at great reduction in price. Nothing is reserved.

Furniture for the living-room
Furniture for the dining-room
Furniture for the hall
Furniture for every room

But only Wanamaker furniture. Wanamaker standard! From only the best cabinet makers in the country. No cheap, poorly made furniture, of badly seasoned or imperfect woods, slicked over with glue and polished to hide defects. And no over-decorated, over-carved or ungainly furniture. Period furniture! Simple furniture in good taste! Nothing else.

But literally hundreds of different designs to choose from, in suites and single pieces

Prices begin very low—lower than you may imagine, if you are not familiar with Wanamaker's. Bedroom suites for as little as $110; living-room suites for as little as $169; dining-room suites for as little as $197. And ranging up to magnificent suites that cost thousands of dollars. The finest furniture that's made is here. And the lowest price furniture that will give satisfaction. This is a store for ALL the people.

And all prices are down 10 to 50 per cent.—the exact saving on each piece or suite will be shown on each price tag

A cool, restful, quiet, beautiful place in which to linger for a half hour on one's way from luncheon in the restaurant. For here will be found "food for the spirit," after the physical man has been fed!

BELMAISON
Interior Decorations

New French Tickings

Belmaison has just received from abroad many yards of new French ticking in the gayest of checks and stripes. The patterns are small, but not too small to be effective as summer curtains or for furniture coverings. The colors are charming—gold with blue, for instance, and many good greens and dul rose shades. 50 inches wide. $2.50 a yard.

A heavier weight, too

In larger patterns, of plaids, stripes or checks. Deep lavender plaided in gold or cerise with a fine gold check through it—either would be attractive on a porch or in a summer living room. Other colors, too, of course. 50 inches wide. $3.50 a yard.

SUES WIFE'S MOTHER AS HOME-WRECKER

V. C. Randolph of Colorado Springs Asks for $100,000 Damages.

WELL KNOWN IN LOUISVILLE

Couple Were Married There in February — Husband Formerly Practiced Law in Detroit.

Special to The New York Times.

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 15.—Sensational charges are made in a suit for $100,000 damages for alienation of his wife's affections brought by Vernon C. Randolph of Colorado Springs against his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Reed of Louisville, Ky. The case will be heard by Judge Corriforth in the El Paso District Court here.

The complaint charges Mrs. Reed with unlawful and malicious interference with the marital affairs of Mr. Randolph and his wife, Josephine Reed Randolph.

Mrs. Reed is charged with the possession of a strong will and a domineering disposition. Ever since the marriage of her daughter she is said to have exerted her power over Mrs. Randolph in everything pertaining to her marital duties and relations. She is alleged to have "misrepresented, condemned and deprecated" her son-in-law to his wife while the couple lived in Louisville and to have brought about a final separation on July 5.

The Randolphs were married in Louisville Feb. 9, 1923. They met first in Michigan ten years ago. Mr. Randolph is a graduate of Yale and of the Law School of the University of Michigan. Before coming here for his health some time since he practiced law in Detroit. July 5 he was ordered to a local tubercular sanitarium, to which his wife did not accompany him.

Mrs. Reed is a member of a prominent Louisville family and is well to do. Charles R. Long Jr. of Louisville, her attorney, says that there will be sensational developments at the trial.

Mr. Randolph is 40 and his wife about 25. Mrs. Reed and her daughter came here from Louisville June 28. Mr. Randolph joined them at their hotel until he was ordered to the sanitarium.

HIGH CHURCH SHOWS GAIN.

Anglo-Catholic Congress in London Claims a Third of Clergy.

LONDON, July 15.—The tri-annual convocation of the Anglo-Catholic Congress in London during the last week brought into public notice an enormous increase in the use of incense and eucharistic vestments in the celebration of high mass in London's high churches. It was stated that about one-third of all incumbents in England are now attached to this advanced school, while there are no less than twenty Protestant churches in the centre of London where confessions are heard.

The Anglo-Catholic movement, which has now assumed great importance, is an outgrowth of the Oxford movement which was started ninety years ago by Newman, Pusey and Keble. It attempts to reinstate Catholic ceremonies into the Church of England without, however, losing the nationalism of the Church or coming under the sway of the Pope.

This movement is said to be supported by more than one-third of the Anglican priests and bishops, headed by the liberal Bishop of London. About 20,000 persons of all countries attended the sessions of the convocation. Use of some of the Catholic ceremonies stunned some of the low churchmen, but the churches were nevertheless crowded, although the use of Roman customs is not permitted by the laws of the Church of England.

The congress ended on Friday evening, when a procession of mitred bishops, ministers and other delegates marched through Trafalgar Square to the Church of St. Martin's, where a service was held and a Te Deum sung.

DANCER WINS A POINT.

Miss Fontaine to See Minutes of Jury That Indicted Her.

NYACK, N. Y., July 15.—Evan Burrowes Fontaine, dancer, and her mother, have won a point in their attempt to quash a second indictment charging them with perjury in connection with Miss Fontaine's $1,000,000 breach of promise suit against Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney.

Supreme Court Justice Seeger yesterday granted a motion of Edward J. Collins, attorney for Miss Fontaine and her mother, which will permit him to inspect the minutes of the Grand Jury which returned the second indictment.

ers in the Clarkson & Co. mail fraud case, on which the brokers are under indictment, said that there was no chance for Fuller and McGee to get out on bail pending trial of the Clarkson from the contempt charge altogether. Mr. Millard said, the brokers would go right to Sing Sing to start serving their bucketing terms.

The Government, Mr. Millard said, could obtain jurisdiction over the brokers if it wished in order to have them tried on the Clarkson charge before they completed their Sing Sing terms. He said they could be brought down from Sing Sing on a court order if they should be convicted on the Clarkson charge in the Federal courts before serving out their Sing Sing terms, Mr. Millard added, the State sentence, having been imposed first, would take precedence over the Federal sentence and the brokers would go back to Sing Sing before serving their Federal terms.

Charles H. Griffiths of counsel for Fuller and McGee agreed that there was no chance for the brokers to get their freedom on bail before serving their time in Sing Sing.

"If the contempt order is dismissed," Mr. Griffiths said, "they will have to serve their State sentence and then stand trial on the mail fraud indictment in the Federal court."

Mr. Griffiths agreed also that Judge Goddard would have power to impose a new sentence on the brokers for contempt of court, but said that the court would have to find that the brokers had been able to produce the papers at the time they were ordered to do so and that they had wilfully failed. Such a sentence would be reviewable on the facts before the Circuit Court of Appeals, he said.

Mr. Griffiths said that he could not comment on the intimations that the package returned to Judge Goddard did not contain all the missing papers, as he had no knowledge of the package or what it contained. His law partner, Harold A. Content, said on Saturday that all the lawyers knew about the return of the papers was that a man giving the name of "Bascom" telephoned on July 9 and said that the missing papers had been sent to Judge Goddard from the Western Union office at Broadway and Forty-first Street.

CUBS' 4 IN TENTH BEAT GIANTS, 9-5

ALEXANDER IS EFFECTIVE

Holds Champions Safe in the Pinches While Cubs Bat Three Pitchers.

One savage, shattering blow from the bat of Barney Friberg of the Cubs sent the Giants reeling down to defeat in the tenth inning of yesterday's game at the Polo Grounds. It was a sure enough home run to the fence in deep left centre, that drive, and coming, as it did come, with three runners on the bases, it left the champions hanging on the ropes and sent 18,000 fans home out of joint with the universe. Four runs, any way you counted them, filed across the plate as the result of Friberg's smash and the Giants were beaten decisively and beyond recall, 9 to 5.

All that the champions could do after that was to take one despairing fling at the tantalizing shoots of one Grover Cleveland Alexander and then retire as gracefully as possible to the clubhouse. McGraw's team knew it was beaten before it came to bat in the final half of the tenth. Give Aleck the Great a four-run advantage with only three runners to retire and then try and beat him. Make it cloudy, as it was yesterday, giving him a dark background for his fast ball, and the old fellow is as sure to win as anything is sure in baseball.

The Giants hit him freely enough yesterday, getting fourteen safe blows, but he was best when his need was direst and he was still in there at the finish, while Watson, Ryan and Jonnard shared the pitching burden for New York. Alexander was Old Man Defense himself when danger threatened, and that was most of the time. In the fifth he filled the bases with no one out and then made Young and Groh lift easy flies to the infield. Frankie Frisch was too much for him and slapped a single to right, scoring two, but Aleck took a hitch at his belt and forced the dangerous Meusel to fly to Heathcote.

Again in the sixth trouble dogged his trail, but this time he escaped scot free. Stengel beat out a hit over second base in spite of a sparkling stop by Grantham and on the hit and run Kelly poked a single into right which sent Stengel to third. There was no one out and Manager Bill Killifer signaled violently for Nick Dunovich to start warming up in left.

Alexander Not Worried.

It semed that all of the Cubs but Aleck were worried. He was right and the rest were wrong. Young Travis Jackson rolled straight to Hollocher and Stengel was run down between third and home. Pancho Snyder forced Jackson at second and a double play would have been completed at first, but Elliott dropped the ball, Kelly reaching third.

This break might have disconcerted a younger pitcher, but it was all one with Aleck. He simply concentrated on the task of disposing of Ryan and induced the New York pitcher to tap to Grantham for a third and easy out at first. So it was throughout the game. Alexander wasn't perfect, but he was always good enough.

John Watson, on the other hand, who started against Aleck in the box, faded out of the picture after the sixth inning. After pitching three well-nigh perfect innings Watson wavered in the fourth when the Cubs scored their first run and then in the fifth he went down for the third time after the invaders had chalked up two more.

Through these early innings it was a give and take battle, with the home boys getting off to a one-run advantage in the opening frame, losing it in the fourth and then spending the remainder of the afternoon catching up with the Bruins, but never passing them again.

The champions went right after Aleck in the first inning and it looked as if they might dispose of him without ceremony. Young got a single over second. Groh grounded to Friberg and Young was forced at second, but in attempting to double Heinie at first Grantham threw past Elliott and Groh kept right on to second base. Friberg turned a neat play on Frisch's slow roller, tossing the flying Fordham flash out at first by a nod. Groh reached third on the out.

Meusel Scores Groh.

Then Irish Meusel lined a single to centre and Groh counted. Stengel smacked a single to left and to add to Alexander's misery Hack Miller fumbled the ball, Meusel keeping right on to third. It was apparent that the Cubs were on the run and McGraw, like the good general he is, determined to push his advantage. He ordered a double steal, but it went awry, Meusel being retired at the plate, O'Farrell to Grantham to O'Farrell again. The Giants were out, but they had one run.

The Cubs pulled up alongside in the fourth. Charley Hollocher began it with a line single over Jackson's head. Grantham hit one which bounded off Watson's glove into left field. Hollocher attempted to reach third on the hit, but Meusel's perfect throw to Groh caught him five feet from his goal. Grantham, however, made second on the out. O'Farrell grounded sharply to short and Jackson threw far over Kelly's head, permitting Grantham to tally and O'Farrell to get to second. Friberg and Miller then lifted harmless flies, ending the inning.

The fifth was exciting and productive for both teams. The Cubs went into the lead in their half with a brace of runs, but the champions took them right back again when their turn came. Cliff Heathcote's double, Elliott's single to centre, and another one-base blow by Hollocher served to put the Cubs in front. But Jackson's Texas leaguer, Gowdy's single to deep short, a pass to O'Connell and Frisch's timely shot to right quickly nullified the advantage.

Ace Elliott, first man to face Rosey Ryan in the seventh, jarred that young pitcher's confidence and the fans as well with a home run into the right field stands. Once more the Chicago clan had the edge and when it picked up another marker in the eighth on Friberg's double and a better-not-talk-about muff of Callaghan's fly by Irish Meusel the affair seemed settled. But McGraw's team takes a long time to acknowledge defeat.

Giants Tie Score in Eighth.

It came right back in the home half of the eighth and again knotted the count. Stengel and Kelly singled and advanced on Jackson's grounder to Elliott. Friberg snapped up Snyder's hot bounder, but with the play at the plate staring him in the face he threw to first and Stengel scored. Bentley batted for Ryan and dropped a Texas league single on the left field foul line which sent Kelly over with the tying run.

That was all until the tenth. Hollocher opened that fateful frame with a single. Grantham walked. O'Farrell beat out a bunt down the third base line and then Friberg hit one like Firpo hit Willard and the ball game was over.

Caught at the Plate.

Casey Stengel was the only Giant to strike out. That is, Umpire Moran called him out on strikes in the ninth. Casey didn't like that. He kicked before he left the plate and after he got back to the bench. "Fine work, Moran," he said from the Giants' dugout. Uncle Charley replied: "That will be all, Casey." And that was all.

The Cubs were 100 per cent. efficient in the seventh. They got one hit and counted one run. The hit was Elliott's homer into the right field stands.

That McGraw hasn't lost confidence in young O'Connell was shown in the fifth when the manager sent the California youth in to pinch hit at a tight place. Jimmy drew a pass, which is better than the general average for a pinch hitter.

The crowd was not so large, or so enthusiastic as it might have been. Threatening weather undoubtedly kept many away, but there wasn't any water to dampen the enthusiasm.

Zander the Great has now won twelve games and lost six. Not bad for an old fellow who has been counted out at the beginning of, at least, the last half-dozen seasons.

Two games today and the champions could use both of them. What with the Pirates winning yesterday and the Reds gaining through idleness.

Before the first game today Hughie Jennings will be presented with a police badge from his friends on the New Rochelle police force. Police Commissioner Enright is scheduled to make the presentation and the Police Boys' Band will also take part in the ceremony.

TIGERS OVERWHELM SENATORS, 10 TO 2

Pillette Pitches Airtight Ball Until Closing Innings—Jones Also Stars.

DETROIT, Mich., July 15.—Herman Pillette pitched air-tight ball until the closing innings of today's game and the Detroit Tigers easily defeated the Washington Senators, 10 to 2. Bobby Jones, who has been on the cripple list several weeks, was back in the Tiger line-up at third base and contributed several brilliant plays. Peckinpaugh handled eleven hard chances without an error.

YANKS SCORE THREE IN FIRST AND WIN

COVELESKIE BATTED OUT

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, July 15.—Young Waite Hoyt, the blond boy wonder from Brooklyn, registered his third consecutive victory of the Yankees' tour of the West this afternoon when he defeated the Indians, 4 to 2, in the third game of a series of six. The handsome right-hander was a bit unsteady in the first three innings, but settled down thereafter and seemed to improve as the game progressed.

Eight hits, for a total of twelve bases, were made off his delivery, and six of them were recorded in the first four innings. He issued two passes in the fifth, but in the last four rounds only two hostile batters reached first—O'Neill on a single to right after two were out in the seventh and Pinch Hitter Larry Gardner on a double to right with one out in the ninth.

Stanislaus Coveleskie, the Polish spitball dispenser, started on the mound for the Indians, but was driven to cover in the second inning. Six of the Yankee hits and all of their four runs were made off him. James A. Boone, a right-hander, followed him to the mound and let the champions down with four hits and no runs in the 5 1-3 innings he pitched. He was taken out for a pinch-hitter in the seventh and Jim Joe Edwards, a burly left-hander, finished the game for the tribe.

Ruth Draws Two Walks.

George Herman Ruth helped his batting average by making one hit—a single to left—in two official times at bat. He also drew two passes, one in the second and another in the seventh and now has an even hundred complimentary trips to first to his credit.

Coveleskie was not in his usual good form and was batted out of the box in the second inning. With one out in the first, Dugan singled to right and Ruth lined a hit over Sewell's head. Pipp batted into a force-out at second, but Smith smashed a double to right and Ward singled to centre, three runs resulting. Scott sent a dangerous looking fly into left field, but Jamieson made a pretty play and grabbed it for the third out.

Sewell's double to right and successive infield outs gave the Indians one run in their half of this inning. Brower then singled to left and O'Neill drew a pass, but Ward made a tidy stop on Boone's hard grounder and a force-out at second retired the side. Ward drew a pass and Scott lined a single to centre with only one out in the third, but Bengough grounded to Wambsganss and a sparkling double play ended the half.

Double Plays Stop Indians.

Jamieson tripled to left at the start of the Indians' half and scored a moment later on Summa's single to left. Speaker filed to Witt, however, and Sewell's grounder to Pipp started a double play on which the pickler made the initial assist and the final putout. Another Indian threat was ruined by another double play in the fifth, after passes to O'Neill and Jamieson had put two runners on the lines with only one out.

Myatt batted for Boone in the seventh, and in the following round Jim Joe Edwards assumed the pitching burden for the tribe. He retired the first five men he pitched to, and following Witt's single to centre with two out in the ninth, Dugan sent an easy fly to Jamieson. Gardner batted for Wamby after Sewell had filed to Witt in the second half and doubled off the right field screen. Lutzke filed to Witt, however, and Brower grounded to Ward for the final out.

TO BOX FOR TITLE CHANCE.

White and Mitchell Seek Opportunity for Bout Here Wednesday.

A match for the world's lightweight championship is the bait being held out to the winner of the fifteen-round bout between Charlie White of Chicago and Ritchie Mitchell of Milwaukee, which will be held Wednesday night at the New York Velodrome. Promoter Tex Rickard yesterday announced he had started negotiations for a match between the winner of this bout and the winner of the Benny Leonard-Lew Tendler scrap. Rickard plans to hold his proposed lightweight championship bout on a date in August.

The Velodrome bout is attracting much interest and the indications are that a large crowd will see the battle. White and Mitchell furnished a hurricane encounter last Winter in a bout at Madison Square Garden. White has enlisted the aid of Trainer Jimmy De Forest, and has established training quarters at De Forest's gymnasium in Allenhurst, N. J.

The semi-final bout of twelve rounds promises plenty of action. Earl Duane and Phil Rosenberg, rival Bronx bantamweights, will be the principals. A six-round bout and a four-round contest complete the card.

Schang Out for Ten Days; Meusel's Arm to Be Examined

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, July 15.—Two distinguished cripples practiced with the Yanks this afternoon, Meusel for the second time since the series at St. Louis, and Catcher Wallie Schang, who joined the club this morning for the first time in several weeks. Schang announced that he was ready to catch "whenever called upon," but Manager Miller Huggins said he would be surprised if Schang was fit for regular duty in less than ten days or two weeks.

"I am sending him home to Philadelphia tomorrow night," said Huggins. "He may be as fit as he thinks he is, but we don't exactly need him, and an extra week of rest won't hurt him any. He will rejoin the club when we get to Philadelphia on July 24." Huggins also announced that Meusel will go to Youngstown, O., tomorrow to have his ailing arm examined by "Bonesetter" Reese.

ATHLETICS DEFEAT WHITE SOX, 3 TO 1

Rommel's Fine Pitching and Timely Hit by Hauser Win for Philadelphia.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Great pitching by Ed Rommel, coupled with a timely Texas League single behind second base by Hauser, put the Philadelphia Athletics out in front and enabled them to defeat the Chicago White Sox today by a score of 3 to 1.

Roxy Snipes, outfielder, from the University of South Carolina, reported to Manager Gleason of the White Sox today.

Pirates' Winning Rally Started by Barnhart, Who Also Hits Homer in Seventh.

Earl Hamilton had the better of Dutch Ruether in a duel between southpaws, and as a result Pittsburgh gained a 3 to 2 decision over Brooklyn before 12,000 persons at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon. The game was not over until the ninth, and it was Grimm who drove a single through McCarren that brought in Barnhart with the run that decided the battle.

The pitching was tight on both sides and it was only the proverbial breaks that helped either team to score. In the first six innings only six hits were made, and they were evenly divided; but during that time the Robins managed to bunch two with a sacrifice fly for the first run of the game. This happened in the fifth inning. Only twenty-one men faced Hamilton in the six innings, while Ruether permitted only twenty-two. It was in the seventh, however, that the first big break turned against the Robins, and it was Barnhart who started the trouble with a homer into the left field bleachers. And it also was Barnhart who started the rally and tallied the run that beat the Robins in the ninth. Brooklyn had a number of excellent chances to break up the game but the hit in the pinch was not there.

Maranville opened the game by beating out a hit down the third-base line. Two force plays followed, and Barnhart ended the inning with a fly to Bert Griffith. High got the first hit for the Robins in the third after one was out, but Ruether and Neis were unable to offer any assistance. The rally in this inning was stopped when Bigbee raced in from deep left and caught Neis's fly back of second base with one hand. It was the most thrilling play of the afternoon.

Both teams went out in order in the fourth, but in the fifth the Pirates got away to a great start when with one out Grimm tripled to right, which hit the fence in the bull-pen and bounded away from Griffith. Rawlings, however, hit to McCarren and Grimm was caught at the plate. Gooch then filed to Griffith. In the Robins's half of the fifth Bailey opened by grounding to Traynor. Taylor singled and went to third on McCarren's safe drive to centre. High then sent a sacrifice fly to Bigbee, scoring Taylor.

There was no scoring in the sixth, but the Pirates got busy in the seventh. Barnhart started by dropping a homer into the bleachers, the ball striking the turf and bouncing into the seats. Traynor was easy, but Grimm caught Ruether napping and beat out a bunt. Rawlings beat out a hit to McCarren. Gooch rolled to McCarren and the latter chased Grimm back toward second, then threw to Johnston for a force play on Rawlings. With Grimm trapped between the bases, Johnston, in throwing to McCarren, struck Grimm on the back and the ball rolled to the left-field stands, Grimm scoring easily. Hamilton ended the rally by striking out.

With two out in the Robins's half of the seventh, Taylor tripled but was left on third base when McCarren grounded to Traynor. The Pirates went out in order in the eighth, but the Robins came back and tied the score. High and Ruether singled, and after Neis fouled to Gooch, Johnston walked. Bailey sent an easy grounder to second which Rawlings fumbled, and High scored. The bases were still filled but it was here that neither Fournier nor Griffith could deliver the needed punch.

In the ninth Barnhart and Traynor opened with singles. Grimm then sent a grounder down the third-base line. It rolled between McCarren's legs. It was credited as a hit, and on the play Barnhart raced home with the winning run. The Robins gave the fans a little hope in their half of the ninth. With Taylor out, DeBerry batted for McCarren and walked. French ran for DeBerry, but was forced at second by High. Hargreaves, batting for Ruether, was retired, Rawlings to Fournier, for the final out.

BUFFALO DEFEATS NEWARK BY 13 TO 4

Webb, Brainard and Zeitman Make Homers—Second Game Halted by Rain.

BUFFALO, July 15.—The Buffalo Bisons won the first half of today's intended double header from the Newark Bears by 13 to 4, and were on the way to victory in the second when heavy rain halted the contest at the start of the third inning. Home runs by Webb, Brainard and Zeitman were among the many hits registered in the first game.

FIRPO TO START ON BOXING TOUR

South American Will Leave Today—DeForest Denies Reports of Break.

Pending the outcome of negotiations for his proposed match against Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight title, Luis Angel Firpo, South American heavyweight, will go on an exhibition tour, beginning today. The Argentine giant, according to Jimmy DeForest, his trainer, will leave today on a tour which will take him to Boston, Grand Rapids, Mich.; part of Canada and close at Columbus, Ohio. The tour will end on July 30, according to DeForest, after which Firpo will return here prepared to direct his attention to ring business.

DeForest yesterday denied reports that there was friction between himself and Firpo. Following statements made by DeForest on Saturday in which he said Firpo is not yet ready for a title bout with Dempsey, reports were circulated to the effect that the trainer and boxer had come to a parting of the ways for the second time. The last time Firpo and DeForest were said to have agreed to disagree was following the South American's battle with Jack McAuliffe 2d. This difficulty, however, was ironed out and the relationship renewed between boxer and adviser. When the reports of another "break" were brought to his attention, DeForest professed ignorance of any disagreement between himself and Firpo.

"If we have split, it is news to me," said DeForest at his home in Allenhurst, N. J. "I haven't heard from Firpo today, but I was talking with him yesterday and everything was all right then. He was down to my place with his interpreter and everything was pleasant between us. He wanted me to join him on his exhibition tour which starts tomorrow, but I told him I couldn't because I had agreed to train Charlie White for his match Wednesday night against Richie Mitchell. He told me he expected to return here about Aug. 1, and, so far as I know we are to resume our relations then."

Efforts to communicate with Firpo were unsuccessful.

The situation with regard to negotiations for a world's heavyweight championship bout was unchanged yesterday. Promoter Tex Rickard, who practically has the consent of Jack Kearns to a match between Dempsey and Firpo, is expected to confer with Kearns this afternoon at 3 o'clock, when articles for the proposed bout may be signed. Rickard indicated that he would have something definite to announce following this afternoon's meeting with Kearns.

LEONARD AND TENDLER MAY SET NEW RECORD

Expected They Will Establish Receipts Mark for Lightweight Boxing Bout.

A new record in receipts for a world's lightweight championship bout is expected to be made at the Yankee Stadium on July 23, according to Matchmaker Jimmy Johnston, when Benny Leonard defends his title against Lew Tendler, Philadelphia southpaw. Johnston yesterday announced that in excess of $200,000 already has been collected for tickets to the bout. This sum represents $100,000 in direct sales from the Cromwell A. C., under whose auspices the bout will be conducted, and the distribution of tickets through various agencies. Johnston added that he expected a gate of between $300,000 and $400,000 when the lightweights square off.

Leonard and Tendler are proceeding with their training, unconcerned over the financial side of the battle. The boxers let their respective managers worry about money details, giving their undivided attention to training for whatever business develops inside the ropes. Leonard is doing his preparatory work at Tannersville, N. Y. Every convenience has been provided for Leonard, even to the employment of a private chef to prepare his meals. The champion yesterday entered upon the closing week of his preparation, confident that he will have little difficulty getting down to the 135-pound lightweight limit.

WALKER WILL DEFEND CHAMPIONSHIP TONIGHT

Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, will defend his title tonight, weather permitting, in the open-air arena of the Broad A. C., Newark. The Elizabeth boxer is scheduled to box Nate Siegel of Boston in a twelve-round no-decision bout as the feature of an attractive card. Since no official decision is permitted under the New Jersey boxing law, Walker will retain his title if the bout goes the limit. Siegel, providing he weighs in under the welterweight limit of 147 pounds, can win the title by knocking out Walker, through the commission of a foul by the champion or through Walker's failure, because of accident or other untoward event, to answer the bell for any round. The match is reported to have attracted unusual interest and a large crowd is expected.

"Spark Plug" Joey Russell and Bobby Burns of Hoboken are scheduled to clash in the semi-final of eight rounds. Bud Dempsey and Johnny Dixon also are slated for an eight-round contest. A six-round bout will bring together Tommy Watkins and Fred Herman.

Three ten-round bouts are scheduled tonight for the Broadway Exhibition Association, Brooklyn. The principals will be Sam Bienfeld vs. Izzy Schwartz, George Lavigne vs. Al Norton, and Moe Ginsberg vs. Ruby Stein.

Lew Snyder, Bayonne featherweight, and Johnny Leonard of Jersey City are scheduled to exchange blows tonight in the principal bout of twelve rounds at the Oakland A. A., an open-air arena in Jersey City.

TILDEN CONQUERS ALONSO IN FINAL

KINSEYS CAPTURE DOUBLES

Pacific Coast Brothers Beat Wesbrook and Hennessey in Straight Sets.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 15 (Associated Press).—William T. Tilden 2d of Philadelphia defeated Manuel Alonso, Spain, in the final round of the men's singles of the National Clay Court Championship Tennis Tournament today, 2—6, 8—6, 6—1, 7—5.

The Kinsey brothers, Howard and Robert, of San Francisco, defeated John Hennessey of Indianapolis and Walter Wesbrook of Detroit in the final round of the Men's National Doubles Tennis Championship in straight sets, 6—4, 13—11 and 6—3.

After having been clearly outplayed in the first set of his match with Alonso, Tilden overcame the Spaniard's advantage in the second set and ran out the match, 2—6, 8—6, 6—1, 7—5. Tilden played listlessly in the first set and his backward stroke, usually strong, was erratic and lost many critical points for him. The Castilian passed Tilden consistently when the American titleholder advanced to the net.

Tilden won his own service at the beginning of the second set only to drop three straight games to Alonso. The games went with the service until the score was 5—3, the Spaniard leading. Tilden took his own service and then broke through Alonso's for the first time in the match, evening the game score. A streak of erratic playing gave Alonso the advantage at 6—5, only to have Tilden run out the set at 8—6, in the most brilliant tennis of the afternoon. Four placement aces from various positions in the court won the turning game, the twelfth, which brought the count to six-all. By a variety of forehand and backhand drives, Tilden won the next two games.

Point score of the second set:

Tilden	5	3	4	1	4	5	4	0	4	8	1	4	43
Alonso	3	5	6	4	2	7	2	4	2	6	4	1	46

Alonso was plainly fatigued by his exertions in the humid, sultry atmosphere and was an easy victim for Tilden at the top of his game in the third set. Tilden drove many beautiful placements to the corners of the court for decisive points.

Alonso came back after the intermission for his last stand. He took the first two games, but Tilden resumed his aggressive play and evened the count at 2-all. Alonso then extended himself and gained the next at a 4—2 advantage. Tilden suddenly changed his pace in the height of the struggle and his easy chops disconcerted the Spaniard and the game score was tied. Alonso won the ninth game on four errors by Tilden, but the tall Philadelphian regained control and speedily ran out the remaining three games for the match.

The play was marked by Tilden adapting his usually aggressive game to Alonso's style. After discovering that smashing play at the net would avail him nothing in the first set, Tilden settled down to a steady gait, now chopping, now stroking, but at all times running the Spaniard from one corner to the other while taking the game relatively easy himself.

A perceptible change of pace aided in throwing Alonso off his driving game. After Tilden had the advantage, two sets to one, he resumed his aggressive play and won handily.

The feature play of the day came in the doubles finals. Wesbrook and Hennessey, brilliant and scintillating throughout, were not quite able to adapt their play to the relentless, steady driving of the Kinseys, whose sheer consistency won the victory. The younger team made a desperate stand the second set, but were nosed out, 13—11.

David O'Loughlin of Pittsburgh lost a heartbreaking match to George Lott of Chicago, present titleholder, in the final of the junior event. Lott's victory was by scores of 6—4, 3—6, 6—3, 5—7, 6—3.

The summaries:

Men's Singles—Final Round—William T. Tilden, Philadelphia, defeated Manuel Alonso, Spain, 2—6, 8—6, 6—1, 7—5.

Men's Doubles—Final Round—Robert Kinsey and Howard Kinsey, San Francisco, defeated John Hennessey, Indianapolis, and Walter Wesbrok, Detroit, 6—4, 13—11, 6—3.

KYNASTON VICTOR IN TENNIS FINAL

Captures Kings County Title by Beating Biltchik on Brooklyn Courts.

Percy L. Kynaston of Rockville Centre, Long Island, won the Kings County lawn tennis championship yesterday when he defeated I. Biltchik in the final round of the tournament on the courts of the Ridge Club, Brooklyn, at 3—6, 8—6, 6—3, 6—3. Biltchik made a strong fight for the title and forced his opponent to play his best tennis for two sets before yielding in a battle that lasted close to two hours and furnished play of the most aggressive character.

In the first set Biltchik found himself at once and played with such good control and severity that Kynaston was unable to get the situation in hand as expected. The Long Island man was being caught out of position frequently as the other outguessed him, and was forced into error-making again and again. Only his ability to get over an unusual amount of territory enabled him to make as good a showing as he did in this opening frame. Biltchik failed to let down any in the second set and the play assumed its most interesting character. Kynaston was gradually gaining his best form and getting in good work at the net, where he maintained his position with effective volleying and smashing. Biltchik occasionally found the openings down the side lines, but Kynaston was so active in getting to the right and left of him that there were few returns that escaped his racquet. The play was very close all the way until Kynaston finally broke through for the set at 8—6.

The third frame saw a change. The Long Island man was getting stronger and stronger and working the other for the openings in the most effective fashion. Biltchik seemed to realize that he was going to be defeated and slowed up in his play, failing to get the ball back on shots that he would have returned in the first set and falling off in control and speed. Kynaston speeded up his game all the more as he sensed his opponent weakening, and before the set was half over had the situation completely in control. He earned his points in the most decisive fashion and won the set at 6—3.

The fourth set was a repetition of the third. Biltchik failed to profit by the rest period and played with little speed or aggressiveness. He was always on the defense in the face of the other's decisive attack from the net, and was aced again and again. Kynaston was winning his points almost as he pleased as the set came to a close, taking the frame for the match at 6—3.

FRENCH WIN TENNIS TIE.

Capture Two Matches From Swiss in Davis Cup Play.

LYONS, July 15 (Associated Press).—The French representatives won both singles in today's matches in the semi-final tie of the Davis Cup Elimination matches against the Swiss players. Cochet beat Aeschliman, 1-6, 6-3, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, and Blanchy beat Martin, 7-5, 6-3, 6-2.

The French hopes were nearly shattered when Switzerland was leading by two matches to one, having taken one of the singles and the doubles in previous play. Today the score stood 4-all in the fifth set of the Cochet-Aeschliman match. The last two games were very close, and the crowd gave the Swiss contender a great ovation for his plucky fight.

ANNOUNCE PAIRINGS FOR MET. OPEN GOLF

Leading Pros Among 114 Named to Start in Event Beginning Wednesday.

Although several well-known names in the golf world will be missing when the field tees off for the Metropolitan Open championship on the course of the Canoe Brook Country Club, Summit, N. J., on Wednesday, July 18, the list of 114 names entered for the event includes most of the leading players in the recent National open play at Inwood.

Bobby Cruickshank, who tied Bobby Jones for the national title but lost by two strokes in the eighteen-hole play-off, is paired with F. W. Dyer of Upper Montclair in the opening round of the Met. Walter Hagen, holder of the British open in 1922, and Joe Kirkwood, the Australian trick-shot pro, are the last scheduled to start. Long Jim Barnes, winner of the National Open in 1921, and Gene Sarazen, who captured the same title last season, are also on the list.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Yacht racing honors on the Great Lakes will be at stake when the starting gun booms here July 21 for the Chicago-Mackinac Island race, the longest fresh water race in the world. From the harbor here to Mackinac Island is a distance of 331 miles, almost the entire length of Lake Michigan. Competition this year for the Mackinac Cup will be even more spirited than during the nineteen years' history of the race, and will take on an international aspect with at least one and probably several Canadian entries.

On Near-by Links.

As a result of the elimination play in the President's Cup tourney yesterday at the Winged Foot Golf Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y., F. C. Gabriel and J. P. Proctor were the survivors of the semi-final rounds of play in the first sixteen, while F. D. Kennedy and S. D. Masden were the successful competitors in the second sixteen. These men will meet in the final round of play in their respective divisions next Sunday.

The results were as follows: First Sixteen—First Round—G. A. Weigel defeated W. F. Zimmerman, 7 and 6; F. C. Gabriel defeated T. J. McLoughlin Jr., 1 up; C. D. Robbins defeated E. A. Arnold, 5 and 4; J. P. Barry won by default; S. V. Budd defeated H. N. Sawyer, 5 and 4; J. P. Proctor defeated G. J. Frohlick, 5 and 3, and Clay McAleenan and N. M. Behr won by default.

Second Round—Gabriel defeated Weigel, 7 and 6; Robbins defeated Barry, 3 and 1; Proctor defeated Budd, 5 and 4, and Behr defeated McAleenan, 3 and 1.

Semi-Final Round—Gabriel defeated Robbins, 5 and 4, and Proctor defeated Behr, 3 and 2.

Second Sixteen—First Round—C. A. Marlian defeated J. J. McGowan, 2 up; F. D. Kennedy defeated F. M. Loughran, 5 and 3; H. A. Donahue won by default; T. Gerrity defeated C. B. Tulley, 2 up; S. D. Masden defeated G. V. McNally, 1 up, and F. W. Keegan and C. H. Griffiths won by default.

Second Round—Kennedy defeated Marlian, 5 and 4; Donahue defeated Gerrity, 1 up; Masden defeated Keegan, 2 and 1, and Griffith won by default.

The results of the sweepstakes at the Greenwich Country Club yesterday follow: Morning Round—H. C. Banks, 79, 9—70; S. Ewing, 80, 9—71; E. H. Arnold, 87, 16—71; A. De Silver, 94, 22—72; R. B. Hiscoe, 93, 21—72; S. H. Sutphin, 91, 18—73; A. J. Johnson, 82, 8—74; H. A. Lee, 95, 20—75; Sterling Martin, 85, 10—75; C. B. Ely, 88, 14—74, and J. C. Sterling, 93, 18—75.

Afternoon Round—R. C. Hiscoe, 94, 21—73; S. Bywater, 85, 12—73, and A. Mertzanoss, 94, 20—74.

A ball sweepstakes, played at the Sound Beach Golf and Country Club yesterday, resulted as follows: F. B. Donaldson, 82, 15—68; B. W. Maynard, 84, 15—69, and H. M. Fitzgerald, 85, 14—71.

The first round of match play for the President's Cup also was played. Addison Boren defeated G. C. Steeves, 3 and 2; W. R. McCarroll defeated G. L. Wilson, 9 and 8; R. A. McCosker defeated R. W. Ebling, 4 and 3, and J. S. Patterson defeated B. H. Bryon, 5 and 4.

At the Hubbards Heights Golf Club yesterday the qualifying round for the President's Cup was played. The scores were: George Chadderton, 84, 14—70; R. E. Hackett, 106, 36—70; George R. Close, 93, 22—71; J. S. Doran, 99, 27—72; M. A. Crofoot, 92, 23—69; Addison Boren, 90, 17—73; Ralph McCarter, 87, 14—73; Harry Williams, 91, 14—77; Dr. Winfield Ayres, 102, 23—79; J. Gray, 121, 36—85; P. E. Christy, 112, 26—86, and G. C. Schumacher, 107, 17—90.

Leads Sailing Craft in N. Y. A. C. Test—Nueva Defeats Other Powerboats.

BLOCK ISLAND, R. I., July 15.—Both the sail and the powerboats that took part in the annual Block Island race of the New York Athletic Club reached here without any serious mishap. In the sailing division, the time prize was won by Dr. H. L. Foss' Betty. On corrected time the winner was B. R. Sharp's Little Hope. Then came Minx, which belongs to W. H. Hoffman. The third yacht was Charles L. Weyand's Nahma. The next prize was taken by Windward, which is the property of G. W. Ford and W. E. Scofield. It was the eighteenth annual race for sailing craft.

In the power boat division, the time prize was won by C. J. Haskell's Nick. On corrected time, the winner was T. W. Brigham's Nueva. Then came Runaway, which belongs to L. M. Simmons. The third prize was taken by Kemah II, which is the property of B. A. Jimenis. It was the fourteenth annual race for screw-driven craft.

Both divisions left the starting line off Huckleberry Island in the west end of the Sound on Saturday morning. The finish line was in the West Harbor here, where the line was established by former Commodore H. M. Williams of the yachting department of the New York Athletic Club. The distance was 100 nautical miles. The power boats began to finish on Saturday night. The sailing division was not sighted until today. All hands reported good weather and a fine race.

TAURUS LEADS YACHTS IN RACE OFF BAYSIDE

Themis Is Second and Altair Third In 8-Mile Event for Star-Class Craft.

BAYSIDE, L. I., July 15.—Moving up from third position at the end of the first round to first place on the second weather leg, W. L. Inslee's Taurus, which won the championship of the Star Class on Long Island Sound last September, showed that she still has plenty of speed by crossing the finish line first today in one of the most interesting races sailed by the division so far this Summer. The course was eight miles.

Taurus, which represented the Bayside Yacht Club, defeated Themis, which belongs to Pingry and Van Winkle, also of Bayside Yacht Club, by two minutes, two seconds. Then came Altair, which is the property of E. V. Willis, Port Washington Yacht Club.

The summary:

STEINKAMPF WINS IN MIXED DOUBLES

With Mrs. Wilbourn, He Defeats Wood and Mrs. Hirsch in Westfield Final.

Special to The New York Times.

WESTFIELD, N. J., July 15.—Mrs. Percy Wilbourn and J. Harry Steinkampf won the open mixed doubles lawn tennis tournament of the Westfield Tennis Club this afternoon when they defeated Mrs. G. B. Hirsch and Charles M. Wood Jr. in the final round by the score of 6—3, 5—7, 6—3. In the semi-finals, played in the morning, the winning pair put out Miss Ruth Goss and S. G. Kelley at 6—2, 6—3, and Mrs. Hirsch and Wood eliminated Mrs. J. C. Taylor and Leonard W. Knox at 6—8, 6—2, 6—2.

BOBBY JONES WINS OPEN GOLF TITLE

pointment in the open, so had he failed in the amateur at Oakmont in 1919, for he went to the final round only to meet defeat at the hands of S. Davidson Herron, a golfer of worth but not in the Southerner's class as a shot-maker. In 1920 he passed out of the tournament at the hands of Ouimet in the semi-final round.

At St. Louis, the following year, he lost to Willie Hunter, the then British amateur champion, in the third round, and then at Brookline last year Sweetser beat him by playing the lowest round ever made on the Hub City course.

But everything was forgotten and forgiven today when he finally captured the will-o'-the-wisp-like championship.

Seldom if ever has there been quite such a dramatic ending as that which touched off today's event. Coming to the home hole, Jones and Cruickshank were all even in the matter of strokes and another 18-hole play-off on the morrow was imminent. Having gained a two-stroke lead early in the round, Cruickshank had lost it and then came to the test.

Almost Misses Drive.

Something happened to Cruickshank, for he almost missed his drive to the eighteenth hole completely, topping the ball and sending it into a patch of rough at the left of the fairway. Jones, thinking thoughts of his debacle of the day before, pushed his own drive well to the right, among the spectators that lined the course, ready for the mad rush to witness the finish. But Jones's drive, although in the rough, was perched up and within striking distance of the green, while Cruickshank had no possible chance of getting home, since his drive measured not more than 150 yards, and the distance between tee and green is nearly three times that.

There was nothing left for him now but to play the ball out through the trees and down the fairway in order to get a chance to play his third for the pin. Not knowing what Jones was about to bring off, Cruickshank put everything he had into the stroke and got a good shot under the circumstances.

It was then that Jones played the shot that sent his fame around the world wherever golf is played. Without a moment's hesitation, Jones drew No. 1 iron out of his bag, took a momentary look at the lie, glanced at the flag and swung. It was a superb shot made by a superb golfer in a superb manner. The ball flew off the face of his club, rose in the air and carried squarely on the green, 190 yards away. A tremendous shout went up as the ball struck on the green, bit its way into the turf, and brought up its journey about two club lengths away from the hole for a possible birdie three.

Cruickshank, fighter that he proved himself throughout the entire tourney, doubtless felt his heart rattling around in the bottom of his boots when he saw his opponent's ball perched up close to the hole, but he didn't show it. He walked a hundred yards down the fairway, measured the distance and then made his last dying effort. Had he been able to get the ball dead to the hole, he could still save his championship for another day. It was a 100 to 1 shot, but he played it for all it was worth. He pulled it off to the left and saw it drop into a trap just at the left of the green.

Nothing remained now but the chance of holing out from where he was. His recovery shot went several feet past the hole and after missing his putt that would have given him a five, he rushed over to Jones and put out his right hand.

The latter took it, then walked over and twice tapped his ball. When it dropped into the cup on the second tap it signalized his first great victory.

Kiltie Furnishes Music.

Then one of the greatest scenes of all was enacted. The crowd, perhaps biased in Jones's favor, since he has always been a favorite, rushed out on the green, two of Bobby's fellow-townsmen who had made the journey all the way from Atlanta to see him win his first title hoisted him on their shoulders and he was borne triumphantly toward the clubhouse. A kiltie, blowing away on the bagpipes, furnished the music. His youthful face wreathed in smiles, Jones was kept busy several minutes accepting the congratulations and plaudits of the golf-mad spectators who had witnessed one of the greatest of all play-offs.

Off in another direction, unattended, except for some of his fellow-countrymen who stood stanchly by, went the other hero of the day, Cruickshank, the stout-hearted little player whose courage, whose shotmaking had made necessary the round of rounds. One was the victor to whom the spoils belonged, the other was the defeated. But after it was all over there wasn't one, even among those who were strong for a victory for the amateur, who did not have a word of praise for the sportsmanship and the fighting qualities of the little Scotsman. There was not one who would not have given him the same ovation had he been the victor.

For the first nine holes of the match today the issue was as completely in doubt as it was until after Cruickshank's bad drive on the eighteenth and Jones's miraculous second shot. The Atlantan had taken the lead through two superb shots at the first hole, only to have Cruickshank draw level through a brilliant second shot which gave him a birdie at the second.

A great approach out of a trap extricated Jones from trouble at the third, but Cruickshank ran down a ten-foot putt for his second consecutive birdie, sending him in the lead. Then Jones, playing out of the rough to within a yard of the pin, a great shot, got another birdie and squared the account. An eighteen-foot putt, which he holed, sent Cruickshank again into the lead when Jones missed a short putt after a great recovery from a trap. Another missed putt at the sixth left Jones two strokes in arrears, but he got one of them back at the treacherous seventh, where he reached the green with a superb iron and was down in two putts, Cruickshank failing to get down a two-yarder.

The eighth hole was unimportant except for a great approach by Cruickshank, which left him with a chance for a birdie three, which he missed, his second costly failure in two consecutive holes.

Jones Even Again.

He could not score better than a 5 at the ninth and Jones, by getting his 4 was again all level, both being out in 37, exactly par.

Then both players began to show signs of cracking. After Jones had won the tenth with a 5, one stroke above par, Cruickshank visited no less than six traps. His iron shots, which had stood him in such good stead, failed him entirely.

That he was saved was only due to the fact that on several occasions Jones joined him in the hazards and once broke the sacred covenant of golf by not keeping his head down. There were several high lights on the incoming nine. One was Jones's pitch for a birdie 2 at the twelfth, another was Cruickshank's good half at the thirteenth and still another was the two second shots played to the fourteenth, especially Cruickshank's.

Then there was Cruickshank's useful putt for a four at the fifteenth, making matters even again. Jones's second at the sixteenth, where Cruickshank was trapped on the like, gave the southerner the lead once more, but he lost it at the seventeenth. There Cruickshank, after a wild hook and a trapped second, exploded his ball out of the sand to within a yard of the hole and he scrambled his par four, his ball striking the back of the cup and barely staying in. So close was it to coming out that the Scot did a Highland Fling when it hit the bottom of the tin. Finally there was the home hole which told the story.

The card of the day:

Out—
Jones	4	4	5	4	5	4	3	4	4	37
Cruickshank	5	3	4	5	4	3	4	4	5	37
In—
Jones	5	5	2	4	5	5	4	5	4	39	76
Cruickshank	6	5	3	4	4	4	5	4	6	41	78

Stroke by Stroke Analysis.

Hole No. 1, 343 Yards, Par 4—Cruickshank had the honor and played a low ball that landed on the edge of the fairway and kicked off into a ditch from which he did well to get it out on to the fairway. His second shot was short of Jones's drive which was in the middle of the fairway leaving him an easy pitch to the green. Cruickshank's third stopped four yards to the left of the hole and after Jones pitched a beauty just two yards to the right, the Scottish pro ran past the hole and Jones tapped his ball in for a par 4, giving him an early lead. Jones 4, Cruickshank 5.

No. 2, 371 Yards, Par 4—Jones had ten yards advantage off the tee but Cruickshank discounted it with a great iron second that faded in toward the pin and stopped not more than seven feet above the hole. The amateur pushed his second off to the right and was lucky to escape the water-ditch. As it was he was just on the edge. Jones had a hard approach putt and his ball traveled off to the right, leaving him a yard to hole for his par but he got it after Cruickshank ran down his putt for a birdie 3, putting him all square. As Cruickshank holed out the crowd gave a cheer and he raised his hand in protest, pointing to Jones who still had a putt to make. He dropped it for a par. Cruickshank 3, Jones 4.

No. 3, 532 Yards, Par 5—Cruickshank was dangerously near the rough on the right on his tee shot and Jones's ball was again far ahead. The pro then played a beautiful cleek shot that faded in toward the green but stopped ten yards short. Jones took a brassie and hooked it into a trap on the left, short of the green from where he made a beautiful recovery, his ball stopping only ten feet past the hole. Cruickshank's chip was off the line and about as far away as Jones's. The Southerner was away and putted short after which Cruickshank ran down his second consecutive birdie. Cruickshank 4, Jones 5.

No. 4, [illegible] Yards, Par 5—Cruickshank's drive was in the rough to the right and Jones's ball trickled off the fairway into the rough on the opposite side of the fairway. Both had hard seconds left but Cruickshank got away a superb wooden shot that ended its journey only ten yards short of the green. Jones hooked his second to the rough to the right of green but made a great all-saving approach to within a yard and got down his putt for a birdie 4. Cruickshank's third was several yards past and his next was half a foot away. Jones 4, Cruickshank 5.

No. 5, 519 Yards, Par 5—Jones's drive was ahead of Cruickshank's and right for the opening of the green, while the Scotchman hooked to the left. Cruickshank's iron second was just short of the green and Jones's brassie off to the right, in a trap. After Cruickshank was wide on his approach, Jones played a nicely calculated shot out of the trap to win six feet. Cruickshank then ran down an 18-footer for a birdie 4, fairly chasing the ball into the hole, after which Jones missed his putt. Cruickshank 4, Jones 5.

No. 6, 177 Yards, Par 3—Cruickshank just made the green with his iron and Jones was not as well off. Both balls were about thirty-five feet away from the hole. Jones overran his try for a 3 by a foot and then missed the putt. Cruickshank was a little off the line but close enough for an easy par, putting him two strokes in the lead. Cruickshank 3, Jones 4.

No. 7, 223 Yards, Par 3—Cruickshank took no chances of going out of bounds and played short of the green, while Jones went for it and reached it. After chipping up to within a couple of club lengths of the hole, Cruickshank's putt for a 3 just grazed past the hole. Jones, from a distance of twenty feet, nearly ran down his 2. Jones 3, Cruickshank 4.

No. 8, 418 Yards, Par 4—Jones again passed Cruickshank off the tee, but the latter played a beautiful shot to within five feet of the hole, while Jones was short of the green and in the short rough off to the left. After chipping up close to the hole, Jones sank his putt for a 4, but Cruickshank missed his short one. He didn't hit the ball firmly and it stopped on the lip. Jones 4, Cruickshank 4.

No. 9, 380 Yards, Par 4—Jones hooked his tee shot to the rough at the left, while Cruickshank played a low ball that grazed the tree and ended up in a fine position for his pitch to the treacherous green. He overplayed his next, the ball landing on the green and bouncing over the mounds at the back. Jones's second stopped twelve feet from the hole, leaving him an easy putt for a birdie. Cruickshank chipped back to a yard—a great shot—but his try for a par 4 was just a hair's breadth off the line. Jones was unable to run down his 3, taking a 4. Jones 4, Cruickshank 5.

Both Show Strain.

No. 10, 295 Yards, Par 4—Both played the hole badly, and showed the first signs of the strain they were under. Jones hooked to a trap on the left, while Cruickshank was in the short rough on the right. Cruickshank's second was a bad shot that went over the green and in among the spectators. Jones, with a hard shot left, played the ball beautifully, but it struck the branches of a tree and dropped back into the rough. He played his third against a mound, and was just on the edge, after which Cruickshank again chipped into the rough on the opposite side of the green. He then ran two yards past, and was off the line on his fifth. Jones narrowly missed his 4 after all his trouble. Jones 5, Cruickshank 6.

No. 11, 421 Yards, Par 4—The two drives were about even, one on the left and the other on the right. After Cruickshank played his second into a trap at the left of the green, Jones did likewise, and neither got close on their recoveries, Jones overplaying and Cruickshank just getting on the green with his explosion shot. The latter had to drop a two-yarder for his 5. Jones 5, Cruickshank 5.

No. 12, 108 Yards, Par 3—Jones played a beautiful pitch to within less than a yard while Cruickshank was off to the left of the hole. At that he narrowly missed running down the putt, the ball being only a few inches off the line. Jones sank his, giving him a two-stroke lead. Jones 2, Cruickshank 3.

No. 13, 420 Yards, Par 4—Cruickshank followed Jones's great drive with a tee shot that just grazed the line of trees between the two fairways. Cruickshank played his next into a trap at the right of the green, while Jones played his second just on the edge. Cruickshank exploded his ball out, twelve feet short, while Jones was only a foot away from a three. Nothing was gained or lost on the hole when Cruickshank sank his long putt for a useful four. Cruickshank 4, Jones 4.

No. 14, 497 Yards, Par 5—Jones was down the middle of the fairway while Cruickshank was on the right, a trifle behind. Both played magnificent seconds that reached the green, Cruickshank being not more than twenty-five feet away and Jones about twice that distance, with a mean approach to calculate. He didn't judge the line and looked a trifle perplexed when the ball skidded several feet past the hole. Cruickshank almost sank his putt for a three, while Jones took two more to hole out, leaving him only a stroke to the good. Cruickshank 4, Jones 5.

Cruickshank Evens Count.

No. 15, 173 Yards, Par 3—Cruickshank was trapped to the left. Jones's ball, after landing on the green, trickled over and stopped in the rough of the downhill slope. Cruickshank's recovery was far past the hole, but he sank a one-yarder for a 4. Jones, looking up as he made his shot, flubbed it and failed to get out, but he stuck his next up close and got the putt, which left the two on even terms. Cruickshank 4, Jones 5.

No. 16, 425 Yards, Par 4—Cruickshank was again in the rough off the tee, while Jones was down the middle. The Scot was again trapped on his second, while Jones played a great second that stopped not more than twenty-five feet from the pin. Cruickshank got well out, but was still fifteen feet short of the pin. He was again short and dropped a precious stroke to Jones, who was down in two putts. Jones 4, Cruickshank 5.

No. 17, 405 Yards, Par 4—Jones hooked to the rough between the sixteenth and seventeenth fairways, while Cruickshank got a bad pull, and was in the middle of the sixteenth fairway. He played a fine shot from there, but his ball rolled into a trap. Here was an opening, but Jones refused to take it, dropping into the same hazard. He played it out short, while Cruickshank made a great pitch to within two feet of the hole. His putt hit the back of the tin and rolled around and the little Scot nearly had nervous prostration until he saw that it stayed in. Jones nearly sank his hard uphill putt, but the ball ran a bit past, making the score all even. Cruickshank 4, Jones 5.

No. 18, 425 Yards, Par 4—Cruickshank topped his drive—the only bad tee shot that was played all day—into the rough at the left of the fairway. There was no chance for him to get home, and he played it out on to the fairway, getting a fine shot from the position he was in. Jones pushed his shot off to the right and into the rough, but it was perched up, and without a moment's hesitation he took out a No. 1 iron and played one of the greatest shots ever seen to within two yards of the pin. Cruickshank, after walking down to study the situation, pulled his mashie into a trap at the left and then ran past the hole on his recovery. After he had missed his try for a 5 he extended his right hand to Jones. The latter, with victory assured, tapped his ball up to the hole and then in. Jones 4, Cruickshank 6.

Jones a Vardon, Says Loser; New Champion Hugs His Rival

INWOOD, July 15 (Associated Press).—"Oh, but it was bonny," said Cruickshank after Jones had won the national golf title. "My, what a golfer that boy is. He's the greatest champion of them all. He is Harry Vardon at his best, or better than that. To be defeated by him is glory enough." Jones couldn't say anything. He hugged the Scotsman and wrung his hand and muttered something. It sounded like "game old boy."

Why Investors Go Wrong

They lack information.
They haven't the means to investigate for themselves.
They accept the judgment of interested persons.
They invest on hearsay, not on accurately ascertained facts about a security.

Before Investing, Investigate

Investors, Bankers and Brokers will find in The Annalist, beginning today, a weekly list of all securities issued in the preceding week in the United States and Canada. This will contain controlling data—the amount of each offering, the date of interest payments, dates of issue and maturity, the price and the yield when offered.

A Permanent Quarterly Record

In addition, The Annalist, at the beginning of each three months, starting with the issue of next October 1, will publish

A Complete Index of Security Offerings

This will contain all the data of the weekly reports supplemented by the publication of advertisements of security offerings which have appeared in The Annalist in the preceding quarter, containing other facts indicative of the strength, safety, and special features of the issues.

Unique Among Magazine Services

Miss Starace Second and Miss Riggin Third in National 100-Yard Event.

MISS BAUER SETS RECORD

Establishes World's Mark for 220-Yard Back Stroke in Open Water of 3:12 2-5 at Rye.

Totally unexpected results in the National A. A. U. 100-yard swimming championship for women and another world's record performance at backstroke swimming by Miss Sybil Bauer of the Illinois A. C. of Chicago, featured a water carnival at the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club, Rye, yesterday afternoon.

Miss Adelaide Lambert, formerly of Baltimore, but who now is affiliated with the Women's Swimming Association of this city, but competing unattached, due to A. A. U. residence rules, sprang the surprise of the day by winning the title sprint. Hardly less astonishing was the earning of second place by Miss Theresa Starace of the same club, a novice six months ago, ahead of her team mate, Miss Aileen Riggin, the favorite, who finished third. The time was slow, 1:13 2-5, due to the contestants facing a slight tide and a head wind.

Miss Bauer, swimming against time without competition in an official trial, as now permitted by A. A. U. rules, covered 220 yards using the back stroke in 3:12 2-5, and set an open water world's record for the distance. The best previous performance for the conditions was 3:17, made by Miss Bauer at Manhattan Beach last year, but not registered owing to a slight shortage of the course.

The national championship test did not prove wholly satisfactory. There was considerable inferference in the early stages, Miss Starace at one time having to stop and circle an opponent. Then, at the end, Miss Riggin was forced to the side lines and pocketed. The referee could not detect the offenders, however, so he allowed the results to stand.

Off to Good Start.

Five candidates reported for the national event, the Misses Doris O'Mara and Kathryn Brown of the Women's Swimming Association completing the quintet.

They got off well together, but the centre girls soon swerved outward and the crowding started. Miss Lambert came out of the mêlee in the lead and she held it to the end. Miss Riggin, who lost ground at first, came up strongly after the 75-yard mark, but swerving rivals forced her over and killed any chance she may have had to win. Miss Lambert struck the line nearly three yards ahead of Miss Starace, who just nosed out Miss Riggin.

The Metropolitan junior 220-yard free-style championship for women, another feature of the meet, was decided over a 110-yard course and four girls of the Women's Swimming Association took part. Little Ethel Ursprung, 12 years old, set the pace up to 150 yards, but there Miss Maude McFarlane pressed to the fore and sped on to victory in 3:14 2-5. Miss Ursprung was runner up, with Miss Ruth Morgan, 13, a close third. Miss Isabelle Grandefeld, the other contender, finished well up.

A 220-yard invitation free-style handicap for men required two heats and resulted in a stirring final. Leeming Jelliffe of the New York A. C. and Victor Kiffe of the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A., the scratch men, reached the line a couple of feet apart, Jelliffe leading, with Alfred Brown, who had a handicap of 20 seconds, almost abreast of Kiffe and third. The time was 2:45 3-5.

Miss Brown Scores.

Miss Kathryn Brown of the Women's Swimming Association, won a fancy diving handicap from the ten-foot springboard with an allowance of 18 points and a total of 102.8 points. Miss Agnes Geraghty captured a 100-yard handicap swim for members of the Women's Swimming Association in the actual time of 1:28 2-5.

The summaries:

220-Yard Swim (Metropolitan A. A. U. Junior Championship)—Won by Miss Maud McFarlane, W. S. A., New York; Miss Ethel Ursprung, W. S. A., New York, second; Miss Ruth Morgan, W. S. A., New York, third. Time—3:14 2-5.

220-Yard Back-Stroke Swim (trial for record against time)—Miss Sybil Bauer, Illinois A. C., Chicago. Time—3:12 2-5.

110-Yard Swim for Members of the W. S. A. (Handicap)—Won by Miss Agnes Geraghty (16 seconds); Miss Lillian Stoddard (6 seconds), second; Miss Evelyn Sommers (12 seconds), third. Time—1:28 2-5.

Fancy Diving, 10-Foot Springboard (Handicap)—Won by Miss Kathryn Brown, W. S. A., New York (18 points), 102.8 points; Miss Aileen Riggin, W. S. A., New York (scratch), 101.2 points, second; Miss Alma Mann, unattached (11 points), 100.7 points, third.

220-Yard Swim for Men (Handicap)—Won by Leeming Jelliffe, New York A. C. (scratch); Victor Kiffe, Central Y. M. C. A., Brooklyn (scratch), second; Alfred Brown, Central Y. M. C. A., Brooklyn (20 seconds), third. Time—2:45 3-5.

Referee—Herman Obertubbesing, Metropolitan A. A. U.

George Preston reached the semi-final round of the Long Island lawn tennis championship yesterday when he defeated Armand L. Bruneau, champion of the Terrace Club, in the fourth round of the tournament on the courts of the Woodmere Club, Woodmere, L. I. The match furnished considerable of an upset, for Bruneau was looked upon as an almost sure winner. The Brooklyn man won the first set in the most decisive fashion at love, and there seemed to be no reason for looking for anything but a decisive victory for him. But Preston, who had put up poor tennis in the first set, improved greatly in the second set, and from then on outplayed Bruneau, outsteadying him from the base line and more than holding his own in the exchanges from short range.

He took the second set at 6—3 and the third at 6—4. Bruneau's forehand drive, usually his most effective weapon, failed him after the first frame. Again and again he hit outside of the lines or into the net, seeming to have lost all range of the boundaries. It was his numerous errors, many of them on set-ups when he had a clear court before him, that cost him the match, more than anything else.

The summaries:

First Round—George Witlock defeated John Henriques, 6—3, 6—3; Carl Schuster defeated Paul McHugh, 4—6, 6—4, 7—5.

Second Round—Jerry Lang defeated H. Rees, 6—1, 6—4; Larry Slesinger defeated Earl C. Backe, 8—6, 8—6; George C. Whitlock defeated George Groesbeck, 6—3, 6—2; Carl Schuster defeated James Jacobson, 11—9, 6—3; R. H. Goodwin won from J. L. Verstraten by default; Jack Rothstein defeated Charles Stone Jr., 6—1, 6—0; Compton Rees defeated H. Epstein, 6—4, 3—6, 6—4; Donald Lay defeated G. H. Cox, 6—1, 6—3.

Third Round—Larry Slesinger defeated Clifford Hollander, 6—2, 6—4; Donald Lay defeated Compton Rees, 6—0, 6—0; George Preston defeated Jack Rothstein, 6—2, 8—6; Armand L. Bruneau defeated J. L. Verstraten, 6—0, 6—4; Jerry Lang defeated J. G. Neely, 6—3, 6—1.

GOLF

Not in recent years has a national open golf championship produced quite so many thrills as that which resulted in a victory for the young amateur, Robert T. Jones of Atlanta, Ga., after a play-off with Bobby Cruickshank, the recent convert from amateur ranks into professional circles. With all the nation's stars entered, it was generally conceded in advance that in view of the fact the play was to be over the Inwood Country Club course, the first real championship test that the tournament has had in several years, one of the great lights would be the ultimate winner.

Yet the so-called topnotchers of the professional world failed. Sarazen, the 1922 winner; Hagen, twice winner in the American and once in the British; MacDonald Smith, Kirkwood, Barnes, Hutchison—all went down before the rush of newcomers. The great majority of those who finished well up in the list were players who had not made more than a slight impression on the tablets of golf. That, incidentally, was one of the significant things about the 1923 championship. It brought to light the fact that there are in America at the present time many youngsters who are forging ahead in dashing style and who will be able to take the places of those who have held the foreground in the past.

Throughout the tournament Jones and Cruickshank, victor and vanquished, played golf of the highest order. In a way, the winning of the title by an amateur will prove a boon, for it will serve to spur the pros to greater efforts. In another way it is too bad that Cruickshank did not win, for, being a pro, he had everything to win. The title would have brought him great financial reward; for Jones it brought nothing except fame. Jones's victory, however, is a great thing for college golf. Being a freshman law student at Harvard, Jones now joins Sweetser of Yale in bringing high honors to university golf.

The Inwood Country Club, host to the tournament, did splendidly in its conduct of the event. The course was in better shape than any other championship course has ever been in. Faced with the difficult task of handling galleries as large as have ever been seen at any championship, the officials did their work well and efficiently. Especial credit must be given to A. T. Steiner, the General Chairman; Stanley Weil, who had the arduous task of handling the galleries, and to Harry Rascovar of the Press Committee.

SWIMMING

Early predictions for the men's national A. A. U. outdoor swimming championships of 1923 have been upset completely by recent developments. Now the keenest experts are frankly at sea concerning the probable outcome of the title tests, which will be decided within the next two months.

The sudden breakdown of John Weissmuller, peerless waterman of the Illinois A. C., who was expected to win all the free style events, is one of the causes of the altered situation. While latest reports from Chicago state that he is suffering from a complication of influenza and indigestion, not valvular heart disorder, as announced last week, it may be doubted if he will recover in time to take part in most, or any, of the Summer classics.

On the other hand, Duke Kahanamoku, famous Hawaiian sprinter, at present a resident of Los Angeles, has loomed up as an unexpected candidate. When the season opened there was no hint that he would prove a likely bidder for laurels. But lately he has displayed greater speed than ever he did. He is credited with turning 100 yards in competition in 0:52 3-5 at the Los Angeles A. C., and this feat proclaims him to be a dengerous rival to any man in the field.

Surprising results also have featured some important water carnivals. At the launching of outdoor activities Peter Weissmuller, young brother to John, was rated second only to the latter as a sprint swimmer. Lately at Newark, however, Peter was forced to his limit to nose out at 100 meters Harry Lewis of the Central Y. M. C. A., Brooklyn. Then Lewis swam a virtual dead heat at this distance with Harold Florence of the Boys' Club, and was beaten at 100 yards by Ranger Mills of the New York A. C., so there is no telling what may happen in the test of supremacy, though Kahanamoku will reign favorite if John Weissmuller is absent, as probable.

Prospects for the middle and long distance championships have been changed by the return to racing of two noted stars believed to have retired for good. They are Thomas Blake of the Los Angeles A. C. and Eugene Bolden of the Illinois A. C., present and former holders of the national ten-mile crown and scorers in other title events. If these crack performers live up to their best work of the past they will take a deal of beating.

Meanwhile, there is considerable speculation in regard to the chances of Richard Howell, the great all-around swimmer of Chicago, who recently transferred his membership from the Illinois A. C. to the Chicago A. A. Due to his remarkable indoor achievements of last Winter Howell appeared to be the logical favorite for the championships from 880 yards upward. This Summer, however, he has not fulfilled the promise of his indoor exploits and many are wondering whether he will show top form in the coming tests. It is rumored, too, that Norman Ross of the Illinois A. C., America's foremost swimmer until Weissmuller's advent, is training for the title fixtures and making very fast times at practice, so he must be held a possible factor.

All in all, there is ample room for conjecture, and this year's outdoor championships at present defy predictions.

BASEBALL

Competition is said to be the life of trade. It is also the life of baseball and lack of it in the two big league races just now is beginning to be felt at the turnstiles. Particularly is this true in the American League, where the Yankees are making a runaway race of it.

A comparison of the financial statements issued recently by the presidents of the two major leagues shows that the American League enjoyed the greater prosperity during the first half of the season. The eight teams in the junior organization had played to more than 447,000 persons at the time of its mid-season meeting as against 300,000 in the National. This difference can be accounted for by the opening of the new Yankee Stadium and the fact that the race during the first half of the season was closer in the American than it was in the senior circuit.

But since the Yankees' present invasion of the West began the situation has been reversed. The New York American League Club now enjoys a far more commanding lead than do the Giants. The pennant chase in President Ban Johnson's organization seems to be pretty well settled and this cannot help but detract from the interest even here in New York. Of course, the unexpected may happen, as it frequently does in baseball, and one or more of the other American League teams strike a winning stride which will bring it in hailing distance of the New York team by the first of October, but even so, that will not increase the crowds during the next two months.

Thus, with the Giants faltering slightly and Cincinnati and Pittsburgh staying well up in the National League race that organization has a golden opportunity to catch up with the American in the matter of attendance before the season ends. If the race in the National gets close and stays that way until the end of the season with three or more teams having a chance to win the pennant, it is almost a certainty that the older league will play to more fans in the final half of the season than the rival organization.

The Giants' defeat at the hands of the Cubs yesterday reduced their lead to three and one-half games over the Reds and Pittsburgh gained a full game on the league leaders as the result of yesterday's games. Thus, the competition in President Heydler's league is growing keener and larger crowds are sure to result. But the Yankees go on winning, while the other American League clubs are killing each other off, and as the gap between the first and second place teams widens the interest wanes. Anything may happen in baseball and while all New York fans would be glad to see the American League pennant brought to the new stadium, there are many who would like to see Huggins's team have to fight for its honors.

TENNIS

The character of the entry in the thirteenth national clay court tennis championship, held during the past week at the Woodstock Country Club, Indianapolis, indicates that the time is not far distant when this tournament will rank as one of the outstanding tennis events of the season. It is only of late that much attention has been devoted to the clay court championship. In spite of the fact that the play in this country is largely on clay and not on turf, little significance is attached to the clay court events. The national grass court championship is the big event of the season, completely overshadowing the play at Indianapolis.

The presence in the tournament of William T. Tilden 2d, the champion; Manuel Alonso of Spain and Wallace F. Johnson of Philadelphia, the fifth ranking player in the country, elevated the clay court championship this year to a position of greater importance than ever before has been attached to it. Tilden has competed in the event before, but this year he was responsible for the entry of other Eastern stars, and, thanks to him, the West had the opportunity of witnessing as good tennis as is the regular privilege of the Eastern tennis follower.

Every appreciation is shown by the mid-West fan of the appearance of the champion in that section of the country. The week before the clay court tournament Tilden played in the Illinois State championship at Skokie, along with Alonso, Johnson and Lawrence B. Rice of Boston. Large galleries filled the stands throughout the week of play, and every one of them was a Tilden gallery, eager to express recognition of his work, no matter whether it was one of their own local stars that was being beaten by the champion.

The entry in the Skokie tournament was exceptionally good. It is not often that a State championship in the East is favored with an entry of the class of that at Chicago. The time apparently is not far distant when the Western tennis fan will cease to look with envy toward the East. It will become the regular thing for the nation's stars to compete in that section of the country, which is what it should be. The game is growing rapidly in the Middle West, and although no champions have been developed, they will come with the stimulation of interest and wider playing of the game. The United States Lawn Tennis Association has taken recognition of the growth of the game in the West and has awarded one of the big features of the tennis season to the South Side Tennis Club of Chicago. The final round of the American Zone Davis Cup play will be held there the second week of August and will, in all probability, bring together Japan and Australia, two of the three strongest rivals this country has on the courts.

BOXING

Luis Angel Firpo is a troubled young man. On the threshold of realizing his ambition—a match for the world's heavyweight championship—this young giant from the Argentine is torn between conflicting emotions. He wants the match with Jack Dempsey and yet he doesn't. The financial remuneration is an enticing bait and probably will, in the end, induce Firpo to agree to a match with the champion, regardless of its effect on Firpo's future ring career. But Firpo's desire for wealth is tempered in great measure by pride in his fistic ability. His tremendous strength has advanced him from obscurity to the front ranks of heavyweight money-makers with startling rapidity. Of this Firpo is pardonably proud. Likewise he has been secure in his own belief of what he is capable of accomplishing in the future.

His confidence in himself just now, however, is being dimmed by the almost unanimous decision of qualified ring critics that Firpo is a fit subject for pugilistic annihilation by the powerful fists of Dempsey. In the brain of Firpo has been sown the seed of doubt. He has taken this criticism seriously. He is deeply concerned. He is beginning to doubt his own ability with a doubt which, if permitted to develop, might result in deferring his bout with Dempsey.

Undoubtedly this would be the wise course. It would be well if a Dempsey-Firpo bout was delayed long enough to make the test more equitable, long enough to provide a greater chance of success for Firpo. Right now the South American is accorded practically no chance of relieving Dempsey of the title. Firpo has size and strength in abnormal proportion. He is a modern Hercules in this particular respect. But without the other essentials of the first-class ringman, Firpo's great size and strength are mere bulk. Dempsey demonstrated in Toledo just what he is capable of accomplishing against mere bulk.

Firpo is thus in a predicament. He must decide within a few days between courting disaster through accepting a bout against Dempsey for September and delaying that bout until he has gained needed experience and ring polish. If he agrees to battle Dempsey it appears there must be but one result. Firpo may prove dangerous—until he is hit by Dempsey. Then he will collect the loser's end, which may be larger even than the sum Carpentier received for taking a crack on the chin. Or Firpo can defer meeting Dempsey until he has developed more formidable qualifications, until he has advanced to the stage in boxing ability where he will really justify recognition as a dangerous man for Dempsey and will enjoy greater chances of success in his quest of the title.

TURF

It is welcome news to followers of the turf that the injuries sustained recently by Zev and Chickvale were not serious or permanent and that the three-year-old stars of the Rancocas and Whitney stables will undoubtedly be back at the races during the Saratoga meeting. The sport has suffered in interest through the absence of a number of the outstanding horses of the year because of accidents incidental to racing and training. Nothing would be more pleasing to the followers of the thoroughbreds who journey to Saratoga than to see the best of their age and the leaders of the older division renew their battles in the rich events to be contested at the Spa.

Already Saratoga is looming on the horizon. President Richard T. Wilson of the Saratoga Association is domiciled at the Spa and actively in command of affairs in connection with the coming meeting, now only a fortnight away. A number of the New York stables have shipped all or a part of their strings, while many of the strongest of the Western stables will come during the next few days. Trainers are utilizing the time to recuperate their charges from the arduous campaign of Spring and early Summer, in order to bring them to the post ready for the month of racing at the superb course up-State.

Here at home there has been excellent sport at Empire City on the hilltop. A few horses and jockeys from the West have been added to the participants in the sport at the Yonkers track, and the fixtures for the remaining fortnight of the meeting should develop some fine racing. The presiding Stewards are giving evidence of a determination to rule the sport with a firm hand, and the disciplinary measures they have taken with the jockeys should go far to eliminate recklessness and infringements of the rules of racing. The wisdom of the single disqualification has been questioned in many quarters, it being a grave question whether the horse set back was more at fault than the one with whom he interfered.

The turf welcomed two comparative newcomers during the last week. W. Averell Harriman, who campaigns under the racing name of the Log Cabin Stable, was unanimously elected as a member of The Jockey Club, while the silks of Marshall Field were carried to their first victory of the season last Thursday.

Two new and important stakes have just been announced. The first will be run at Aqueduct during the Autumn meeting, and is to be known as the Junior Champion. It will carry $5,000 in added money, and will be the only mile race on the metropolitan circuit exclusively for two-year-olds. It should furnish one of the best juvenile tests of the season. The other will be the inaugural of a new Kentucky Special, a $50,000 added money race for three-year-olds and upward, which will be run at the Fall meeting at Latonia. The race will be the richest event open to all-comers that has ever been run in America.

CEDARHURST WINS TWO YACHT RACES

Special to The New York Times.

CEDARHURST, L. I., July 15.—The junior Corinthians of the Cedarhurst Yacht Club won the first leg of their interclub series against the junior sailors of the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club of Oyster Bay off here today. Two divisions of yachts were sailed. In the race for Class O yachts the point score was 15 to 6 in favor of the Cedarhurst Club. The visitors did better in the catboat division, in which the point score was 11 to 9 in favor of Cedarhurst.

Each team was made up of three yachts. In the O class the sailors could not be older than 18 years. The age limit of the catboat Corinthians was 15 years. The visitors did not bring boats here today. Each yachtsman drew for his craft, and the rules stated that no skipper of the Cedarhurst Club could sail his own boat.

The larger yachts were sent over a triangle of three nautical miles on the Atlantic off the Rockaway shore. The course was sailed twice in a light south by east breeze. As the wind came, the Corinthians had a beat, a run and a reach. The local juniors took all three first places, the winning yacht being E. I. Low's Mistral, which was sailed by Daniel T. Cox, Arthur Peck and E. E. Whitman.

On the first two legs of the first round the leader was Curlew, which is the property of Thomas Williams. The boat was sailed by A. Kniffin, who had as his crew Miss Edith Elliman and L. R. Marshall Jr. On the third leg Mistral moved into first place, and never again was headed.

In the catboat class T. Dunstan and Leon Fuller, who sailed Periwinkle, were disqualified for fouling one of the other yachts. The winner was Mussel, which belongs to C. W. Wickersham. It was sailed by L. B. Elliman and D. Lynch.

The second race of the series will be sailed off Oyster Bay, probably on Wednesday afternoon. A special trophy has been offered for the series. A summary of the races sailed yesterday is as follows:

Cycle Races Called Off.

The bicycle races scheduled for last night at the New York Velodrome were called off because of the rain which soaked the track. Manager John Chapman announced that the card of races originally scheduled will be conducted next Sunday night.

NEW YORK ELEVEN TRIUMPHS, 6 TO 3

New York won out in the intercity soccer benefit match staged yesterday in the presence of 2,000 persons at New York Oval, when the eleven of the New York Football Club defeated the champion Fleisher Yarn team of Philadelphia, holder of the American Football Association cup, by the score of 6 goals to 3. At half-time New York, leading by 3 goals to 1, had the match well in hand. Soon after the restart, this lead was increased to 5-1, after which the issue was never in doubt. The beneficiaries of the match were Charles Kelly, captain, and William Herd, both of whom figured prominently in the play for the home team.

New York took the lead when Crilley scored with a lightning shot after 10 minutes of play. Fleisher worked the ball into the danger zone after some clever combination on the left wing, but Herd fisted out a stinging shot from Purvis. New York came back and, from a fine center by Crilley McGuire, added the second point. Fleisher then got together in earnest and Stradan beat Herd with a terrific drive which entered the goal just below the crossbar. Crilley got through again before half-time.

The lineup:

Kelly	R. B.	Rodgers
Meyerdirks	L. B.	Fleming
T. Stark	R. H.	Coleman
Philip	C. H.	Whyte
Cushley	L. H.	Duffy
McAusland	O. R.	Malley
A. Stark	I. R.	Purvis
McGuire	I. L.	McLoughlin
McGhee	O. L.	Galloway

CARMAN IS VICTOR IN LONG PACE RACE

ARTHUR SPENCER IN FRONT

NEWARK, July 15.—Clarence Carman, crack motor-paced rider from Jamaica, L. I., and three times champion of America, won the twenty-mile motor-paced race at the Velodrome here this afternoon, defeating George Wiley of the Bronx by thirty yards and Jean Snoek of Holland by a lap. Carman was paced by Otto Miller of Brooklyn. Wiley had "Daredevil" Jimmy Hunter and Eddie Root paced Snoek. The time of the race was 28:25 2-5. George Chapman, the American champion, had to retire from the race at five miles when the motor on which Willie Zipf was pacing him went bad.

Arthur Spencer won the one-mile national championship, the tenth of a series of eighteen races to decide the American title, by defeating Ray Eaton and Willie Spencer in the final. Alf Goullet defeated Alfred Grenda and Marco Bergamini in the heat to decide fourth place. In the final Eaton and Willie Spencer did not try to go around Arthur until the last lap. When they did try they did not have the speed, and Artie beat both to the tape.

In the first semi-final Arthur defeated Alf Grenda and Bobby Walthour. He just nipped Grenda at the tape. Bill Spencer won the second semi-final from Goullet and Piani. Walker won the third semi-final but was disqualified for switching Eaton, and Eaton was given first place, with Bergamini second.

Arthur Spencer, 37; Willie Spencer, 24; Cecil Walker, 18; Ray Eaton, 10; Alf Goullet, 8; Pete van Kempen, 4; Margo Bergamini, 3; Palmiro Mori, 2; Orlando Piani, 2; Alf Grenda, 1; Willie Keller, 1.

William Fenn Jr., 26; Carl Hambacher, 9; Gus Merkle, 7; Edward Bedni, 7; Elmer Bundt, 4; Chester Fischer and Louis Benezatti, 3; Larry Seuffert and George Lucadema, 2; Earl Adams, Dan Costello and Art Lane, 1.

The summaries:

Five-Mile National Championship (Amateur)—Won by Carl Hambacher, Bay View Wheelmen; Edward Bendle, Unione Sportiva Italiana, second; Gus Merkel, Newark, third; Willie Fenn, Bayview Wheelmen, fourth. Time—10:31 3-5. Last eighth mile, 0:12 3-5.

One-Mile National Championship (Professional)—Won by Arthur Spencer, Newark; Ray Eaton, East Orange, second; Willie Spencer, Newark, third; Alfred Goullet, Newark, fourth. Time—2:10. Last eighth mile, 0:12. Time of heat to decide fourth place—2:08 1-5. Last eighth mile, 0:12 1-5.

WIN BOROUGH TENNIS TITLE.

Kahn and Schutzman Victors in Manhattan Doubles Final.

Sid Kahn and Harry Schutzman defeated George Leepson and Michael Sanders in the final of the men's doubles in the tennis tournament for the championship of Manhattan Borough held yesterday at Central Park under the auspices of the Park Department. The score was 7—5, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, the match going to four sets before Kahn and Schutzman emerged the victors.

The final match for the men's singles championship was also scheduled to have been played yesterday, but due to a light shower which fell shortly after the final in the doubles had been contested it was decided to postpone the match until a later date, probably this coming Saturday.

CUE STARS IN MATCH.

Bos and Bruno to Meet in 900-Point Game Starting Tonight.

Arrangements were completed yesterday for a 900-point match at 18.2 balkline billiards between Ary Bos, former amateur champion of Europe, and Jean Bruno, the champion of Czechoslovakia, to be held at the Rational Recreation Academy in Brooklyn.

They will play three evening blocks of 300 points each tonight, tomorrow and Wednesday. Each block will be followed by an exhibition of fancy shots by both players.

VIKINGS WIN AT SOCCER.

The winning of the premier event of the American golf season—the Open Championship again emphasizes the fact that the Spalding "50" ball is the "Choice of Champions."

Not only the first four in the 1923 Open Championship used a Spalding "50" ball, but at least 80 per cent of the field played a ball of Spalding manufacture.

THE MINNESOTA ELECTION.

If Governor Preus is elected a United States Senator in Minnesota today, his triumph will be personal and local. Mr. Harding's Administration will have no part in it. The Governor has been discreetly mute about the sum total of Republican achievement. He has attacked directly the McCumber-Fordney Tariff law. His old friend, Knute Nelson, whose seat he seeks, opposed many details of it. So did Senator Kellogg, who was "improving," as Magnus Johnson says, but who was beaten none the less by the disgruntled farmers.

The present price of wheat is hardly calculated to soothe their irritation, but at least Governor Preus has kicked away the Republican humbug. He has no use for the Old Guard or the farm bloc. He has fought for his own hand, on his own platform. In regard to national policies that platform is co-operative farm legislation, low tariff, lower taxation, the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway—a singular companion of economy. Mr. Preus is a progressive in a real sense, which is more than can be said of some sorehead Minnesota Republicans who call themselves "progressive Republicans" and have progressed into complicity with that curious hodgepodge, the Farmer-Labor Party, made up of all sorts of odds and ends and "grouches."

There is no doubt of the fitness of Governor Preus, of the unfitness of Magnus Johnson, to be a Senator. The latter speaks with a most miraculous organ, but if he knows what he's talking about he carefully hides his knowledge from his hearers. As to the means of bringing about the program he has borrowed from Mr. La Follette, no ancient oracle ever succeeded in being so vague.

Government ownership of railroads, the reduction of the Supreme Court "to the job of interpreting the acts of Congress" and the rest of the Robertus-Magnus program are vivid and violent enough, one would think, to stir the voters. Apparently, they remain listless. Meetings have been small. Perhaps Magnus's far-flung voice broadcasts itself over the State, but nowhere has he collected crowds. On the other hand, the conservatives seem unmoved at the flaming-up of radicalism. There has been a lot of it in Minnesota, invaded from both North Dakota and Wisconsin. The Minnesotans are used to the whimsies of the Non-Partisan League, the Socialists, and so forth. Why go into conniptions at another cry of "Wolf!"? Governor Preus's hopes depend upon a normal Republican vote. "If the "vote is light, it may be a tight "squeeze," he said the other day. Party lines are blurred. It is a queer mess. Will a Senator for Minnesota or another Wisconsin Senator from Minnesota be chosen?

BUS LINES IN NEW YORK.

Decision by the Court of Appeals that New York City cannot legally operate bus lines puts an end to one of Mayor Hylan's pet projects. He is hurt and sore, but he can hardly be surprised. From the lowest court to the highest in the State the Judges have ruled consistently and unanimously against him. Municipal bus lines are held not to be a "city purpose," as contemplated by the State Constitution, the laws and the City Charter. In the whole affair the city Administration had simply "taken a chance." The courts have now left it with not a chance in the world.

In his exasperation the Mayor declares that he will get the Board of Estimate to call upon Governor Smith to summon the Legislature in extraordinary session, with the hope of securing legislation to make lawful what the Court of Appeals has decided to be contrary to law. This is perfectly futile. There is small likelihood that the Governor will convoke the Legislature, and there is no likelihood at all that it would pass the acts desired by the Mayor even if it met at Albany. Meanwhile, a direct and speedy way to obtain needed bus lines in the city is open to the Board of Estimate, as it has been all along. The Transit Commission stands ready to grant franchises to operate buses wherever they can be shown to be a public necessity in addition to existing transit facilities and not in harmful competition with them. These franchises could be given for a short term and made revocable if that were best. They could be available at an early date—much earlier, in fact, than that by which the Mayor could secure authorization by the Legislature to do what he wants, even if there were no serious opposition to it. At least two bus lines are already serving the public under franchises accorded by the Transit Commission, and several others could be in a few weeks if only the Mayor would go about the business in the right way.

By starting off on the wrong track, he will cause people to question his motives as well as his wisdom. They will say that he cares less about actually transporting passengers on convenient bus lines than he does about getting his own way in the matter of municipal operation. But why object to private companies doing what the city has been trying to do and is now debarred by the courts from longer attempting to do? It will be hinted that the reason is that the City Administration desires municipally operated bus lines as a part of a political machine. The testimony brought out recently regarding the way in which every municipal motorman and conductor is expected to be a good man and true in his party affiliations and activities was unpleasantly suggestive on this point.

It is to be hoped that the Board of Estimate, if not the Mayor, will see the light and come to a better mind. There is ready to hand a method, at once legal, prompt and well guarded, of keeping in operation as many bus lines as can be shown to be a public necessity. A little speedy co-operation with the Transit Commission will be worth more to the city than cries of angry protest and vain appeals to the Legislature.

THE CHANGING TIDE OF IMMIGRATION.

Commissioner General Husband reports a significant gain in immigration from Northern and Western European countries in the fiscal year ended June 30. Except Germany, they almost filled their quotas. In the previous fiscal year the percentage of arrivals was 46.4. Mr. Husband says:

> If the old type of immigrant is superior to the new type, as the orators have been claiming for years, the answer is that the country is on the road to success in getting that type back. There was a lot of skilled labor among the immigrants of the last year, and we know that many of the Northern Europeans went west to the agricultural States.

By the "new type" of immigrant the Commissioner means those who come from Southern and Eastern Europe and Asiatic Turkish territory. In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922, the percentage of the quotas admitted was 95.3. In his report for that year Mr. Husband said: "It is impossible "to say how many aliens would have "come from Southern and Eastern "Europe and Turkey had it not been "for the limitations afforded by the "per centum limit act." More came last year (the fiscal year ended June 30, 1923). Mr. Husband says the quotas were exhausted. If they were 10 instead of 3 per cent., the same story would probably be told. The Commissioner concludes that "the quota law "and favorable economic conditions "in the United States have brought a "revival of the old-time immigra-"tion." He says that "we haven't "had an assortment of this kind of "arrivals in thirty years." Immigration from the United Kingdom increased from 42,670 to 77,343; Denmark, from 3,284 to 5,226; France, 4,343 to 5,084; the Netherlands, 2,408 to 3,607; Norway, 5,941 to 12,202; Sweden, 8,766 to 19,867; Switzerland, 3,723 to 3,752.

The gain from the United Kingdom is due in large part to unemployment. There are more than a million idle men there today, many of them subsisting on doles from the Government. The United States by comparison is a land of luxurious plenty. C. F. G. Masterman in his book "England After the War" shows how hard are the lives of millions of Englishmen in their struggle to keep the wolf from the door. To the middle class he gives a place below unskilled labor in earning power. It would be interesting to learn from the Bureau of Immigration what the occupations of the newcomers from the United Kingdom were. The middle class is probably well represented. Economic conditions in other Northern and Western European countries whose immigration total has gone up are also distressing. These new arrivals will be heartened by the opportunities open to them in the United States. They are not the kind that come here to return to the old country with accumulated savings. Most of them will remain and become citizens, no doubt.

In the years since the war, there has been a set-off to the filled quota from Southern and Eastern Europe of immigrants who have returned to their native countries. In the case of the Italians, 40,412 immigrants arrived in the year ended June 30, 1922 (statistics for the last year are not available), and 53,650 Italians, exclusive of non-immigrants, departed. Figures showing a larger departure proportionately could be quoted for the Greeks, Poles and Jugoslavs. This was not, in the main, a drifting back to the home land of those who had acquired enough money to live comfortably for the remainder of their days. It was, in large part, an organized movement. Frances Kellor, in her book "Immigration and the Future," has offered this explanation: "Each European nation, to strengthen "further its own nationalism, is send-"ing out a call to its own well-to-"do immigrants in other countries to "return home, at least temporarily." This call, which seems to be political in most cases, is considered by patriotic immigrants "hardly less imperative than that of war." The new States urge their sons to return to help in the work of reconstruction and to build a new nation. But even Belgium has asked her able-bodied men to come back. Germany has organized to recall her colonists to the fatherland, but in the fiscal year just ended 49,250 Germans arrived in this country of a quota of 67,607. Commissioner Husband is probably right when he calculates that for some time to come the northern races will again predominate in our immigration.

CANADIAN WHEAT TROUBLES.

October wheat has been selling for less than a dollar in Winnipeg. There is much talk about a co-operative handling of the crop in the prairie Provinces. The Canadian Council of Agriculture and divers associations of grain growers are ardent for a "wheat pool." According to an official of the United Farmers of Alberta, there is to be such a pool in that Province, but that isolated and restricted action could have little effect. The two most powerful grain marketers of the Canadian West, the United Grain Growers and the Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Company, have conferred through their executives, but politics sticks its ugly nose between them, an Ottawa dispatch to The Montreal Gazette tells us:

> It is generally admitted by those intimately acquainted with the Western grain situation that a pool capable of handling at least 80 per cent. of the Western wheat crop could be organized and carried if the Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator and the United Grain Growers would agree to work together, but they will not. They are jealous of each other. Premier Dunning of Saskatchewan, who knows as much about the grain-handling business as any one in the West, is convinced that the export departments of these companies could handle the situation and he is prepared to place the credit of the Province at their disposal to see it through. But politics is a factor in the situation, and the very fact that Mr. Dunning favors such a scheme makes some others, influential in the elevator business in that Province, opposed to it, though their opposition is not openly expressed.

Meanwhile, the Royal Grain Enquiry Commission is eliciting much interesting and some contradictory testimony. Thus at Lethbridge, Alberta, some farmers were sure that a wheat pool would have a tendency to lessen fluctuations and stabilize prices, and that there had been a glut on the market early in the season. "Too much "meddling by armchair agricultural "experts," said one farmer. Something radically wrong with the marketing system, another testified. Nothing wrong with it, most efficient possible, a miller believed. Then why do the farmers find it so hard to make money on their wheat? Because "the "European buyer won't pay the price "to which we are entitled," replied the miller. If the European could afford to pay more and freight rates were reduced, the farmers could make money.

So the troubles of farmers both sides of the border are much alike. A farmer member of the Alberta Legislature said that 25 per cent. of the farmers of Southern Alberta deal in the wheat option market at Winnipeg and put more in their purses by those speculations than by their farm labors. This is mighty curious, if true.

WHEN THE SHOE WAS ON THE OTHER FOOT.

Writing in Paris on the 7th of May, 1787, to James Madison, at that time in New York, William Short, private secretary to Thomas Jefferson, the American Minister to France, took occasion to call attention to the disrepute into which America had fallen in France through the non-payment of the debt contracted during the Revolution. From the text of the letter, which is published by President Alderman of the University of Virginia in the June number of The North American Review, it is easy to infer that history is repeating itself—reversed. Although our Government is not pressing the French (thus following the example of the French Government in 1787), yet there are voices raised in America today in criticism of the Allies for their failure to "come across."

One sentence in Mr. Short's letter should be carefully read by those who are so much concerned over military expenditures in France today. It is as follows:

> Shall I add also what makes an unfavorable impression of our punctuality in the discharge of our foreign debts? It is in the ordinances of Congress on several occasions—such as that for establishing a mint and raising troops. * * * Congress could not raise troops if they had not money—and if they have, why not pay either the principal or interest of debts long ago contracted and already due?

Thus it appears that the thirteen States, demoralized after the successful war, and burdened with heavy debts and expenditures, were exposed to the same charges as those made against France today. While certain persons were thus hurling the epithet "militaristic" against the pacific and weak American States, the French Government, although keeping in touch with ours, was proving a lenient creditor and accepting the situation in a generous spirit. As a matter of fact, the interest on part of the debt for a number of years was remitted by the King of France as a special token of friendliness toward the new nation.

In his article President Alderman points out that the common flings in Europe against the United States for being a grasping creditor are, in reality, unfounded. The United States not only has been considerate in its official relations, but has been more than generous in its private relief for the suffering of all countries. But this is not the most interesting aspect of the comparison. When the shoe was on the other foot and America was the debtor the attitude of France toward the United States was much like the present-day attitude of America toward France.

AT THE TOP OF AMATEUR GOLF.

For three or four years past it has been the opinion of professional golfers, British as well as American, that young Robert Jones, who won the open championship of the United States yesterday, is the finest amateur golfer yet to appear. This does not mean that he is invincible or that he has been a frequent winner. He has never succeeded in winning the amateur championship, though expected to do so at each of the last three tournaments. In the open of 1922 he was but one stroke behind the champion. It has long seemed his fate just to fall short of seizing the crown. But it is not on the basis of success or failure in match or medal play that professional opinion of "Bobby" Jones has been formed. Too many accidents of weather or physical condition, too many smiles of fortune, enter into the winning of golf contests to make that the true test.

What the professionals say of Jones is that his marked natural aptitude for the game has been built upon by sound instruction in the niceties of golf and by assiduous practice. His teacher at Atlanta also turned out a woman champion in the person of Miss Alexa Stirling. The enthusiasts speak of "Bobby" as the shining "stylist" of golf. His form is so excellent and correct that it stands him in stead when fate frowns upon him, or when for any reason his nervous co-ordination is not perfect. When he slips, he does not fall so far as others. When he occasionally "blows up," he is not dashed to pieces. His style saves him from complete disaster. Moreover, he knows all the shots. Into or across or down the wind, he has his repertory ready. Remarkable in length, he is even more remarkable in accuracy. Difficult recoveries look easy in his execution of them. And he now seems to have acquired, what he long lacked, the thing called golfing temperament. This means the ability to endure hard luck with equanimity—"tranquilus saevis in undis," which may be translated calm even in cruel bunkers—and to put away a bad stroke as soon as it is made, so as to make sure of a good one next. The way in which Jones came through the severe tests of last week, under which so many tough veterans broke, is the best evidence not only of the skill of his playing but of the stoutness of his heart. He had to call upon both yesterday in a struggle which did not end till the last hole.

CAMPERS WANTED.

In its new regulations for the use of the State forest preserves in the Catskills and the Adirondacks—preserves covering an area of 7,200,000 acres—the State Conservation Commission makes a distinction between "travelers" and "campers." "Travelers," it appears, are transients who, whatever their mode of locomotion, do not tarry in the same place more than three nights in succession or more than ten days in any one year. "Campers" are those who go into the woods and "squat" in the same place for a "reasonable" period. As no sharp line is drawn between reasonableness and unreasonableness, it is to be presumed that the State officials will chase out only those who may be classed as genuine camp-hogs. There is a special provision—Article 10 in the regulations—which reads that "No one may claim any particular "site from year to year or the ex-"clusive use of same."

The automobile has worked a transformation in camp life. The State Conservation Commission reports an ever increasing number of visitors, with a growing tendency to stop at nightfall by the roadside, using their own improvised camps. In order to make life easier for all nomadic campers the State has provided numerous shelters, varying from portable canvas houses to the so-called "Adirondack lean-to" or open camps. In these the "travelers" may rest their weary limbs, whereas the "campers" who wish to occupy a special site as a headquarters may obtain permits to put up tents of their own for "reasonable" periods.

In camping there are clearly defined castes. At one extreme stand the old-timers, who whether on foot or in a canoe take little more than a frying pan, an axe, a minimum ration, which they supplement when possible with fresh fish, and often only a blanket and a spare canvas top by way of shelter. These consider themselves the old aristocracy of campers. There is also a middle class, composed of hardy souls who are nevertheless wedded to creature comforts, and go in for substantial quarters and varied menus. But most numerous, these days, are the "travelers," who, according to the aristocracy and the middle classes, profane the woods with their noisy flivvers and camp with the riotous luxury of automobilists.

However much the old-timers look down upon these travelers, they are the ones who are most in need of assistance and encouragement. One of the great boons of the State and national forests is that they are becoming the vacation grounds of thousands who never before had a chance to get into the wilderness. There is in nearly all Americans a latent love of outdoor life which the average Summer resort fails to gratify. Until these vast reservations were set aside, there was the danger that camping, in the true sense of the word, would become the privilege of the wealthy few who could afford large properties in the mountains. Now, however, campers are welcome, and are even urged to come, in the Catskill reserves as well as in the Adirondacks, and for their guidance rules and regulations have been drawn up.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

They Didn't Use Any Discretion. When a man of science so distinguished as Ivan Petrovich Pavloff—a man whose achievements in half a dozen domains of research are known to all the other men of science in the world—cannot go wherever he pleases, and be welcomed cordially wherever he goes, then it is evident that what has interfered with his movements is wrong and should be changed immediately.

The particular thing which Dr. Pavloff's experience here last week shows to need changing is the method of dealing with passports at consulates, and the particular consulate that revealed the need happened to be the British, though it might as easily have been any other.

Dr. Pavloff, being a Russian, naturally had a Russian passport, and, as naturally, it was given to him by the Soviet Government, that being the only Government Russia has had for some time or seems likely to have for some time to come. The doctor, as everybody ought to know, is not a Bolshevik, and the fact that he is one of the few "intellectuals" whom the Communists have allowed to live and keep on with their work, instead of exciting suspicion as to his intentions in visiting Great Britain, only reveals either that the Russian despots have appreciation for science when its exponent is of international fame or that they are afraid to maltreat a possessor of such fame because of the indignation it would excite in many countries.

Be that as it may, Dr. Pavloff, who wanted to go to Edinburgh, where he had been invited to attend a great Congress of Physiologists soon to be held there, was told at the British Consulate that he could not have a visa for his passport, as it was issued by an unrecognized Government—could not, that is, till special inquiries had been made, which would take nobody knew how long. The doctor refused to wait, gave up attending the congress, and will land in France, whose local representatives, for a wonder, seem to have known that he was not a dangerous person.

The episode is a sorry one—even sorrier in a way than another that marked Dr. Pavloff's stay in this country. He was attacked and robbed of $2,000 by some of our busy bandits.

Facts and Fiction Contrasted. A good many people who, not being interested in laboratory investigations, never have heard about Dr. Ivan Pavloff's achievements, yet are familiar with what they think is the appearance of a dog that was used by him while studying the mysteries of digestion. Every reader of anti-vivisection literature has seen in that literature the many pictures found there of "the Pavloff dog."

He is shown as an emaciated creature, evidently on his very last legs, expressing on his face all the pain the artist was able to put on it, and with a big wound from which dripped rapidly what no dog could afford to lose.

These pictures are works of pure—no, vicious—imagination. There was a "Pavloff dog," and there still are "Pavloff dogs" in such laboratories as find it convenient or expedient to repeat or extend Dr. Pavloff's digestion inquiries in the excellent way he invented. But all these dogs are agile, happy and healthy creatures, suffering no pain and receiving far better care than is given to the great majority of dogs in what may be called private life. It is true, indeed, that every "Pavloff dog" has undergone a "major operation," by which a small part of his stomach was walled off from the rest of it, and the gastric juice which it continues to produce can be extracted, uncontaminated by food, through a permanent opening in the dog's flank. But the operation, of necessity, was performed under complete anesthesia, and recovery was effected under best hospital conditions, with discomfort rather than suffering, and the discomfort soon was ended.

"Pavloff dogs" deserve—and get—affection, but the claims for sympathy made in their behalf are preposterous.

Grotesque But Not Incredible. Washington has what New York fortunately lacks, and that is alleys—narrow passages to which the houses of two streets turn their backs. Now, alleys have their uses, but that in Washington, as elsewhere, they also have abuses is sufficiently indicated by the fact that Washington has an Alley Closing law which forbids residence "in an alley" not thirty feet wide, not running between two streets, and not having water, a sewer and lighting facilities. But houses of a sort have been built facing on some alleys not thus equipped, and recently, for good reason, efforts were made to force the dwellers in these hovels to vacate them.

The efforts have failed, the court deciding that the law forbade living "in the alley," and that it would be "a forced construction" to apply its provisions to habitations on the alleys but not "in" them, as the law specified.

At any rate, that is what the dispatches say the decision was and why the alley houses must be let alone.

Water Power Costs Much Money. It is customary with a good many people to think of water power as costing nothing, and its substitution for coal or other fuels as a source of energy as a great and commendable economy. This impression has an element of truth, but on balance it sometimes is a mistake. Almost invariably it costs far more to create the conditions in which water power is made available for use than it does to build and house the machinery depending on coal for power. Thereafter, of course, the water is the cheaper, but it is certain to take a long time before the total difference becomes large enough to show profit.

The truth of this is illustrated by the fact that the company which purposes the building of a great dam on the Susquehanna River and the supplying of many cities, including New York, with electric power, must make an original investment of $30,000,000 for a dam before the sparks begin to fly, and the interest on that huge sum will be an overhead charge going on forever. It would buy a lot of coal.

Of course, this is no argument against the use of water power; it is only a suggestion that the reason—the good reason—for urging that water power be used when possible is not that it costs nothing or even little. In not a few cases the cost is prohibitive.

CONDITIONS IN MINNESOTA.

Farmer Is Reported In Debt and Unable to Meet Obligations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I express an opinion on the election of a United States Senator from Minnesota? I was brought up in the northern part of the State. I, with my parents, went there in 1881 and took a piece of virgin prairie land. I was 11 years old then and grew up to manhood there.

I saw the coming and going of the Farmers' Alliance. I remember well Ignatius Donnelly going up and down the State telling the farmers that if they elected their State representatives to office they would sell their wheat for a dollar. They nearly swept the State. Many counties elected entire Farmers' Alliance tickets. They had many representatives in the State Legislature. One Congressman was elected, a farmer who had received the nomination, never thinking he would get enough votes to carry him to election. The poor fellow didn't know what struck him.

In those days wheat went as low as 43 cents a bushel. The farmers were in bad shape. Very few farms were not mortgaged. The Republicans were in power in both State and nation. To remedy those evils they passed the McKinley bill which raised the prices on everything they needed—shoes, clothing, &c. And, in Minnesota, in Winter, one needs wearing apparel! Then the 1890 election came and there was hardly a Republican elected. Although a Republican State, it has never liked the Republican high tariffs.

And so when this present Administration gave them the "emergency tariff" bill it helped the Minnesota farmers as a pail of water would help raise the tide of the ocean. And when Mr. Harding told the farmers of Kansas the other day that the Republican emergency tariff bill had put them "on easy street," to use a common expression, it was like Marie Antoinette's "If they have no bread let them eat cake." The Republican bottle that cures all ills has done those farmers more harm than good. They read of Mr. Wood's American Woolen Company declaring big dividends while clothing is at least 200 per cent. more than they used to pay.

Here are extracts from a letter from a business man in Northern Minnesota which tells the condition of the farmer up there. This man is a storekeeper. One of the banks in the place has failed by lending money on land.

"Who would ever have thought that Minnesota land, no matter how poor, could have defaulted on interest at $5 to $10 an acre, which is the amount of most of it? Five years ago we didn't think that could be done. * * * Farming does not pay, taxes are too high. Young soldiers let their land go. * * * The country is too poor and it's doubtful if the population will hold out. * * * Business is dull, the dullest I have seen for many years. People in debt can't get trusted and they don't want to be, and we won't let them, so there! All our business of 1920 is still on the books and the farmers are trying to live along with their butter and eggs. Money is very tight, banks bare, no use forcing anybody to pay, they haven't got it and can't borrow. Tough proposition! And the whole of Northern Minnesota is just the same."

Farmer and Prosperity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been reading for years with great interest the valuable comments in your columns. I note your expressions of prosperity in industrial centres and an optimistic view of future business in the agricultural districts. We who live in these agricultural districts fail to get your point of view. With wheat selling for less than cost of production, with farmer's credit nil or limited, no money available for interest payments, much less merchandise or commodities, where is the business coming from? What the farmer has to sell he must sell at a low, non-profit price; much of what he must buy he must take at a high profiteering price.

THE OLD CAPTAIN.

I set all day an' watch the sea—
It wus my friend fer long, but now
It's flung me off, as friends 'll do;
"You be too old," says it t' me,

I set here in the same high sun
Thet beats upon the quarterdeck
Of vessels I hev sent like men
Int' the jaws o' hurricanes, an' won—

The sailors goin' up th' street
Call out t' me t' take a trip along
O' them—but could I stan' b'side th' rail
An' hear another feller's voice 's sweet

I shan't take dyin' well—I feel it
In my bones—an' yet I'd give the rest
Hoppin' faster in the wind that's got 'n edge!

Yet here I set all day b'fore this shop
O' "curios," they call 'em, people do,
Though they ain't nothin' curious t' me.
The folks thet pass up by they call me "Pop"—
I'm like them other relics, I s'pose, picked up off the sea.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In connection with the so-called "Gutenberg Bible" and the statement made in The Times of Sunday, July 8, that "Johannes Gutenberg, inventor of printing from movable types, chose the Bible as the book on which first to try his invention," permit me to direct your attention to the following:

Humphreys in his "History of the Art of Printing," while giving due credit to Gutenberg for placing the art of printing on a permanent foundation, gives Koster the honor of its invention. De Vinne in his "Invention of Printing" was at no little difficulty in trying to dispose of what he termed the so-called Koster "legend," owing to the fact that there existed numerous volumes and fragments of ancient printing which had to be accounted for, and both he and Van der Linde fell back on the hypothesis of "an unknown printer" to whom these early volumes were attributed. This unknown printer was undoubtedly Koster.

The date of Koster's invention of separate types, first on wood, later on tin, is given as about the year 1429, but before this he engaged in printing books from wood blocks, among these the celebrated "Biblia Pauperum," executed between 1410 and 1420. The first of Koster's printed books was "Speculum Humanae Salvationis," of which about ten copies are known to exist. Koster died in 1439.

The first copies of the so-called "Gutenberg Bible" are not dated and do not contain the printer's name. Only a few impressions have been preserved to the present time; in fact, they were lost to the world until the latter half of the eighteenth century, when a copy was discovered in the library of Cardinal Mazarin in Paris. The few existing copies are generally spoken of as "Mazarin Bibles." The earlier copies were printed on paper; the later on vellum. There are six copies extant, two of which are in the United States, one belonging to the collection of the late George Brinley of Connecticut; the other owned by the late James Lenox of New York. These copies are on paper. The Brinley copy is said to have a leaf or two in facsimile; the Lenox copy is perfect in every respect, and was placed in the Lenox Library founded by Mr. Lenox in New York in 1870. The four remaining copies in Europe were once sold at auction in London, one, on vellum, realizing $20,000; another, on paper, selling for $14,000.

Claude Augé in the New Larousse Illustré says:

"Gutenberg did not, as is often claimed, invent printing, which was well known before his birth. He perfected the press and the furniture of the printer. In improving the typography of movable types, he aided considerably in the development of printing."

It is by no means a wild question whether the credit of even the "Mazarin Bible" belongs to Gutenberg or to Peter Schoeffer, who had been an apprentice or an assistant to Gutenberg and who was distinguished for his scholarship as well as for his mechanical skill. These led Fust, who had financed Gutenberg and been compelled to foreclose his mortgage, to take Schoeffer into partnership, and the Bible, the Psalter and other important books were produced. Schoeffer married the granddaughter of Fust. After the dissolution of partnership between Gutenberg and Fust, Gutenberg produced nothing worthy of note, while Schoeffer produced the works already mentioned above. After the death of Fust, Schoeffer assumed control of the printing plant at Mainz.

According to existing documents, Gutenberg in 1434 lived in Strasbourg. He was then associated with Andreas Dritzehen in the manufacture of mirrors. Two years later he took in as partners in this association Jean Riffe and Andreas Heilmann. The death of Dritzehen in 1439 dissolved this partnership, and in a suit before a Judge of the High Court, seventeen witnesses deposed that "Of the four pieces which are in the press and which must be removed and placed on and beneath the press in the vise which holds them and which must be released, no one can divine what the [mechanism] is." This deposition revealed that the secret that these four partners sought to exploit was the printing press.

Schoeffer was as undoubtedly the inventor of type-founding as Koster was of printing; Gutenberg was neither, but he availed himself, with great perseverance for a number of years, of the knowledge he had derived from Koster and the help that he had obtained from Fust. Isaiah Thomas has declared that the first printer with movable types, no matter whether of wood, pewter or tin, was Laurens Koster.

According to Hadrianus Junius (1568), "Jan ——; whether his surname be that of Faust, or any other, is of no great importance to me, as I will not disturb the dead, whose consciences must have smote them sufficiently while living. This Jan, who assisted at the printing press under oath, after he had learned the art of casting the types, setting them and other articles belonging to the art, and thought himself sufficiently instructed, having watched the opportunity, as he could not find a better, he packed up the types and the other articles on Christmas eve, while the family was engaged in celebrating the festival, and stole away with them. He first fled to Amsterdam, thence to Cologne, until he could establish himself at Mentz, as a secure place, where he might open shop and reap the fruits of his knavery. It is a known fact that within the twelve months (that is, in the year 1440) he published the 'Alexandri Galli Doctrinale' (a grammar at that time in high repute), with 'Petri Hispani Tractatibus Logicis,' with the same letters which Laurens had used. These were undoubtedly the first products of his press. These are the principal circumstances that I have collected from creditable persons far advanced in years, which they have transmitted like a flaming torch from hand to hand; I have also met with others who have confirmed the same."

The Blue Cross Society.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From letters which have been recently published in your columns regarding the Blue Cross crusade against Summer furs, there appears to be current a mistaken idea that the organization which is sponsoring the movement was organized recently and for that express purpose. This society was started at the beginning of the late war, and has since been engaged in humane relief for animals on lines original and scientific. It was this organization which brought out last year the first public declaration of the open door in laboratories of animal experimentation in this country, and through its efforts a code of self-regulation was extended to all veterinary schools and colleges. Among other of its activities are the Blue Cross anesthetic movement to secure legislation in the different States enforcing the use of anesthesia in certain operations on animals, a Blue Cross Honor Roll for horses, and community relief for dogs and cats. This organization, too, has published many booklets, notably "Animalology," which has been given as said to schools, colleges, clubs and to the public.

WOULD BUY PEACE WITH EXCESS RICHES

UPHOLDS HARDING COURT

Thousands of Plans Reach Bok Committee—Conditions to Be Made Known Soon.

Professor J. Eugene Thompson of the Newtown High School, Elmhurst, has sent an elaboration of the plan he entered in the competition for the American peace award of $100,000 offered by Edward W. Bok. In presenting his amended plan he said he realized that a World Court along the lines advocated by President Harding was essential to make world peace permanent.

"I do not think it is beyond our hopes to say that within this generation we shall see criminal nations defending themselves in a court of law with civilization as the plaintiff," Professor Thompson said. "My plan is simply one of buying peace with the so-called surplus wealth which the other nations of the world claim we possess. Our natural resources have given us financial supremacy, and I propose that we use this supremacy to induce our European neighbors to disarm. Once the world is disarmed and the agencies of welfare, destroyed, we may begin to hope for peace. But we will never have it before disarmament.

"If I am awarded the prize of $100,000 I shall devote $90,000 of it toward putting my plan into action. I am confident that I can wage an effective campaign for the cause of world peace with this money."

Elaborates on Plan.

A. There shall be a congress of representatives of all the nations, and the following terms shall be presented by the United States:

I. All obligations incurred during the World War shall be canceled by the United States, upon condition that the nations benefiting by the lifted indebtedness shall subscribe to the plan for total disarmament.

II. The United States shall extend loans to those nations impoverished by the World War, upon condition that the nations benefiting by the loans shall subscribe to the plan for total disarmament.

III. The United States will disarm simultaneously with the nations under no financial obligation to the United States and in no need of financial assistance.

a. Disarmament shall consist of the reduction of standing armies to 10,000 men and the permanent conversion of all naval and air equipment to commercial uses.

1. Total and permanent destruction of all explosives, guns, rifles, mines, gas apparatus, torpedoes, cannon, bombs, &c., without exception, by all nations.

B. There shall be a permanent World Court of Justice established whose decision shall be final respecting the settlement of disputes between nations.

1. This court shall consist of twelve Justices—one from each of the twelve largest nations.

In a letter to The Times, William J. Bruff of Goshen, N. Y., writes that, in his opinion, if a practical plan could be devised whereby all the Allies and the United States would act in concert on Germany's reparation and at the same time liquidate the external war debts of the Allies, the peace of the world would seem secure and normal conditions assured. That it would take England sixty-two years of heavy taxation to meet her war debt to the United States was evidence enough of the dangers and difficulties confronting Germany, France, Italy, Belgium and other nations to settle their external war debts, he wrote, adding that therein lay the one great danger of future wars.

Unfolds Reparation Proposal.

Mr. Bruff offered this plan:

"France and Belgium rightfully insist that the agreed amount of Germany's reparation, 132,000,000,000 gold marks, covering a period of forty-three years, shall not be reduced, and as this sum on a cash basis equals only 60,000,000,000 gold marks, say $15,000,000,000, far less than either England's or France's debts; and as Germany has no debts either external or internal and far smaller per capita taxation than either, it would seem well within Germany's ability to pay this amount, with a moderate moratorium, within 100 years.

"Assuming, therefore, 60,000,000,000 gold marks the settled amount of Germany's reparations, the following plan, stated in crudest form, would seem to accomplish the grand results so much desired:

"Germany to issue reparation bonds to the amount of 60,000,000,000 gold marks, payable with amortization in 100 years, with rates of interest to be determined, guaranteed by the entire wealth of Germany, Government and private, in such form as demanded by the Allies.

"These bonds to be delivered pro rata to the Allies, as already agreed to by them, viz.: France 52 per cent. England 22 per cent, &c., less the sum due to United States for occupation costs, which may be settled for with these bonds.

"France, Italy, Belgium and the other Allies to liquidate their war debt to the United States and to England with these bonds, upon which the respective Allies might properly pay one-half of the interest and enrose them as well, Germany paying the other half of the interest."

A co-operating council is being formed by the committee in charge of the American Peace Award, which will pass on plans submitted in the contest for Mr. Bok's prize. This council will be composed of members of national organizations, including not only those which have been making a particular objective of world peace, but also civic, religious and economic associations. Among the organizations which have responded by appointing representatives, according to an announcement yesterday from the committee, are: the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the National League of Women Voters, the National Council of Catholic Women, the International Lions' Club, the Church Peace Union, the Foreign Policy Association, the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., the World's Court League, the League of Nations Union, the Women's pro-League Council, the New York Peace Society and the American Academy of Political Science.

The conditions of the award are to be announced within the next ten days, it was said. Several thousand plans have already been sent to the committee.

BAR STATUE OF THE VIRGIN.

Breslau Aldermen Refuse Permission to Place It in Church.

BERLIN, July 15.—The Breslau City Council has decided that a statue of the Virgin Mary representing her astride a donkey in flight to Egypt cannot be placed near a church.

A heated controversy developed in the municipal body over the historical accuracy of the statue, which was made by Alfred Voche of Berlin. The Aldermen were divided as to the merits of the work. Some insisted the Virgin should have been riding side-saddle and others said her gown was too long.

As a compromise they decided to refuse permission to place the statue in or near a church, but to allow it to be erected elsewhere.

LORD CARNARVON KIN TO MARRY

HIS FATHER A STATESMAN

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 15.—The engagement is announced of Lady Evelyn Herbert, only daughter of the late Lord Carnarvon, to B. C. Beauchamp, son of Sir Edward Beauchamp. Lady Herbert was her father's constant companion during the period of discovery of Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb and the Beauchamp family were among the visitors to the tomb.

Sir Edward Beauchamp, who was created a Baronet in 1911, has been a Liberal member of Parliament from Lowestoft since 1906. He has been a member of Lloyds since 1873, and was the Chairman in 1905 and 1913. His second wife was Miss Betty Campbell, daugher of the late Archibald Woods of Columbus, Ohio. They were married in 1890, and their only son, Lady Herbert's fiancé, was born May 5, 1897.

OTHER ENGAGEMENTS.

Miss Kathryn Waugh to Wed Edward A. Niles, Lawyer.

The engagement is announced of Miss Kathryn Waugh, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew M. Waugh of Houston, Texas, to Edward Abbe Niles, a son of Edward C. Niles and the late Mrs. Niles of Concord, N. H., and Washington, D. C., and a grandson of William Woodruff Niles, late Episcopal Bishop of New Hampshire. Miss Waugh has recently come to New York and is studying for the stage and is making her home at the Three Arts Club's building, 323 West Eighty-third Street.

Mr. Niles was graduated from Trinity College in 1916 and from the Harvard Law School in 1921. He also studied at Oxford, England, as a Rhodes scholar. During the war he served as a First Lieutenant, R. M. A., in the air service, being an instructor in the United States.

Mr. Niles is a lawyer and is secretary to Presiding Justice John Proctor Clarke of the Appellate Division and is living at 161 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn.

The wedding is planned to take place this Summer, but the date and place have not been decided upon.

Mr. Niles's father, Edward C. Niles, now in Washington, was formerly Chairman of the Public Service Commission of New Hampshire.

TALKED WITH MISSING BOY.

Man Says Robert Niles Told Him on Train He Was Going Home.

A second and somewhat slender clue to Robert E. Niles, 14 years old, who left his home in Riverside Drive six weeks ago to find a job, came to his widowed mother yesterday. A man who said that he was Gordon Andrews of 362 East Twenty-first Street, Brooklyn, telephoned to the Niles home from the Grand Central Station.

Mr. Andrews said that he had just reached the station from Cleveland; that yesterday afternoon while on the train between Cleveland and Utica, N. Y., he had spoken to a lad who said he was the missing Niles boy and that he had run away from home. The boy, according to Mr. Andrews, said that he had become homesick and was on his way home. At Utica, the man and the boy got off to change cars and the boy disappeared.

Mr. Andrews said that his purpose in telephoning was to ascertain if the boy had reached home safely. His description corresponded in many ways with that of the missing boy.

Mrs. Niles renewed her appeal last night to the boy to write to her. She said that she had no objections to his going to work and that she felt she would be unable to stand the strain of silence much longer.

DENTIST FOR REFORMATORY

BEDFORD, N. Y., July 15.—Officials of the State Reformatory for Women at Bedford announced today that a new dentist, just added to the official staff there, was swamped with applications from the women there to repair and fill their teeth.

Until now the reformatory has never had a resident dentist. Only inmates with aching teeth were treated, and they were taken away from the institution to Mount Kisco.

Recently the reformatory board was authorized to obtain the services of a dentist for $1,200 and keep. Dr. W. H. Matthews has been selected to do the dental work temporarily. The work is to be done without charge.

BRITISH QUOTA EXHAUSTED.

Thirty-five on the President Arthur Will Be Sent to Ellis Island.

Among the 552 passengers who arrived yesterday from Bremen, Southampton and Cherbourg on the President Arthur of the United States Lines were thirty-five British subjects, who were held on board and will be sent to Ellis Island today, because the July quota for Great Britain was exhausted on Saturday.

There were forty-seven Britons on the ship, but twelve of them were passed by the immigration officials as they were in the exempt class. Officers of the ship said that the President Polk, which arrived at Boston today, had 370 British subjects on board, and that all of them would have to be held and probably sent back.

Nineteen nationalities were represented among the immigrants on the President Arthur, including Chinese, Malays and a Drum-Drum from the west coast of Madagascar, members of an ancient tribe whose men never work.

MISSING GIRL BACK HOME.

Wanderer, 12, Enjoyed Adventure So Much She Hid Identity.

Elizabeth Gould, 12, whose parents are caretakers of a house at 154 East Seventy-eighth Street, was returned home yesterday after she had wandered with several girl companions to Rye, N. Y. Last Thursday the child, who had lost her companions, was found in Rye by Mrs. Alfred St. John, who took her in.

Elizabeth enjoyed her experience at the seashore so much, according to her story, that she was reluctant to tell her real name. She said that she was Elizabeth Darcy and attended the school of Our Lady of Mercy at Marion Avenue and Fordham Road, the Bronx. Inquiries revealed no such child enrolled there, and Elizabeth was taken to the Bathgate Avenue Station, where the police obtained her real name.

Children's Aid Society to Celebrate.

The Children's Aid Society will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary on Monday, July 23, with a Fresh Air Day at its present home, Bath Beach, L. I. William Church Osborn is President of the society, and he and Mrs. Osborn, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Dobbyn, representing Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor; Percy R. Pyne, Edwin G. Merrill, Dr. W. K. Draper and Dr. Eugene H. Poole form the committee in charge of the anniversary. The committee invites the public to attend Fresh Air Day, which begins at 2:30 in the afternoon.

SOCIAL NOTES

New York.

Frederick Johnson of 840 Park Avenue has opened Annandale, the Johnson country place at Saratoga, for the Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Shannon Dunn have returned from Wind Mill Farm, their country place at Ipswich, Mass., and are at Sea Gate, New York Harbor, for July and August.

Mrs. Nelson Henry and her daughter, Miss Amy Rodgers Sloan, of 59 West Ninth Street left town last week for Briarcliff Lodge to spend a month there.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Hall of Philadelphia are in town, staying at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mrs. Archibald Rogers has come in from Hyde Park, N. Y., and is at the Ambassador for several days, as are also Mr. and Mrs. Paul Denckla Mill of St. Davids, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Riddle of Philadelphia are occupying Glen Riddle, their country home at Saratoga, and will spend the Summer there.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence Mauran of St. Louis are in New York and are at the Ritz-Carlton.

Mrs. Henry Meyer Johnson has opened her country place, Sans Souci, at Bay Shore, L. I., and has her young granddaughter, Miss Grace Lane, with her.

Miss Ann C. Booth, whose marriage to George T. Brokaw is set for Aug. 10, is at Seneca Falls, with Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, and is assisting in staging and arranging the suffrage pageant to be held there later. She will return next Sunday.

Southampton.

Ideal weather and fine surf brought to the beach yesetrday morning the largest gathering of the season. The women made the beach picturesque in their filmy Summer frocks, colorful flowing veils and parasols of every hue. Following the services in St. Andrew's Dune Church, where the Rev. Stuart Tyson preached, many adjourned to the bathing pavilion.

Among them were Judge and Mrs. Edward G. Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harper Benedict, who had with them their niece, Miss Mary Geohegan of Hamilton, Ont.; Mrs. Frederick H. Betts and her son, L. F. Holbrook Betts; Mrs. Frederick Van Lennep with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Higgins; Vincent S. Mulford, Mr. and Mrs. Esmond O'Brien, Frederick A. Snow, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian H. Larkin, Mr. and Mrs. A. Palmer Loening, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Larkin, Richard Newton Jr., Mrs. Walter Cutting with her daughter, Miss Juliana Cutting, who drove to the beach with their fine team of bay horses and victoria; Mrs. Arthur B. Claflin, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, Mrs. Edward Van Ingen, Mrs. George Barton French, Miss Estelle O'Brien, who was with her father and mother; ex-Justice and Mrs. Morgan J. O'Brien; Mr. and Mrs. James.

Charles G. Muller of Lake Hopatcong, who has been the guest for the week of Louis Simmons at the Elliston Castle in Herrick Road, has been permitted by Colonel H. H. Rogers to make a sketch of his villa in Gin Lane to be used in a painting of a Venetian scene that Mr. Muller is doing for Hudson Maxim, the inventor. The great beauty of the Rogers place directly overlooking the ocean attracted Mr. Muller.

Mr. and Mrs. David L. George of South Orange, N. J., who have taken the Brice villa in the Shinnecock Hills for the season, are entertaining Mrs. Edward White, also of South Orange.

Monday night there will be a meeting in the court house assembly hall of the bench committee and officers of the dog show, which is to be held on the grounds of the Meadow Club Aug. 4.

Mrs. Russell H. Hoadley is entertaining at the Meadow Club, where she makes her home during the Summer months, her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Arthur Wills, who were married in June and who have just returned from a honeymoon in Canada.

W. Scott Cameron and his daughter, Miss Rhoda Cameron, are entertaining at Wee Hame, their villa in Gin Lane, Miss Jeanne Reynal, who arrived from Newport Friday.

Among the entries for the Fox Cup, which will commence Monday on the courts of the Meadow Club, are the Misses Frances Robbins, Cathleen Fox, Alison Harrison, Lois and Theodora Barstow, Mildred Lee, Polly Potter, Mary Waller and Peggy Dunne.

On Wednesday will commence another of these local tennis tournaments for the Hoppin Cup, presented annually by W. W. Hoppin to stimulate interest in the young girls and boys in the game of tennis. Competition is open only to sons of members and season subscribers, and they must be under 17 years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb Jr. and Henry Sproul Jr. are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dewees Dilworth at their villa in First Neck Lane.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodhue Livingston have as their house guests at their villa in First Neck Lane Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Samson Stevens and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Van Rensselaer Thayer, who were recently married in Boston.

Newport.

The first of the series of popular Sunday evening concerts was held at the Casino last night. In spite of a heavy fog there were quite a number of the Summer residents present and among those giving dinners at the Casino Grill during the concert were Mr. and Mrs. Ettore F. Romano Fontana.

William Fahnestock will conclude his present Newport visit today and return to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Thompson Seton, who have been the guests of General and Mrs. J. Fred Pierson, returned to New York last evening. Madame Virginia Clement of the Boston and La Scala Grand Opera Companies, who is also a guest of Mrs. Pierson, gave another musicale at the latter's home yesterday afternoon. She will conclude her visit on Wednesday.

The weekly tournament season will begin at the Newport Country Club on next Saturday. There were unusually large crowds of golfers on both the Country Club and Ocean links yesterday afternoon.

A change has been made in the air service, New York and Newport schedule. The Sunday afternoon return trip to New York has been omitted and instead this air yacht will go down to New York on Monday mornings as it had been found that this will be more convenient to the patrons of the line. Pilot Rummill started for Glen Cove to be with his sister in the Grey Lark yesterday morning, but only reached Stonington because of the fog.

Mrs. W. Goadby Loew has been elected a member of the Board of Governors of the Newport Casino, taking the place of Mrs. Barger Wallach, who has resigned as she is not to be in Newport during this Summer. Mrs. Loew is expected during the week with the members of her family.

Ronald Pearce of New York, a guest of William Greenough, registered at the Casino yesterday, as did George F. Baker Jr., R. I. Hare Powel, Mrs. Dan Jones, J. W. Husted of New York and C. H. Howell of Boston, a guest of P. A. B. Widener.

Mrs. Benjamin Harrison and Mrs. William T. Reid of New York, Mrs. Samuel Reid and Mrs. Samuel B. Sulphin of Indianapolis were at Hill Top Inn yesterday, as were Victor de Uvintio and Ricardo M. de Urgorti of Madrid, Spain.

Count and Countess Szechenyi gave a large dinner party last evening and Mr. and Mrs. James W. Gerard entertained at Belcourt for Count and Countess Anton Sigray.

Mrs. John Aspegren will give a luncheon tdoya for her guest, Mme. Axel Wallenburg.

Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Cleary of Providence, Charles H. Hull and Miss Mary J. Hull of Ithaca, N. Y., are at the New Cliffs.

Among those returning to New York last evening were Sydney Smith, who spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. C. Whitney Carpenter, Frederick R. King, R. W. Sherwin, J. C. Waterbury, Dudley Davis, C. P. H. Gilbert.

Mrs. Mustin, wife of Captain Henry C. Mustin of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department, is the guest of Captain and Mrs. Frank Taylor Evans.

Washington.

The new arrived Chargé d'Affaires of Belgium, Baron Lemaire de Warzee, with the Baroness de Warzee and their daughter, have arrived from Havana, where Baron de Warzee was Minister from Belgium, and are temporarily at the Hotel Hamilton. Baron and Baroness de Warzee reached Washington in time for the official dinner at the French Embassy, in celebration of the fall of the Bastile. Other European powers joining in this celebration, which included official and personal friends of the hosts, were Great Britain and Czechoslovakia. Secretary and Mrs. Hughes, Under Secretary Phillips and Assistant Secretary Harrison represented the State Department. Mrs. Gillett, wife of the Speaker, General and Mrs. William Crozier, just back from two years' residence in Japan, and the Misses Patten were other guests along with the entire French Embassy staff.

The Persian Minister, Minza Hussein Khan, who is spending the week end at Atlantic City, will be the guest of the Arts Club tomorrow at dinner. He will later give a short talk on Persian art and literature.

Mme. Von Lewmiski, wife of the Counselor of the German Embassy, will sail for Europe July 26, to remain until October.

Mrs. Henry M. Hoyt and family have gone to their Summer home in Maine.

Jean de Fontaine, Secretary of the Belgian Legation, returned last evening from Canada, and will sail for Europe Saturday.

General Pershing has returned from New York and will leave shortly for a four weeks' tour of the West and South. He will join President Harding's party at Los Angeles, Aug. 15.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Edward Simpson have arrived from Honolulu, where the former was for several years in command at Pearl Harbor, and are at their old home in Maryland.

FISHING BOAT STUCK ALL DAY ON SAND BAR

Fifty Marooned Passengers Are Drenched With Spray—Finally Wade Ashore.

The fishing boat Sappho sailed away from the Canarsie Docks, South Brooklyn, early yesterday with fifty fishermen aboard. Instead of sailing smoothly down to the fishing grounds, however, the Sappho, said to be fifty years old, grounded on a Sandy Hook bar, and the fishermen remained there until 8 o'clock last night, when the surf pushed the boat close enough to the beach for the men to wade ashore.

When his boat grounded Captain James Tyndall made efforts to get her off, but this was fruitless. Anchors were thrown out in order to check the inward push of the heavy surf, but the grapplers failed to hold. Captain James McAvoy of 1,058 East Ninety-eighth Street, Brooklyn, skipper of the fishing boat Edith, went to the aid of the Sappho and finally got a line to the disabled ship's mast. When the Edith backed away, however, the mast split, and Captain McAvoy quit because he said he was afraid of pulling the older boat to pieces.

When these efforts failed some of the fishermen began to get a trifle nervous, but the crew of the Sappho assured them that she would yet sail on many a trip to the Banks. The fishermen elected to remain on board rather than risk the danger of a transfer to the fleet of small boats tossing in the rough sea.

Throughout the day the fishermen sat on the decks, trying to dodge the spray and wondering when they were going to start to fish. Finally, the action of the sea got the Sappho in far enough for the passengers to wade ashore. They made their way to the Highlands and from there started homeward aboard boats and trains. Captain Tyndall said that the Sappho went aground when the craft's auxiliary engine failed to function properly. He paid a tribute to Captain McAvoy and the crew of the Edith for their efforts to free the Sappho.

OCEAN TRAVELERS.

Among the passengers arriving yesterday from Hamburg and Southampton on the new Hamburg-American liner Albert Ballin were Mr. and Mrs. Max Warnholz, Dr. and Mrs. Otto Vollbehr, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Ringler, Dr. and Mrs. Max Winter, H. Sutor, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Barrell, Richard Bartel, Clarence D. Dillon, Julius B. Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Frankel, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gradle, Miss Alice Gradle, Miss Lucy Gradle, Walter J. Fensterer, W. Hamel, Dr. L. Mintrop, Bernhard Robinson, Mrs. Julia Roebling, Miss Margaret C. Schneider, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Krug and Mrs. Allyn Goeta.

OUSTED EVOLUTIONIST ACCUSES HIS CHIEF

Special to The New York Times.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 15.—On the eve of the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the University of Tennessee Dr. Jesse W. Sprowles broke his long silence and consented to tell the story of his dismissal from the institution.

Dr. Sprowles told how he withdrew his account from the City National Bank, of which W. S. Shields, one of the university trustees, is President, and how Dr. Morgan, President of the university, called him into his office and told him not to withdraw his account.

Dr. Sprowles fixed responsibility upon Dr. Morgan himself for interference with his plan to use Robinson's book "The Mind in the Making" in his class, and said that it was the fact that the book was predicated on the theory of evolution that caused Dr. Morgan to object to its use.

But the most startling thing in Dr. Sprowles's statement was that Dr. Morgan told him that he (Dr. Morgan) believed in evolution "as much as or more than you, Dr. Sprowles," but that Dr. Morgan said he feared that Tennessee was going to have a "monkey Legislature," such as Kentucky had, and that, therefore, it was necessary to put the "soft pedal" on evolution.

Dr. Morgan has been endorsed by a number of churches as an opponent of evolution, and no correction of the impression that he was opposed to evolution has been made hitherto.

Dr. Sprowles says in his statement that Dr. Morgan has declared that there were no personal hard feelings against him at the university and expresses his belief that Dr. Morgan has sincerely tried to help him to obtain another post.

Although reluctant to make his statement, Dr. Sprowles was persuaded by a newspaper man to do so on the ground that the trustees and the public were entitled to know all the facts concerning the conditions in the State University.

SCHOOLGIRLS OUTRANK BOYS

They Also Outnumber Boys in Graduates From Elementary Department.

Girls outnumbered boys among the graduates of the city's elementary schools this year, according to statistics made public by the Bureau of Reference and Research of the Board of Education. Of the 32,467 pupils graduated from the elementary schools at the last term, 16,375 were girls and 16,092 boys.

The percentage marks of girls graduating were also higher than that of the boys. While the girls obtained a rating of 96.6 per cent., the boys fell behind with 95.7 per cent.

TOURING PARTY HERE IN MOTOR 'PULLMAN'

4 HOUSED COMFORTABLY

George W. Beauchamp, a retired Chicago business man, who arrived here yesterday with his family, showed gaping spectators as he drove along Broadway to his camping place at Van Cortlandt Park, how to "See America First" with a maximum of comfort and a minimum of expenditure.

Mr. Beauchamp and his party spent the day and night in the city as part of their sight-seeing automobile tour of the country in a specially built and equipped automobile which, they averred, has afforded them comforts ample to make up for the absence from home.

As the machine swung from Broadway into Forty-third Street and paused in front of The Times Annex hundreds assembled to inspect it. A reporter found the Beauchamps and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cavert, reclining comfortably on the sofa-seats which at night become double beds.

Parts from a score of makes have contributed to the car built by the Western Truck Corporation of Chicago for the party for $12,000. The combination is a huge gray sedan of Pullman appearance. It is twenty-three feet long, six feet three inches wide, seven feet ten inches high and has a 196-inch wheel base and 56-inch tread.

The body is built of aluminum throughout. In the interior is ample room to move around with comfort. There is a table against one door. Beside it is a double seat under which are hidden a phonograph and a radio set. At the rear is a sofa which unfolds into a double bed much after the manner of a long seat at the front that backs the driver's seat. The back of this seat covers the drawers of the "chiffonier."

At one side is a combination refrigerator and cooking stove. Gasoline and water are piped from tanks in a large compartment above the rear license plate, and there is room for a wash basin and electric attachments for toasting, ironing and other purposes. For diversion, in addition to the phonograph and radio, the driver may press a set of buttons before him and play electric chimes. A dozen copper-screened windows add to the Pullman effect.

A glance shows a small typewriter, fishing tackle, bathing suits, golf sticks, tennis outfits and croquet mallets. On the roof is a canoe and under it are ropes for emergency use. The car is equipped with a six-cylinder 72-horsepower motor.

The party started some months ago on a trip through the West by train and discovered the cost would be more than they wished to pay. They returned to Chicago and rushed work on this special car. They started for the East two weeks ago and are now going to Boston, from which city they will return to Chicago and start over the Yellowstone Trail. Mr. Beauchamp said the trip costs them only $75 a week.

Incidentally, the most enthusiastic member of the group yesterday seemed to be Putty, a wire-haired terrier.

Homesick After Two Months in America—Wife Ends Life After Quarrel With Husband.

Domestic troubles and homesickness for Hungarian hillsides were causes which prompted three women to attempt suicide here yesterday, two being successful.

Elsie Markovits, 18, came from Hungary two months ago to make her home with a brother, Emil, at 959 Jackson Avenue, the Bronx. Emil said not a day since but she had pined desolately for her homeland. Yesterday afternoon Elsie knotted a length of clothesline to a gaspipe in the hall after climbing on a chair. Arranging a noose, she kicked the chair from under her. She was dead on arrival of Dr. Pallin of Lincoln Hospital.

Mrs. Anna Rahaley, 35, of 205 West 102d Street, had a dispute over money matters yesterday morning with Emmett, her husband, a chauffeur, so the latter told the police. Neighbors later found her dead from asphyxiation in a small room off the kitchen. Gas was flowing from open jets, and door and windows were tightly closed. Dr. Dickering of Knickerbocker Hospital recommended investigation, but neither Detectives Fitzgerald and Courtney of the West 100th Street Station nor Assistant Medical Examiner Gonzales found anything to warrant suspicion. Rahaley surmised that his wife might have merely intended to "scare" him and had overestimated her ability to withstand the effects of the fumes.

DERIDED FRENCH NAVY.

Briand Proposed Trip to America in Battleship to Show Its Weakness.

PARIS, July 15.—Aristide Briand's prominence in connection with ratification by the French Government of the Washington armament treaties has brought to light a story told by Myron T. Herrick, the American Ambassador, of how the former Premier wanted to illustrate the decrepitude of the French Navy at the time of the Washington conference.

Just before sailing M. Briand called on Mr. Herrick and asked, "Would you advise me to travel to America on a battleship?"

The Ambassador asked M. Briand if he was subject to seasickness, to which he replied:

"It is not a question of seasickness. I merely thought that if I went to America on France's best battleship her appearance in itself would be the best proof that France is not militaristic."

5 DIE IN FRENCH WRECK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 15.—Five persons were killed and forty-nine injured when a trolley car slipped from Summit Honeck, the most famous tourist centre in the Vosges, and crashed into a second car following it. Only the coolness and courage of the conductor of the second car prevented the death of perhaps forty or more persons.

When the conductor saw that the first car was bound to crash into his trolley he threw on the brakes and rushed the passengers to the ground. A second later the collision occurred, smashing the emptied trolley into matchwood. The hotel proprietor at Honeck, who saw the accident, rushed all his employes to the scene to aid the wounded.

Four persons were found dead and the fifth died immediately after being taken from the wreckage. There was not a passenger on the first car who was not wounded. The accident was due to the failure of the brakes on the first car to clutch as it reached the summit.

From the condition of the second car, it was believed that no passenger would have escaped with his life had it not been for the heroic work of the conductor.

JACK SPERO ELECTED A MAYOR OF MAYORS

The lower east side paid its respects to Washington Heights yesterday at a dinner-conference in the Rumanian Restaurant, 286 Broome Street. By the close vote of four to three the Mayors of Eldridge Street, Broome Street, Avenue B and other thoroughfares elected Jack Spero of the Heights, Chief of the Mayors of New York. How Mr. Hylan will feel when he hears this was not discussed for his name was not mentioned.

The result came as a shock to "Stitch" McCarthy, Mayor of Grand Street, who was the only other candidate. "Wireless Louie" Zeltner, who presided, had all he could do to keep "Stitch" quiet.

"I've got the chair," cried "Stitch" at one time, after discoursing for ten minutes on the telephone company's charges. "I'm sitting on it, so you keep still. My telephone bills used to be $3 or $4 a month. Now they're $14 and $15. We fellers have got to go to the owners of the buildings and tell them to take the wires from the roof if the company don't lower the rates."

When Joe Levy, the "Duke of Essex Street," announced his withdrawal from the race for Chief of Mayors, McCarthy was asked if he also would withdraw. He refused.

Before the dinner was over it was announced that the first parade of the mayors would take place somewhere in Washington Heights, sometime later this month.

"All are going to be mounted," said McCarthy, "and I'm going to ride a mule."

'CIVIC VIRTUE' HAS RIVAL.

Woman on Viennese Statue Tramples on Men.

Those who objected to the statue of "Civic Virtue" because it represents a vigorous male trampling upon women will find solace in the Hegenbarth statue, "Triumph," which will be exhibited at the Anderson Galleries this week. This group represents a woman triumphing over the men she has captivated, trampling them as her brother of City Hall Park scorns his ladies.

The sculptor, President of the Kunstlerhaus of Vienna, officially the leading artist in Austria, has utilized no such lofty symbolism as the creator of "Civic Virtue." But the owner of "Triumph," J. C. Berendsen of San Francisco, now at the Biltmore, feels that it is not a violation of the significance of the statue to see in it that woman's beauty is triumphant over mere man.

Mr. Berendsen is eager to present "Triumph" to New York as the art centre of America if other friends of Austrian art will co-operate with him. As a famous contemporary Austrian sculpture, it might express the appreciation of Austrian artists for the generous aid America has given in the starvation times since the war.

CRITICISES PRAYER-BOOK.

Dr. Shipler, at Church Clinic, Denounces Form of Pleas for the Sick.

More than 100 men and women braved the rain last night to attend the first Sunday evening service of the "soul and body" clinic at St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie. Sitting under dim, colored ceiling lamps, they heard from the Rev. Guy Emery Shipler, editor of The Churchman, that an erroneous picture of God is painted in that part of the Episcopal prayer book which deals with the office of the visitation of the sick.

"The prayers for the sick," said Dr. Shipler, "are the most hideous conceptions of God that have ever been written. That office, of visitation, is full of prayers I personally would not dare say in any sick room, and I am glad to say very few clergymen say them. They don't conceive God to be a tribal God, as the prayers picture Him. The prayers want us to believe that God afflicts His children with sickness. No father would do that."

Dr. Shipler predicted opposition to the clinic from the medical profession and the church. He urged that the patients be not disturbed, for "any movement that is a step forward for humanity has that kind of experience."

TO SIFT WOMAN'S DEATH.

Brooklyn Husband Says Wife Had Been Drinking.

An autopsy will be performed today in the Kings County Hospital, Brooklyn, to determine the cause of death last night of Mrs. Mary Masterson, 40 years old, of 456 Warren Street, Brooklyn. This was determined upon after Detectives Purcell and Murphy of the Butler Street Police Station had questioned John Masterson, husband of the woman, a waiter in a restaurant in Myrtle Avenue. He told the detectives that his wife had been under treatment by a physician for ulcers and also said she had been drinking recently.

Neighbors heard the woman groaning last night and called in Policeman Pienzi, who summoned Dr. Vanche from the Long Island College Hospital. He pronounced the woman dead. There was a bruise on the shoulder and another on the right leg. The husband had a cut over the eye which he said he received in a fall three weeks ago.

HOGAN RECEIVES PARDON.

Governor Reduces Sentence of Former Union Official.

OSSINING, July 15.—Sing Sing attachés announced today that a conditional pardon has just been received at the prison for William Hogan, one-time Treasurer of the Electrical Workers' Union, who was convicted in Manhattan because of a shortage of $27,000 in the union's accounts.

Hogan has steadily maintained that he was out of office three years when the alleged irregularities were discovered. Governor Smith, in lopping two months from his sentence, stated that the reason for commuting the minimum term is that Hogan's family is in dire need of his support. He was serving one year two months to four years.

Thompson Brooke Maury.

Thompson Brooke Maury, who retired in 1916 after thirty-five years in charge of the Weather Forecast of the New York Herald, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William M. Jones, 122 East Thirty-fourth Street. He was born at Fredericksburg, Va., in 1838, fought under Stonewall Jackson in the Civil War and afterward became rector of Trinity Church, Winchester, Va. He was a graduate of the Virginia Episcopal Seminary. After 1867 he devoted himself to writing and editing, chiefly in the field of meteorology and Northern exploration.

Frank M. Clark Dead.

DANBURY, Conn., July 15.—Frank M. Clark, 47, formerly Superintendent of the New York division of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, died here today. He had been ill since last October, when he was stricken with apoplexy in New York City.

Mr. Clark was a native of Taunton, Mass.; he began his railroad career as a station agent and telegraph operator. A special train will take the body to Taunton, Mass., for burial Tuesday.

Wilbur Messer.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Wilbur Messer, LL.D., leader in the Young Men's Christian Association, for thirty-five years General Secretary of the Chicago Y. M. C. A., died today after an illness which had made him unconscious since March 20. The cause of his death was cancer of nasal sinuses, according to his physicians. Dr. Messer was born in 1854.

STEPHEN S. COLVIN DIES SUDDENLY

AUTHOR OF TEXTBOOKS

He Was an Authority on Psychology as Applied to the Measurement of Intelligence.

Dr. Stephen Sheldon Colvin, Professor of Education at Teachers College since the beginning of the last academic year, was found dead in bed yesterday morning, presumably of heart disease, at his residence, 475 Claremont Avenue. He had not been ill recently and had already started two courses in psychology and education at the Columbia University Summer School, where he had held classes for several years.

Dr. Colvin was born in Phenix, R. I., in 1869, and obtained his degree of Bachelor of Philosophy at Brown in 1891, working for The Providence Journal during part of his college course. He taught rhetoric at Brown for three years and then spent two years in Europe, dividing his time between the Universities of Berlin and Strassburg. On his return in 1897 he became English instructor at the Worcester High Schools, leaving in 1901 for the University of Illinois. There he advanced to the chair of psychology by 1907 and in 1912 he went back to Brown as Professor of Educational Psychology, a post he held until coming to Columbia.

As an authority on psychology as applied to the measurement of intelligence Dr. Colvin had acquired a nation-wide reputation, his mental tests for students provoking much discussion. Among his books were "The Learning Process," "Introduction to High School Teaching," and "The Thing in Itself of Schopenhauer."

TWO NEW YORKERS DIE FROM BITES OF INSECTS

One Infected in Camp Near Goshen and the Other in Prospect Park.

Two New Yorkers have died in the past three days of insect bites. One succumbed here after having been bitten in Prospect Park. The other succumbed in Goshen, N. Y., after having been bitten in a camp near there. In both cases physicians were baffled by the virulent effects of poison that entered the system through the tiny punctures.

It was several days ago that a strange insect bit Gunnar Dahl, 34 years old, of 1,321 Franklin Avenue, Bronx, who died yesterday in the Emergency Hospital at Goshen.

Mr. Dahl had been camping near Craigville. A bite on the chin caused intense itching and in a short time swelling caused alarm.

Physicians who were called were puzzled at the unusual nature of the injury and it is thought that the insect may have been of some little known venomous species.

Dahl was in the sheet metal business. He was to have left shortly for the Reserve Officers' Training Camp. A wife and one child survive.

Morton L. Wasserman, 29 years old, an efficiency engineer of 553 Ninth Street, Brooklyn, died on Friday evening at his home of blood poisoning following the bite of an insect eight days before his death in Prospect Park. He was buried yesterday in Washington Cemetery after funeral services at his home.

Mr. Wasserman felt the sting of the bite of the insect as he sped through the park, but paid no attention to it at that time. Later the wound developed into a carbuncle and Dr. Evan M. Evans, who attended Enrico Caruso, was called in. The efforts of the physician were unavailing.

Mr. Wasserman was graduated from New York University and was associated with his father in business.

Rescue Man Buried in Sand Pile.

Benjamin Watson of 6 Bartholdi Place, Yonkers, was caught in a hopper and buried in a pile of sand yesterday near the Hudson River dock at Wells Avenue. A lung motor was used to revive him. He was taken to St. John's Hospital suffering from internal injuries.

WILL AGAIN TRAVEL OLD OREGON TRAIL

PREPARES LECTURES HERE

Seventy-One Years Ago He Drove Overland With Wife and Settled on Coast.

The Oregon Trail will again know an old friend in the person of Ezra Meeker. For seven months Mr. Meeker has been at the Hotel Senton in this city preparing a program of lectures and motion pictures for a trip over the route he traversed as a pioneer.

Though ninety-three years old, Mr. Meeker is positive that he will be able to endure easily the rigors of the ox-team trip he has in prospect. He will leave by train Wednesday to go to Kansas City, Mo., Topeka, Kan., Council Bluffs, Iowa,; Omaha, Lincoln, Grand Island, Freemont and North Platte in Nebraska and points in Wyoming, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

Although he will travel by train and automobile and possibly by airplane in mapping out his course, Mr. Meeker will return to the Missouri River and will re-enact the pioneer expedition of several decades ago, on the final attempt using the same type of conveyance as in the old days. In the last seven months he has been collecting data on the subject of the Oregon Trail and has been making plans for a screen reproduction of his trip with ox-team.

Seventy-one years ago Mr. Meeker, accompanied by his wife and baby, reached the Oregon country after perilous experiences. He settled in 1852 in that portion of it which later became Washington Territory. He said yesterday he believed that he was the only man alive today who was in that country when Washington Territory was created.

Had One Wagon in Train.

"When we started out of Iowa in 1852," he reminisced, "our train consisted of one wagon, two yoke of four-year-old steers and one yoke of cows. We also had an extra cow, which was lost, straying into the river bottom before we crossed the Missouri. Our start was in April, 1852, when our baby was only a month old.

"Along the Missouri River were camps of every kind," said Mr. Meeker. "Most of the people were making merry. The fiddlers and dancers were busy. Here and there, though, were small groups at devotions. Some of the campers had been there a fortnight awaiting their turns to be ferried across by the two scows engaged in that work. We were fortunate enough to discover a scow, almost completely buried, on the sandpit opposite the landing. Its owner permitted us to use it. The regular ferryman tried to stop us with a writ in the hands of the Sheriff. But when the Sheriff tried to stop us a hundred guns appeared and he desisted.

"Up in Wyoming a man was murdered. A council of twelve men held court. The murderer was hanged. The council provided for the murderer's widow and four children. The penalty for stealing was whipping. Minor offenses were arbitrated. Decisions of the council were adhered to as in courts of law.

Thousands Die in Rush.

"Our party consisted of four wagons and thirteen persons, nine men, three women and a baby, at that time. We decided to remain a separate unit though we were all the time in one great train and in sight and hearing of other units. In fact, at times the road was so full of wagons we could not travel in a single track and this accounts for the double tracks now seen in many places along the trail.

"Almost a thousand wagons passed us in their rush after crossing the Missouri, but we caught up with many of them, though we went ahead more slowly. The first rush broke down many of them. The heavy traveling necessitated throwing away cumbersome property. We came upon tables, cupboards, stoves, featherbeds, blankets and pillows. Then we would see abandoned wagons and provisions. Hundreds of wagons and hundreds of tons of goods fell by the wayside.

"When the migration was at its height the column was 500 miles long. There were wagons 300 miles ahead of us. While waiting for one of our sick to recover 1,600 wagons passed us, with whom were 10,000 beasts of burden and 30,000 head of loose stock. It was at points a solid, moving mass 100 feet wide. The dust was so thick the lead team of oxen at times could not be seen from the wagon.

"The casualties were many. A woman who kept a diary recorded in nine days seventy-five new graves and wrote: 'If we should go by the camping grounds we should see five times as many graves.' It is estimated that cholera and other causes accounted for 5,000 deaths on the plains in 1852.

"Herds of buffalo were often seen. When we passed up the Platte into what is now Western Nebraska there was some relief from the dust. On the higher lands of Wyoming the traveling was more pleasant. Passing Pacific Springs at the summit of the Rockies we rolled down to Big Sandy Creek. Here we left the Salt Lake trail and took the Sublette cut-off over the Bear River. Some in our party left us in Idaho and took the California trail.

'At Snake River the dust was thick again, the heat intense and the thirst maddening. Many lost their lives in trying to go along the river in their wagon beds. After Snake River we had one of the most trying stretches of the journey. Men and beasts were weak. Provisions were scarce. At The Dalles on the Columbia River my wife, baby and I went down the river by boat."

FIND AIRPLANES BEST TO FIGHT AIRCRAFT

WASHINGTON, July 15.—While post-war development of anti-aircraft weapons has been satisfactory, in the opinion of American military experts, recent game-board experience at the Army War College served to stress sharply the fact that airplanes themselves will in the future form the chief defense against hostile aircraft.

In the course of the war game played at the college here as the concluding work of the class just graduated, a combined army and navy defense problem was set in which a "hostile" fleet made a surprise attack on the entrance to Delaware Bay to land an "enemy" military force of 100,000 men.

When word of the impending fleet attack reached the "Blue," or defending commander, his forces were so disposed that he was compelled to rely on aircraft to repel the attempted landing and rushed a theoretical fleet of bombers to the scene. The "Blue" aircraft resources were not sufficient to provide, also, an adequate fleet of combat planes to accompany and protect the bombers in their mission against the enemy fleet.

The enemy naval command, however, had anticipated an aircraft defense and came in with all available combat planes crowded on the naval airplane carriers to be sent out on the approach to shore to beat off the defending bombers.

War College umpires, after careful consideration of all elements in the game at this stage, were compelled to award victory to the enemy air fleet because of the lack of fighting planes to protect the defending bombing squadrons. It was held that the bombers would certainly have been brought down, or driven off, by the enemy combat planes and the umpires ruled that the enemy landing had been accomplished.

This result conformed with expectations of army officers who have studied the probabilities of future naval and land engagements. The war game, however, was not of a nature to serve as a test of the various types of land defenses against aircraft, developed since the war, to supplement fighting air squadrons in protection of cities or camps against hostile bombers.

FORD BACKERS FIGHT M'ADOO IN KANSAS

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., July 15.—Kansas admirers of Henry Ford will make an effort to swing the Kansas delegation in the next Democratic National Convention to the Detroit manufacturer.

The purpose of Ford's admirers was made to appear almost a certainty last week when former Governor George H. Hodges came out for the auto maker. The announcement was made through The Johnson County Democrat, owned by Frank Hodges, a brother of the former Governor, and published by S. T. Seaton, who was the Governor's private secretary when Hodges was the Chief Executive of Kansas.

Probably nothing that has happened in Kansas since former Governor H. J. Allen made his Ku Klux Klan campaign speeches has caused as much of a stir as this action of the Hodges faction of the Democratic Party in swinging behind the Ford boom. All politica. observers agree that it means a red-hot fight between the two dominating factions of the party, with the Hodges followers fighting for Ford and the Sam Amidon-Jouett Shouse group fighting for W. G. McAdoo. Probably the dominating force in this contest will be Governor Davis's followers, who, at present, want to see the Kansas delegation instructed for Davis. Much significance is seen in the fact, however, that Governor Davis and former Governor Hodges held a conference in Olathe soon after the Ford announcement was made by Hodges, and, in the event that the McAdoo pressure becomes too strong, there is every indication that there may be a joining of the Hodges and Davis forces.

The announcement of the former Democratic Governor makes it certain that the plan of the Amidon-Shouse faction to send a "hand-picked" McAdoo delegation to the convention is not going to be easy sailing, because there will be a lively contest for the "big four" places on the delegation.

TAMMANY NOT TO MOVE.

Grand Sachem Denies That the Hall Has Been Sold.

Reports that Tammany Hall had been sold and that the organization was going to move to quarters in West Fifty-fourth Street, occupied at present by a club, were denied yesterday by John R. Voorhis, Grand Sachem of Tammany. Mr. Voorhis admitted that negotiations for the sale of the hall were pending, but declared that the chief difficulty at present was the failure of parties who were seeking to buy the Fourteenth Street property to make an acceptable offer.

"We are considering several propositions, but no deal has been consummated," said Mr. Voorhis. "If the hall is sold it is probable that we will move uptown."

FRENCH SMOKERS COMPETE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 15—A novel competition was held this afternoon for smokers as part of the fourteenth of July celebration, which extended over today.

The winner of the cigar section of the competition was M. Bessaque, who smoked a cigar to the bitter end in one minute and forty-eight seconds. A speed demon of the pipe, in the second contest, finished a bowl of tobacco in five minutes and fifty-five seconds. The prize for slowness was given to M. Jacques, who made a cigarette last thirty-seven minutes. The competitors in this match were disqualified for relighting.

FOR NEW BATHING COSTUMES

Prize Competition to Be Feature of Trouville-Deauville Season.

PARIS, July 15.—One of the features of the Trouville-Deauville season is to be a bathing costume competition for substantial prizes. Paris and London dressmakers are directing their attention to the bathing costume as a consequence, and many novel and dazzling creations are promised.

The dress parade on the beach will be preceded by a swimming contest in which many well-known swimmers will take part, though it is more than probable that competitors in one will not appear in the other.

PUT COST OF BONUS AT $125,000,000,000

Ex-Service Men's League Opposed to Compensation Holds Need for It Is Past.

SAY MAJORITY IS HOSTILE

Contend War Benefited 90% of Fighters Mentally and Physically —Warn of Bogus Claims.

Basing its estimate on the sum paid to Civil War veterans and dependents in fifty-seven years, the Ex-Service Men's Anti-Bonus League yesterday declared that payments to World War veterans and dependents in a period of the same length would require expenditure of $125,000,000,000. This sum, the organization said, did not include "adjusted compensation" that might be paid to able-bodied war veterans.

"In the fight for a bonus for able-bodies ex-service men," said the League, "the interests behind the measure, well-organized and financed, have persistently represented to Congress and the public that the veterans are united in their demand for it. Such representations are false. The demand is made by a strikingly small, though militant, minority of the organized veteran membership of the nation.

"The League believes it is voicing the sentiments on the bonus of the majority of former service men when it declares that this majority does not favor it. The League knows that large groups of veterans throughout the nation have publicly declared themselves in opposition to any form of bonus or compensation to able-bodied ex-service men and knows also that numbers have left veterans' organizations that had been fighting for a bonus—which is the same reason why founders and members of this organization left them."

The league contended that the "only possible justification for a cash payment or its equivalent to able-bodied ex-service men would have been for the purpose of tiding them over the readjustment period immediately following their discharge," and the organization held that just as the period of readjustment had passed, so had the need for a bonus.

The league declared that 90 per cent. of the uninjured World War veterans had come out of the war "far better equipped physically and mentally to fight the battles of civilian life than when they went in." In the opinion of the league only one out of five veterans favors the bonus.

"Pension history," said the league, "clearly establishes the fact that, regardless of whether it should be so or not, or whether it was intended or not, a first pension bill successfully passed and paid—and spent—is quickly followed by another and another and still another; the first one but serving as the entering point of the wedge—the establishing of a precedent.

"The few dollars each able-bodied World War veteran would receive under 'adjusted compensation' would soon be spent, but the 4,000,000 veterans, sure to be vastly augmented as time passes by an army of alleged veterans and alleged veteran dependents, will remain to be exploited by the self-seeking politician and pension agents who always have cultivated and always will cultivate the field such opportunities create."

COUPET'S LITTLE PLANE WINS 'FLIVVER' DERBY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 15.—The Air Jitney Distance Competition was won this afternoon by Lucien Coupet, driving a Farman plane, who made a flight of three hundred and ten kilometers in four hours, forty-six minutes and seventeen seconds. Coupet, who is 100,000 francs richer for the performance, was the only competitor to finish, the other six being forced down by the weather, motor and fuel troubles.

Georges Barbot, the famous aviator, who recently made a double cross-channel flight, as well as a number of demonstration flights in America, was awarded second prize, 20,000 francs. In his Dewoitine plane, he covered 250 kilometers in three hours, seventeen minutes and forty-seven seconds before he was forced down by fuel trouble.

The weather conditions were exceedingly unfavorable to the tiny planes which, with the pilots, were not permitted to exceed 250 kilograms in weight. A heavy rain fell immediately after the start and the fliers experienced great difficulty in following the course.

The well-known pilot, Rossoutrot, in a Farman plane, was forced down by rain and turned over in landing. Lieutenant Thoru, noted for his seven-hour motorless glide in a regulation army airplane at Biskra, also was forced down by the rain. Final, in a Deweitine plane, followed him because of motor trouble. Doret in a Dewoitine was forced to land in his ninteenth round with motor trouble after he had gone 190 kilometers.

Coupet, winner of the competition, consumed five and a half litres of gas per hundred kilometers, or thirty-four francs, worth of fuel for the entire course. The prize for the competition was offered by the Petit Parisieu.

CLOTHIERS TO TRY BUDGET.

Retailers Will Give New Cost-Cutting System a Month's Test.

CHICAGO, July 15 (Associated Press). —Better values in men's wearing apparel is the main object of a budgeting system which takes in every detail of clothing store management and is being distributed among 6,000 members of the National Association of Retail Clothiers for a month's trial before the annual convention of the organization, which will be held here the last week in September.

The budget represents not alone three years' work of the National Association, but also of leaders in the wholesale and retail field of the clothing and furnishings industry, accountants, efficiency experts and professors prominently identified with business research at the universities of Harvard, Wisconsin and Northwestern.

The new system is said by officials of the association to be one of the most progressive steps ever taken in the clothing trade, as it is intended to show the merchant how to keep down the overhead and get his goods to the ultimate consumer at the least possible expense and at the same time render better service.

DEFENDS KISSING MINISTER

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., July 15.—The wife of the Rev. George L. Paine, the Episcopal rector under fire for kissing Mrs. Priscilla Hague, bride of a young naval lieutenant, today declared that she considered the affair "too insignificant for notice."

Mrs. Paine said she had the utmost faith in her husband and that she was confident that an entirely wrong construction had been placed upon his action. The rector invited the 19-year-old bride for a ride in his automobile and kissed her as they were walking through a meadow.

Mrs. Paine said her husband was in much need of a vacation and that they were starting Monday for their Summer place at Sutton, Me., which is near Bar Harbor. "There has been altogether too much talk about the affair, anyway," she said.

BOOTLEGGERS SEEK JOBS AS DRY AGENTS

PROVE CLUMSY BRIBERS

WANTED TO "ROB" HIMSELF

Had a Scheme to Remove His Own Rum From Warehouse and Pay a Bonus on Each Case.

PROHIBITION INSIDE OUT
Second Instalment

In today's instalment of the official story of prohibition enforcement, Commissioner Haynes continues his disclosures of the huge bribes offered to Federal agents by the bootleggers. Tomorrow's chapter describes how the bootleg organization works; it tells of the "protection" from high officials promised by the rum-runners to an enforcement agent if he would aid them.

By ROY A. HAYNES
U. S. Prohibition Commissioner.

THE illegal liquor interests, naturally enough, have resorted to every strategy to secure appointments for their representatives on the prohibition force. Their persistence has been equaled only by their ingenuity. Their candidates have bombarded officials with futile recommendations; they have applied political pressure, and, in one reported instance, offered a liberal reward to get one man on the force. Vigilant as the Government has been, no doubt these interests have not been entirely unsuccessful.

The intent of these interests, of course, is transparent. A job on the prohibition force, to their mind, is but a quick and easy road to ill-gotten riches; a bootlegger's representative in the inner circle could co-operate with his confederates in their illicit undertakings with full knowledge of pitfalls which beset them. Among these interests the idea persists that any one employed by the prohibition unit can turn the spigot of illicit liquor on or off at will. As a matter of fact, no one employe could help them much under the system of checks and balances now in operation; but a few unfortunate instances of dishonesty on the part of prohibition employes have been so magnified and distorted that the bootlegger regards even the humblest clerk in our offices as holding the power to divert liquor at any time to unlawful purposes.

Because of this belief, presumably, bribes have been offered fairly frequently to prohibition workers. One of the State Directors recently estimated that within a given month's time he could have accumulated at least $1,000,000 in bribes. This case might be termed higher than the average for temptation.

After failing to get his representative a job on the force the bootlegger's next move is to feel his way among the personnel of the enforcement force until he finds an employe who, in his judgment, will "do business," and then proceed to open bribery negotiations.

An Incautious Briber.

A Middle Western distiller, for instance, not long ago came to a field worker with the suggestion that he (the distiller) would pay handsomely for the privilege of "robbing" his own warehouse undisturbed. He had many thousand cases of liquor on hand, he explained, and these he could dispose of only at comparatively small profit for non-beverage use. If allowed to divert the liquor to bootleggers, he naively pointed out, profits would be so much greater that a handsome "commission" could be paid on the business.

Such close check had been kept on withdrawals from the distillery, however, that the distiller had found it impossible to divert the liquor to illicit channels. He had sounded the officers at the distillery, but they either were "too honest," he said, or were afraid of being detected by investigators. What he wanted, therefore, was a "business understanding" with some one in authority.

"We'll draw up a written contract," he suggested. "Then there won't be any misunderstanding about what you do or what you get."

The Government agent to whom this suggestion was made pointed out that such a contract would not only be invalid, as it could not be enforced, but would be damaging evidence in case of detection. This point pleased the distiller greatly. He seemed to regard it as reassuring proof that the agent was a wise and careful worker, willing to take a chance only if the odds against him were not too great.

The distiller insisted, however, on dealing directly with the State Director. That official declined to meet the distiller, but delegated a confidential representative to negotiate with him and secure needed evidence, if possible. In carrying on negotiations the distiller came repeatedly to the Director's office, always meeting, however, with the Director's representative and not with the Director himself.

His opening offer was a bonus of $50,000 and a "commission" of $10 a case on 5,000 cases. After 5,000 cases were withdrawn, he said, he would pay another $50,000 and begin again with the "commission" arrangement for the next 5,000 cases.

"For every 5,000 cases," he proposed, "there'll be a $50,000 bonus besides the commission of $10 a case."

The Director disapproved the bonus offer, but instructed the agent to follow through on the proposal of $10 a case "commission." However, the distiller still insisted upon seeing the Director. He called repeatedly at the office, but the Director refused to open personal negotiations. On one occasion the distiller called on Saturday morning, and, exhibiting a $50,000 check, announced that he had come to the end of the rope—that he would give the Director only two hours, or until the banks closed at noon, to decide whether to make $50.000 or not.

Surprising the Tempter.

The distiller waited till noon in an anteroom, and then went away dejectedly. Over Sunday he recovered from his depression and early the following Monday morning called the confidential worker on the telephone.

"I'm giving you one more chance," he said. "I want to see Blank & Co.'s file. I'll be around in fifteen minutes and it will be worth $500 to you to show me the file."

The distiller had become a daily nuisance by that time and it was decided to end the negotiations. With the Director's approval the confidential worker obtained Blank & Co.'s file and took it to the distiller, who was waiting with another confidential agent in a small room at the end of the hallway.

He handed the agent a roll of bills. The roll amounted to $300, or $200 less than the sum promised—a fairly typical illustration of the regard a briber has for his own word.

"Give me back that file, you crook," the agent shouted. The distiller was astounded.

"But I've just paid you to look at it," he complained. And then, glancing down, he saw the agent's revolver pressed hard against him.

The distiller was dumfounded when told that he was under arrest. He offered no resistance, but simply could not understand what had happened. They led him away to answer a charge of bribery.

Most Credulous Criminals.

The would-be briber almost begs for punishment. Generally, he is the most credulous of criminals and sometimes his lack of judgment is almost unbelievable. A vivid illustration of this tendency was obtained in operations at another city of the agent who had developed the case described in the preceding chapter.

That agent had been approached by a crooked employe who wanted him to "do business" with bootleggers in that city. The agent was told, "This will be easy pickings," but pretended to doubt the statement, whereupon the employe promised to get him all the "grands" (thousand-dollar bills) he wanted.

"I'll send you a sample of what you can get when I go back home," the man said.

The next day the other agent received—by wire—a remittance of $1,000. This promising lead beckoned him to return when the former case was closed. At that time, however, the entire State was greatly agitated by the seizures that had been made and it seemed highly improbable that the illegal traffic, reeling from the body blow just received, would lower its guard and invite a repetition of the same punishment.

However, when the general agent arrived, the local employe, after upbraiding him for "what happened," asked him if he still was willing to "do business." Upon receiving a satisfactory reply, the worker immediately opened negotiations with the bootleggers.

Within forty-eight hours the bootleggers sent him $6,000 and with it a message that all he had to do was "to look the other way." The day after the bribe was received, the agent met the bootleggers.

"We're going to open up tomorrow," they told him.

"Are you?" he asked.

"Sure thing." And they did. Other agents were summoned to carry out seizure plans. The conspirators started operations as they had said they would, and as each truck came onto the street the driver was overpowered and the contents seized. The case against the bootleggers was turned over to the Department of Justice and the crooked employe was summarily dealt with.

Acting Up to the Part.

The general agent, incidentally, was besieged by bootleggers from other sections, all of whom wanted to buy protection. On one occasion he received in his office a group of them who, without preliminary of any sort, openly began bribery proposals. He jumped from his chair, to the astonishment of his callers, and nervously paced the floor.

"I can't stand it," he exclaimed, "I can't stand it. Think of what will happen to my wife when they catch me. It will kill her. My children, too. The disgrace—I'm going to end it all now."

He started on the the run for the window, eight floors above the busy street. Like a flash his callers were upon him. They forced him back gently to his chair and while the leader tried to calm him the others withdrew to the corner for consultation.

"We can't crowd this fellow," the agent heard one of them mutter. "He's too much of a prima donna. We got to go slow with him; don't rush him and get him all excited and riled up."

"Handstands" performed by Roger Richards, 6 years old, on the head of Alice, the Bronx Zoo elephant, before crowds of spellbound children yesterday, proved nearly fatal to Mildred Protese, 10, of 187 Spencer Street, Newark.

Mildred was one of several youthful passengers riding in a howdah-like saddle on the elephant's back who were properly carried away by little Roger's carryings on. She leaned out too far in an attempt to see better, and fell to the ground, eight feet below and struck on her head. She was taken to Fordham Hospital, suffering from possible fracture of the skull.

Alice, a children's favorite at the Zoo, seemed to sense the accident for she stopped at once. Roger is the son of Dick Richards, the elephant's keeper.

3 KILLED AS AUTO HITS EMBANKMENT

DRIVER SERIOUSLY HURT

Special to The New York Times.

DANBURY, Conn., July 14. — Archie Huell of 156 Henry Street, Brooklyn, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tyler of Danbury were killed in an automobile accident on the Danbury-New Milford Road three miles from Danbury tonight. Herman Schroeder, owner and operator of the automobile, suffered a fractured skull and may die. Miss Theresa Hoffman of 1,072 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn, also a passenger in Schroeder's automobile, was uninjured, but Max Simon of Danbury, father of Mrs. Tyler, was badly bruised and suffered internal injuries.

According to the story which reached Danbury a few minutes after the accident, Schroeder and his party were headed toward Danbury, traveling at a moderate rate of speed, when Schroeder was forced to turn out of the road to avoid striking another car, which was traveling rapidly. In doing so he lost control of the wheel, his automobile running up an embankment.

According to some witnesses, Miss Hoffman was thrown clear of the machine as it somersaulted down the embankment in rolling back to the highway. It turned over, crushing Mr. and Mrs. Tyler and Huell beneath its heavy tonneau. Schroeder remained at the wheel and attempted to right the car, but without avail. Huell died as he was being taken to the Danbury Hospital emergency ward, and Mr. and Mrs. Tyler died on their way to the hospital in an ambulance.

None of the witnesses of the accident was able to tell which driver was to blame, whether it was Schroeder or the driver of the speeding car headed in his direction. Schroeder's car was badly damaged when it turned over and it will be as difficult to ascertain, it was said, whether or not his steering gear failed. Schroeder's home is at 824 Ninetieth Street, Woodhaven, L. I.

Picknicker Killed Near Carlstadt.

In precisely the same manner and in the same circumstances that resulted in the death of a man near Carlstadt, N. J., on last Saturday night, an unidentified man was run down and killed early yesterday morning by an automobile, the driver of which escaped. The two accidents occurred on the Paterson Plank Road near the Carlstadt bridge.

The man who was killed yesterday morning was one of several Hudson County men who attended a picnic near Carlstadt. He was one of a group of three who were walking along the road when the machine sped out of the darkness and bowled him over. He was carried in another automobile to the North Hudson County Hospital, where he was pronounced dead. Because of the similarity of the accidents, Detective Nathan Allyn of Bergen County was assigned to make an investigation.

The erratic course of an automobile in Broadway at 110th Street caught the attention of Policeman Meade of Traffic C, and the policeman watched the machine. The zig-zagging automobile knocked over a traffic signal in a safety zone at 110th Street and the policeman arrested the driver, John Wilkinson, a salesman, of Charlotte, N. C., living temporarily at 130 Claremont Avenue. He was charged with driving an automobile while intoxicated.

Three men were injured when two automobiles collided on Rocky Hill Road, between Bayside and Queens Village. The machines were operated by Edward Ward of 321 Hillside Avenue, Nutley, N. J., and Harry Steele of 95 East Tenth Street, Whitestone, L. I. Joseph McAlevy of 237 Thirteenth Street, Whitestone, an occupant of Steele's automobile, suffered a fractured ankle and was taken to Flushing Hospital. The others injured received lacerations.

Woman Driver Summoned.

Michael Dottaro, 32 years old, of 69 Beaver Street, Jamaica, was struck by an automobile driven by Mrs. Amelia Pederson of 715 Sixtieth Street, Brooklyn, at Rockaway Boulevard and Lahey Avenue, South Ozone Park. He was taken to Jamaica Hospital suffering from a possible fracture of the skull. Mrs. Pederson was summoned to appear in Jamaica Police Court today to answer a charge of driving without a license.

Mrs. Rose Zinkin, Miss Naomi Zinkin, Mrs. J. Diamond and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Spiecer, all of 602¼ Twelfth Avenue, Belmar, N. J., were slightly injured when the Spiecer automobile collided with a truck in Twelfth Avenue, Belmar. They were treated at the Ann Mary Memorial Hospital at Spring Lake.

Elizabeth Reilly, 23, of Rockaway Boulevard and Farmers Avenue, Springfield, was struck by an automobile driven by James McGuire of 106 Forley Avenue, Elmhurst. She suffered from shock and contusions of the right leg and shoulder. She was attended and taken to her home.

Edward Kane, 20, of 315 West Thirty-fifth Street, Manhattan, while crossing Rockaway Boulevard at New York Avenue, Jamaica, was struck by an automobile driven by Harry Roberts of 136 West 131st Street, Manhattan. He was removed to St. Mary's Hospital suffering from abrasions of the arms, legs and face.

While repairing his automobile, Emil Tanhurst of 19 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, was struck by an automobile driven by R. B. Martin at Rockaway Boulevard, near Springfield Road. Martin lives at 473 Hemlock Street, Brooklyn. Tanhurst was treated for lacerations of the knees and was taken to his home.

William B. Weidman, owner of a hotel in Yardville, N. J., was killed about five miles from Trenton when he attempted to drive his automobile over the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks ahead of a train. The train was bound to Wrightstown with soldiers from New York City going to the civilian training camp at Camp Dix.

Two Women Hurt in Auto Crash.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 15.—Marsden J. Perry Jr., speeding to Newport early Saturday evening in his new automobile, came in collision with the car of Miss Winona M. Gay of Fall River on the east main road, Middletown. As a result of the accident Miss Gay was cut and bruised and was taken to the Newport Hospital, as was her friend, Mrs. Margaret Slack of Providence, who was more seriously injured, for she was thrown out of the car.

HOLYOKE FACES A STRIKE.

HOLYOKE, Mass., July 15.—Holyoke's paper mills face a shut down Tuesday, for officials of the Stationary Firemen's Union have announced a vote to go on strike at thaat time for a wage increase from 73 to 80 cents an hour, and double time on Sundays and all holidays. The manufacturers refused this increase a few months ago, stating that business conditions would not warrant it.

OSSINING, July 15.—It was announced at Sing Sing today that Keepers Cuthbert and Hartje, both employed in the prison death house, were suspended from duty because of a fist fight in the corridor of the death house, which was witnessed by several murderers from their cells.

Warden Lewis E. Lawes would not discuss the matter beyond admitting that he had suspended the two keepers without pay until Aug. 1, "for infraction of rules."

According to testimony at a hearing conducted by the Warden, the fight occurred a few nights ago. The details did not become known outside of the prison until today. If the allegations made on both sides are true, the murderers got plenty of excitement watching the two heavyweight guards battle, and it was learned that among the condemned inmates who had places of vantage were William Creasy, who has been granted a new trial in the death of Miss Edith Lavoy, a teacher of Freeport, L. I.; Frank Fevrola, in the death house more than two years for the killing of Genero Nazzero in Yonkers, and Angelo Tumberello, there two years for the murder of Louis Balsamo, in Brooklyn.

Attorney Edgar L. Ryder defended Keeper Cuthbert at the hearing. Cuthbert was in charge of the late shift. The row started about midnight, when Cuthbert said he told Hartye to put out the electric light so that the condemned men could go to sleep. Hartye is said to have resented the order. A quarrel followed which led to the fight. The two keepers fought until one was floored on the cement floor. After a short interval, witnesses said, the fight was resumed, with the result that one keeper was badly bruised and the other got a black eye.

Hartye made charges to the Warden against Cuthbert, and the suspension followed. Parole Officer Daniel Ryan and Keeper Kelly, who have lodging quarters, when off duty, in the death house, were attracted by the noise, but when called as witnesses they testified that they did not see the fight.

The new death house is a prison within a prison, and news of what occurs there is slow in reaching the time-serving prisoners and guards in the main prison. There are eleven guards for the death house. Three were on duty at the time of the fight.

BOOTLEG COLONY FLEES CAMP DIX

SELL IN NEAR-BY TOWNS

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP DIX, N. J., July 15.—Peaceful and quiet as any country village, Wrightstown today welcomed the vanguard of students for the reserve officers' training camp, which officially opens tomorrow morning. By automobile and train load the young men reached the old war camp today for a fortnight's study of the modern war game. With Mayor Hillman Croshaw, the farmer executive, who single handed put to flight the small army of bootleggers and their female confederates who gathered here during the last week, still sitting on the official lid, the little boom town of cantonment days saw its first closed Sunday in five years.

The camp has been established in that section of the post immediately adjacent to the village. Quarters for the students are in the convalescent wards of the old base hospital at the intersection of the Lakewood and Browns Mills Roads.

Rum-runners figured that it would be "easy picking" to slip hooch across the line to any thirsty student officers, but that was before the farmer Mayor issued his edict.

Mayor Croshaw said this afternoon that it had not been necessary to deputize his farmer neighbors and arm them with shot guns to clean up the town.

"The bootleggers know we mean business," he said; "we have played only one card so far. If necessary to use them, we have three or four more up our sleeve. Tar and feathers are not a part of the official plan of combating lawlessness, but some of our citizens are indignant enough over the continued law defiance of some of these alien squatters to adopt unusual tactics to get rid of them."

Mayor's Orders Obeyed.

Three times today the Mayor, on an inspection tour, walked into town from his farm. He found his orders carried out to the letter, along the Jobstown Road. Not a joint was open. Only an ice cream parlor or two were doing business. The booze runners and the women who have been infesting the streets for several days, have vanished. They had not waited to test the Mayor's promise to parade them out of town before a company of rustic minute men armed with shotguns nor to become acquainted with the painting ability of tar and feather artists. The shacks in an old lumber yard which have been a notorious headquarters for the undesirables, were as quiet and vacant as the rest of the village.

At the close of the morning service in the village church, where prayers were offered for the "return of the spirit of civic righteousness," Mayor Croshaw was publicly thanked by the pastor and members of the congregation. Men and women pledged him their support in any move to drive out the undesirables.

But while Wrightstown was bone dry, it was a different story in New Egypt and along some of the country roads, where it is alleged bootleggers in automobiles publicly dispensed intoxicants. Desperate over the losses they face from goods stored near Wrightstown in anticipation of a market during the training camps, the bootleggers are said to have taken every opportunity today to unload. Only a few of their customers were soldiers.

A squad of State police, sent to the camp zone under orders from Governor Silzer to aid in the clean-up, have opened headquarters in Wrightstown. They found little to do in Wrightstown after Mayor Croshaw got busy, but they will extend their activities to other villages near the camp.

Federal Agents on Guard.

Federal enforcement agents in plain clothes and uniforms are said to have come into the zone last night under orders from Commissioner Haynes with orders to remove any cause for complaint from the military authorities that booze was interfering with the morale and efficiency of the training camp.

Brig. Gen. Graves, former commander of the American Expeditionary Force in Siberia during the war, who will command the training camp, made a final inspection of the arrangements for care of the students today. He will welcome the students in person tomorrow. The commandant said he was satisfied with the work of civic authorities in eliminating the bootleggers' menace to the camp and announces that Captain Killian, head of the Provost Guard, had effected plans for strict enforcement in the camp.

HIRSHFIELD ATTACKS CRAIG

Does Not Employ Enough Clerks as Tax Receiver, He Says.

Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield yesterday made public a report to Mayor Hylan attacking Controller Charles L. Craig for the conduct of the office of Receiver of Taxes. Mr. Hirshfield declared, in effect, that the Controller did not employ enough clerks to do the work of the office and that in consequence the city lost interest on deposits which would more than compensate for the extra staff.

The Hirshfield report is based upon the complaint of Walter Grynwald of Brooklyn that he had not received a receipted tax bill for payment on lots at Woodside, Long Island City. As a result of the complaint, said the Commissioner of Accounts, he had investigated and learned that the office of Receiver of Taxes was from five to six weeks late in depositing checks and money orders for payments.

"To expedite and properly handle this business when the payment of taxes is so heavy," the report said, "the Controller is empowered to employ temporary clerks. It was found that such temporary clerks are being employed for about one month only and that when employed the number of such temporary clerks is wholly inadequate to perform this work in a business-like manner and give the taxpayer proper attention. * * * In my opinion the man responsible for the whole situation is Controller Craig."

ANDERSON SET A SPY TO WATCH TAMMANY

William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, speaking yesterday at a union meeting in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Hempstead, L. I., described how he had sent a spy among Tammany politicians and how his emissary had discovered that Tammany leaders had no evidence on which they could get Anderson indicted. He said his emissary reported that the Tammany politicians were lamenting their failure and cursing about it, and that they expressed their desire to see the head of the Anti-Saloon League in this State "railroaded."

Among other things he said:

"Tammany and Governor Smith have been shocked and disappointed to find that the Governor's approval of dry enforcement repeal has proved a political dud instead of a bombshell in the dry camp. They are bitter over the fact that their last Winter's attempt to ruin and discredit me, which was pushed mainly to facilitate the repeal of the dry law, has not disturbed and demoralized the church constituency of the Anti-Saloon League. They are amazed to find that their poison gas bombardment has not only not killed my influence, but has not even crippled either my writing arm or my talking jaw.

"Mr. Banton is a church member from the South, professedly personally in favor of prohibition, who was put on the ticket by Tammany Boss Murphy as a bid to the church, prohibition and law and order element at a time when Mr. Murphy did not know that Tammany was going to have such a walkaway in the city election. Mr. Banton, the District Attorney, according to the testimony of close friends before this matter assumed its present phases, is an earnest aspirant for the Tammany nomination for Governor.

"In due time I shall show the astounding contrast between his effort to disrupt the Anti-Saloon League and his efforts in the direction of honest, really effective breaking up of the illegal liquor traffic carried on by the larger places which have been most profitable to Tammany, and shall interpret for the public the facts in so far as that may be necessary.

"I had a representative last Winter, unknown to the wets, who circulated among the Tammany politicians who knew all the inside dope. They all admitted that they had nothing on me, many of them admitting it with curses and lamentations and the expression of desire that I be 'railroaded' in any event. They said frankly that there was no expectation of convicting me, but that an indictment was to be used, if one could be secured, to destroy my influence, to demoralize the Anti-Saloon League, to get me out of the way of the repeal of the State enforcement code and out of the way of Governor Smith's chances in 1924.

"It is the District Attorney's business, if he believes that a crime has been committed, to present the evidence to the Grand Jury; to procure a valid indictment if possible; to bring the case to trial upon this indictment, and to present his evidence and thereby put the responsibility up to a Judge and jury. More than this is not required by law of the District Attorney. In this he is entitled to protection from criticism or any attempt to influence his action.

"However, when the District Attorney departs from the exact line of his official duty and through propaganda tries to convict an individual in the public mind by ex parte statements for its subconscious effect upon the jury that is ultimately to try the case he is acting in his own behalf to serve his own personal or political ends of the forces that control him. And it is perfectly proper for any person so attacked to defend himself by any legitimate means which the District Attorney forces him to use.

"I have proved to the satisfaction of every fair-minded person the deals that have been pulled off between Tammany and certain Republican leaders to betray law enforcement Republicans and elect Tammany wets. Governor Whitman was betrayed. An effort was made to betray Governor Miller, which failed the first time and succeeded the second time. The next deal slated to be pulled off is one in which the beneficiaries are to be Governor Smith and young Theodore Roosevelt, one a beer nullification Democrat and the other a beer nullification Republican.

"And I want to serve notice now that even in the seemingly impossible event that I should be convicted on perjured testimony, a miscarriage of justice which seems inconceivable even in New York, they still could not rob me of my rights and railroad me into prison in time to prevent my exposing this deal, with its betrayal of President Harding and the national Republican Party in the campaign of 1924."

LITHUANIANS TO CELEBRATE

Thank America for Recognition—Anniversary Fete July 27.

Preparatory to the celebration of the first anniversary of the recognition of the Lithuanian Republic on July 27, the United Lithuanian Societies of Greater New York yesterday held an open air mass meeting in Forest Park.

The speakers told of the struggle that Lithuania is making, and expressed the hope that Vilna, the capital of the republic, will soon be taken out of Polish rule. Telegrams were sent to President Harding and Secretary Hughes, thanking them for the stand of the United States concerning the recognition of Lithuania.

CORRIGAN ATTACKED IN ENRIGHT LETTER

Mayor Told "Scathing Denunciation" of Magistrate by High Court Will Aid War on Crime.

CONDEMNS "JUDICIAL BIAS"

Record of Reversed Sentence on Patrolman Sent to Mayor—Another Cuvillier Statement.

Police Commissioner Enright yesterday made public a letter to Mayor Hylan attacking Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan, against whom the Commissioner has brought criminal libel proceedings for his action in the case of Patrolman Patrick Lennen in the arrest of Owen E. Watkins. Lennon's sentence to the workhouse for thirty days of Magistrate Corrigan, following the arrest of Watkins, was reversed by the Appellate Division.

Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier also made public another statement on the police situation. In it he attacked Commissioner Enright for his order to members of the Police Department to report to headquarters on criticisms of the police administration. The Assemblyman told reporters that three more cases of alleged police brutality had come to his attention and that he was reporting them to the proper prosecuting officials.

After submitting to the Mayor the record in the Lennon case, Commissioner Enright, in his letter to the Mayor, said:

"It is very unusual, and only in a conspicuous case of unlawful and oppressive conduct on the part of a trial Magistrate, that such a scathing denunciation is administered by our highest judicial court. Such unlawful conduct and proceedings on the part of a police Magistrate strikes at the very foundation of the administration of justice in our criminal courts and, indeed, reaches out a menacing hand against members of this department in the enforcement of all laws and the preservation of public order.

"This decision of the court is very timely, for it clearly points out the great difficulties encountered by many officers of this department in the honest and fearless performance of their duty, and in the presentation of criminals before the bar of justice in some of the lower courts of this city.

Encourages Criminals, He Says.

"A few police Magistrates, and I am glad to say they are very few, time and again take occasion to publicly denounce police officers having business in their courts, in the presence not only of the prisoner, whom they may have caught red-handed in the commission of crime and brought to the bar, but in the presence of a large number of criminals usually present in court awaiting trial or arraignment.

"This thoroughly biased, unlawful and prejudiced conduct upon the part of police Magistrates has had a tendency to discourage the officers of this department in the performance of their duty, and has given aid, comfort and encouragement to the lawless element in this city.

"In a force of 12,000 men there are naturally some who are not infallible, and who may make mistakes, even as judicial officers sometimes err, and are reversed and even rebuked by higher tribunals, but where such errors are made it should not me made the occasion of directing a broadside of abuse against the erring police officer or the entire department.

"Indeed, the motives behind this course of conduct upon the part of some judicial officers are known to be thoroughly reprehensible, and higher courts are indeed to be commended for protecting members of this department in the proper performance of their duty, even as against police Magistrates who should of right, and as they are designated by law, be the judicial arm of the police force.

"The police force of this city in its difficult and never-ending warfare against crime will be greatly heartened by this decision."

Promises More Revelations.

Mr. Cuvillier, in his statement, reiterated his demand for a "bureau of police brutality" in the offices of the District Attorneys in the city. Referring to the Enright order, he said:

"Whence does Enright assume the power to have the police act as public censors of al articles written by the citizens complaining of the inefficiency of the Police Department under Enright. He cannot frighten the citizens by such Czarism methods as he promulgates in Order No. 21. * * *

"From my investigation with Federal prohibition agents of the bootlegging by certain police officials, screening and decoying bootleggers by the Police Department under the Mullan-Gage law, Mr. Enright will be taken off his feet by the revelations that will be brought out on the resumption of the hearing before Judge Crain on the 14th of August."

OPPOSES TAKING BIBLE LITERALLY

At the first Sunday chapel service of the Summer session of Columbia University, held yesterday at 4 P. M. in St. Paul's Chapel, Chaplain Raymond C. Knox spoke on "The Bible and Evolution." The address was an appeal for an understanding of the Scriptures as related to the time and occasion of their writing, rather than a literal interpretation.

"When students have been permitted to listen to a man like Dr. Fosdick," said Mr. Knox, "they can say with Lowell, 'The Bible is so full of life from cover to cover that one can't stick a pin into it anywhere without drawing blood.'"

"Ye have made void the Gospel by your tradition," was one text Chaplain Knox used; the other was, "He taught not as the scribes, but as one having authority." The scribes of modern times, like those of old, he said, believe in the dictation theory, that all knowledge was given to Moses; that everything is on a flat surface, and there to stay, once and for all.

Blaming the "made in Germany" scholarship that is "dull and stupid literalism" for the distaste of the modern generation for knowledge of the Bible, Chaplain Knox pointed out that, after all, the Bible is not meant as a text on history or science or anything except religion, but as a book on religion it stands all tests. "The only people who have to worry about being descended from monkeys," said Mr. Knox, quoting Henry Ward Beecher, "are those who haven't descended far enough."

Speaking as an Episcopalian, Chaplain Knox said there was no compulsion in his religion to believe the Bible or the Articles or the Collect literally; the essential in his religion as in all the great sects of Christianity is the spiritual interpretation of the Scriptures, he said.

Twenty-minute services will be held at St. Paul's Chapel at 8 A. M. daily, except Saturday. Next Sunday, at 4 P. M., Dr. Albert Parker Fitch will conduct the service.

Two Boys Victims of Tetanus Due to Accidents on the Fourth

Two boys are in a serious condition in the Bayonne Hospital with tetanus, as a result of Fourth of July accidents due to blank cartridge pistols. Two deaths occurred in the hospital last week from tetanus.

John Gancare, 13 years old, of 6 Meadow Street, was removed to the hospital Friday. He had been playing with a pistol on July 3, when his left hand was injured. He did not appear to have suffered much until Friday.

Francis Gallagher, 12, of 21 West Fourteenth Street, Bayonne, was taken to the hospital Saturday. His right hand had been injured by the explosion of a pistol.

BOY PLAYING TAG DROWNS UNDER PIER

MAN LOST OFF FERRYBOAT

Thomas Schiro, 8 years old, was playing tag yesterday with his sister, Elise, 12 years old, on the deck of Lighter 18 of the Lehigh Valley Railroad fleet, when he lost his footing and fell overboard. The tide swept the boy under Pier 3 of the American Docks, St. George, S. I., before his father, William Schiro, skipper of the lighter, could run from the cabin. The body was not recovered.

Miss Lillian Healey, 25 years old, of 427 West Fortieth Street, Manhattan, ventured out on a sandbar off Midland Beach in order to be near friends who could swim. The sandbar suddenly terminated and Miss Healey was plunged into deep water. Several men managed to get her ashore, where she was revived.

Charles Rudin of 346 Amherst Street, Orange, N. J., rescued his sons, Alfred, 18, and Barton, 16, after a hard struggle off Woodland Beach, Staten Island. The father and the boys had been spending their week-ends at the beach and yesterday, after a hearty meal, went in for a swim. The boys were about a quarter of a mile offshore when cramps seized them. Their shouts were heard by Mr. Rudin, who had a desperate time of it getting the boys to the shore. Both boys were unconscious and in a serious way, but last night at the Richmond Memorial Hospital, Prince's Bay, it was said they would recover.

Scores of passengers on the municipal ferryboat Brooklyn, operating on the Battery-Staten Island route, saw a young man about 25 years old fall or leap from the lower deck into the water, about 600 feet off the Battery. The engines were reversed and Patrick Swift and Michael Cronin, deckhands, made an unsuccessful attempt to rescue the man in a rowboat.

Near the spot policemen of Harbor A later recovered the body of a woman, about 35 years old. She was well dressed and about 5 feet 5 inches in height. She had brown hair and gray eyes and three gold teeth were in her upper jaw. She wore a wedding ring, uninitialed.

The body of James Hodges, 8 years old, of 117 Bush Street, Brooklyn, was taken from the East River at the foot of Clinton Street by Thomas O'Brien of 535 Dean Street, a watchman, who saw it floating past a pier. The police of the Hamilton Street Station were told by the boy's mother, Mrs. Bridget Hodges, that he had been sent out at 8 o'clock Saturday morning to buy a newspaper and had not returned. The boy often went in swimming in the East River and his mother said she thought he had stolen down there directly after breakfast and had been attacked by cramps while in the water.

Albert Rese, lifeguard at Long Beach, L. I., holder of the Congressional Medal for lifesaving, brought the total of persons he has rescued up to 734 yesterday. Rudolph H. Pierce, 38 years old, of 143 East Thirty-ninth Street, Manhattan, was caught by the strong undertow created by heavy surf and was going down for the third time when Rese reached him. The lifeguard brought the man part of the way and a human chain, formed by bathers, carried Pierce in to the shore. He was quickly resuscitated.

Samuel Cohen, 16 years old, of 157 Amboy Street, Brooklyn, while swimming with companions at the foot of West Twenty-third Street, Coney Island, became exhausted. He was pulled ashore and Policeman James Cosgrove of the Coney Island Station and Dr. Bloch of the island's hospital worked over the boy for an hour. They failed to revive him.

TWO DROWNED IN SEAPLANE

VENICE, Cal., July 15.—Herbert Wilson and Cecil Coates, aviators, were drowned in the ocean here today.

Methodist Editor Calls His Anti-Evolution Ideas a Danger.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 15.—William Jennings Bryan was called "superficial in education" and his theories were characterized as endangering to young people in college, by Dr. George Elliott of New York City, editor of The Methodist Review, who preached today at the Desplaines camp meeting.

Dr. Elliott said that John Wesley, the founder of Methodism and an Oxford University fellow, was a pre-Darwinian teacher of evolution and wrote a book to prove his belief.

"The doctrine of evolution is accepted by nearly all intelligent people," said Dr. Elliott. "Darwin wrote the 'Descent of Man,' but we prefer to call it 'The Ascent of Man.' It is a serious matter that Mr. Bryan with his superficial education should cause young people in college to think that in order to accept Christianity they must accept his definitions of evolution.

"John Wesley was a pre-Darwin evolutionist. He spoke of the ape as 'a rough draft of man' and said 'How wonderful it is that the paws became hands.'

"Personally, I like to think that I am related to the worm in the sod, the birds in the air, and all the animals. I never want to go back on my poor relation. I would rather think we came from the monkey than from mud.

"But the great thought is not that we came up from the dust, but that God came down to us and breathed into us the breath of life."

Dr. Elliott said that Thomas Edison is not a scientist but an inventor.

WOULD LET PUBLIC BE HEARD ON TRANSIT

ASKS STRIKE-CURB LAWS

Shientag Traction Report Recommends Broader Control of Public Utilities by People.

ONLY WAY OUT, HE THINKS

Declares Labor Troubles in Four Cities Up-State Caused $10,000,000 Loss in Two Years.

Recommendations that the public be represented on the directorates of street railways, that the people have a greater voice in the control of public utilities, and that legislation be passed that would delay strikes on street railways until every attempt at settlement had been exhausted, are made in a report by State Industrial Commissioner Bernard L. Shientag on the Schenectady Street Railway Company strike.

In two years controversies in Buffalo, Albany, Troy and Schenectady have cost the traction companies $10,000,000, and caused heavy loss to business and the traveling public, the report said. The conclusion that the people should have something to say to prevent such losses was drawn by Commissioner Shientag from what he learned of absentee directorship and from a conflict of opinion among the directors of the Schenectady line, factors which led to a two-month deadlock which local and State officials failed to break.

The inquiry developed the fact that the Schenectady company was jointly owned by the New York Central and the Delaware & Hudson Railroad companies, each having six representatives on the board. The New York Central group favored recognition of the union, while the Delaware & Hudson representatives opposed this primary demand of the strikers.

Commissioner Shientag's report said the directors of the Schenectady line, some of them residents of Schenectady, showed lack of knowledge of conditions leading up to the strike and of the situation as it exists at present. After quoting from President Harding's Helena speech on the right of labor to bargain through organization, the Commissioner said:

"The attitude of the Delaware & Hudson interests in the Schenectady strike is a complete denial of the right of collective bargaining.

"It is no longer a question of entering into a written contract with the union, but whether or not the union shall be destroyed. The present attitude of the management is that the strike is over. Anybody in Schenectady will testify to the contrary.

"The New York Central has taken a progressive stand on some questions in this strike. Declarations alone, however, will bring no results to a suffering public. The New York Central being one-half owner of this property, can not escape responsibility such ownership carries with it. A conflict of views in the Board of Directors of the Schenectady Railway Company can afford little satisfaction to the people."

"To one who has observed these strikes and their aftermath," said the Commissioner, "the conviction is inescapable that the citizens of a community should have a greater voice in control and regulation of public utilities. The public attitude determines to a large extent success or failure of public service corporations, such as street railways. If recognition is to be given to the oft expressed declaration that in a situation of this kind, the public interest is paramount, public service corporations may well consider the advisability of having on their boards of directors disinterested persons to represent the people, to reflect their views, to keep the board informed of local conditions and to be in a position to foster that spirit of equity and fair dealing between the company and its employes without which neither can prosper.

"In future such public representation on the directorate may well be written into contracts between public service corporations and local communities involving the use of the public highways. Public representatives on such boards may be in a position to give expression to the public needs and public welfare, frequently lost sight of by both parties in these controversies."

HOSPITAL SEEKS SAILOR.

Gilmore Small, a sailor, has disappeared from the Broad Street Hospital, where he had been a patient since last February because of an injury to his leg. His case had aroused much interest among the hospital authorities and as a result they have sent out a general alarm through the Missing Persons Bureau, as they wish to finish the treatment.

Small, whose home was in Somerville, Mass., had been employed by the McAllister Towing Line. He received his injury in an automobile accident which left his left leg shortened. Months of care had been given to the man without charge, and several weeks ago the social service workers of the hospital gave him a brace for the injured leg. The last time he was seen was on Saturday afternoon when he left supposedly for a short walk.

It had been the intention of the hospital authorities to send Small to the Burke Foundation, in the country, until his strength returned.

James Horan, 25 years old, a chauffeur, of 715 Willow Avenue, Hoboken, was held without bail in the Tombs Court yesterday by Magistrate Alexander Brough for a hearing in Homicide Court today on the charge of having been one of the three men who shot and killed Nathan Hebald, a jeweler, on June 24 in his shop at Kenmare Street and the Bowery.

Horan is said to have admitted that he was at the wheel of the auto in which the three gunmen who held up the jeweler escaped.

Friday afternoon Detective O'Ha went to the home of John Clark, 2 years old, a railroad worker, at 30 West 150th Street, to arrest him in connection with the shooting in this crime. Clark met the detective on the stairs and it is alleged that Clark fired a shot at the detective, missing him. The detective returned the fire, shooting Clark in the groin. Clark is in the prisoners' ward at Bellevue Hospital.

WINNERS OF FIVE STADIUM PRIZES

ONE IS ILLINOIS LAWYER

Max Kidder of Monmouth, Ill., who says he practices law so that he can compose music, and Nino Marcelli, of Roman birth, Chilean up-bringing and American naturalization, who led the American Army Headquarters Band at Paris during the World War, were announced yesterday as the winners of the two cash prizes offered in the Stadium Concerts' Score Competition for American Composers. There are five prize-winning compositions that will be played at the Stadium Concerts at the City College Stadium this season, according to the announcement issued by the Stadium Concerts, of which Adolph Lewisohn is Honorary Chairman and Mrs. Charles S. Guggenheimer, Chairman.

While only two cash prizes were offered, the other three prize winning compositions share equally in the honor of being played by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra during the open air concert season at the City College Stadium.

The tenth concert given by the organization last night was the first to be marred by rain. The concerts are insured against rain, each in the sum of $1,000, provided the rainfall is one-tenth of an inch between 5:30 and 8:30 o'clock in the evening. Representatives of the Stadium Concerts were endeavoring last night to get an official weather bureau report on the precipitation because they hoped to collect the insurance which would reduce the night's loss on account of bad weather to approximately $2,000. The concert was held in the Great Hall at City College and nearly 1,000 persons heard it.

The announcement of the prize-winners was made by the Score Committee of the Stadium Concerts in a report made by its Chairman, Mrs. William Cowen, to Mrs. Guggenheimer as Chairman and Arthur Judson, Manager of the Stadium Concerts. The prize-winners are listed as follows:

The Score Committee's report to Mrs. Guggenheimer and Mr. Judson was as follows:

"It gives me great pleasure to announce that the Score Committee of the Stadium has selected five scores from the competition of American composers for performance at the Stadium Concerts this Summer. Out of 135 compositions submitted, 88 which came under the rules and regulations of this contest were examined by the following Score Committee: William Van Hoogstraten, Professor Cornelius Rybner, Deems Taylor, W. H. Humiston.

"The Committee reported that the scores examined showed an encouraging degree of merit.

"The cash prize has been awarded jointly to two composers: Max Kidder of Monmouth, Ill., composer of 'Two Interludes,' (a) 'Before Parting,' (b) 'Rondel,' and Nino Marcelli of San Diego, Cal., composer of 'Suite Araucana.'"

Mr. Kidder was born in 1886 at Monmouth, Ill., where he now lives and practices law. He studied composition with Gustav Strube in Boston as a youth of 20, but otherwise has been self-taught. He has composed numerous works, some for symphony orchestra, but none of his orchestral scores have been performed. He practices law, he says, in order that he may be able to compose music.

Nino Marcelli was born at Rome, Italy, in 1890, lived in Chili from his second to his twenty-fourth year, came to the United States in 1916, and is now a naturalized American citizen. He is a graduate of the Santiago de Chile Conservatory of Music and has a reputation in South America as a symphonic conductor. He led the American Headquarters Band in Paris during the war and composed the music for the Grove play of the Bohemian Club of San Francisco last Summer.

The three other composers whose works were selected for performance at the Stadium are: Nathan Novick of Brooklyn, composer of "Russian Sketches"; Aloise Reiser of Brooklyn, composer of "Prelude from the Opera Gobi"; Wallingford Reigger of New York City, composer of "American Polonaise."

WILL GIVE PRIZE FOR PLAY

Bonstelle Competition Open to Students in New York Colleges.

A new prize play competition, open to students in New York City's five colleges, was announced yesterday by Jessie Bonstelle. Miss Bonstelle operates stock companies throughout the country, and also ventures upon Broadway with a production from time to time.

The competition carries with it a prize of $500, and is open to students of Columbia, New York University, City College, Fordham and Hunter. The judges will be Miss Bonstelle, William A. Brady, Alexander Woollcott and Owen Davis.

WALTER HAMPDEN'S SEASON

Walter Hampden, who has taken over the National Theatre for the coming season, will make his initial production there early in October, when he will be seen for the first time in "Cyrano de Bergerac." Mr. Hampden will conduct his season on the subscription plan, with the first three performances of each of his plays—falling on Monday and Tuesday nights and Wednesday afternoon—set aside as subscription performances.

Mr. Hampden will appear in ten plays during the season, in five of which he never has been seen in New York. These will be "Cyrano de Bergerac," "Othello," "Romeo and Juliet," "A New Way to Pay Old Debts" and "The Ring of Truth." The last-named is a play by Arthur Goodrich and Rose A. Palmer, founded on Browning's poem, "The Ring and the Book."

Mr. Hampden's remaining five productions will be "Hamlet," "Macbeth," "The Merchant of Venice," "The Taming of the Shrew" and "The Servant in the House."

DIES FOR LOVE OF AMERICAN

NAPLES, July 15.—Mario Sartori, aged 20 years, a member of a rich noble family, committed suicide today by taking poison.

Sartori left a letter in which he requested a friend to remember him affectionately to a young American woman, who came to Naples Wednesday and left for Rome shortly afterward. The friend said today that he believed Sartori had committed suicide because of unrequited love.

THE SCREEN

The Vanquished Snob.

THE LOVE PIKER, with Anita Stewart, William Norris, Robert Frazer, Frederick Truesdell, Arthur Hoyt, Winston Miller and others, adapted from the story by Frank R. Adams and James F. Fulton, directed by E. Mason Hopper; "Prickly Conscience," a "Wilderness Tales" series; "The Bill Poster," a Hal Roach comedy; "March of the Toys," from "Babes in Toyland"; "In Our Broadcasting Studio"; ballet divertissement at the Capitol.

"The Love Piker," which is being presented this week at the Capitol, is one of those productions—of which there are many—with a giddy beginning and bromidic ending. It starts with a lost fur and automobiles going fifty miles an hour, and, with the dénouement carefully obliterated, culminates in a snobbish girl being vanquished by an old man, who loves cats, dogs, a parrot, and sauerkraut. To impress upon the spectators the sincerity of the girl in the last stages of the film the inspired director, E. Mason Hopper, gives a close-up of the entwined hands of the aged father of her husband and the erstwhile social climber.

The plot revolves around the girl's reluctance to send her fiancé's father an invitation to the wedding after she has visited the old man's home. It is a pretty little house, but as the dog carries a fur neckpiece to the stove, and the girl's intellectual young brother is badly mauled by the village boys, and various other unfortunate incidents happen during the visit, one is induced to feel some sympathy for the bride-to-be.

Anita Stewart, looking very pretty, plays the rôle of the snob, Hope Warner, and her vis-à-vis is Robert Frazer, who has the part of Martin Van Huisen, a young engineer employed by Hope's father.

When arrested for speeding Hope has only a Pekinese dog and a flat purse. She is told by the magistrate, irate as usual, that she must either pay fifty dollars or serve fifty days. Before she is inclined to accept the offer of a loan from Martin, the Pekinese laps up some water from the Court's drinking glass, and to increase the irritation of the old man, a fly settles on his bald head. He murders the latter—and would like to slay the Pekinese.

Hope, a bit petulant but still haughty, seeks Martin, who is working on the steel structure of a great building. In the course of the search on one of the upper floors, the Pekinese saunters proudly out on a rafter, and Hope, fearing for the dog's life, follows it and can't turn around. Martin comes to the rescue and carries the girl back to safety. What happens to the dog is not known, it being surmised that after [illegible] he decided to return. The rescue brings real love to the snob's camp, but it is nearly killed after a visit to old man Van Huisen's vine-strewn cottage.

Martin Van Huisen is made to have all the grace of a poker or a ramrod. He is stiff and stagey. He gives the girl a ring, not knowing that she is apt to "look a gift horse in the mouth," but she finally tells Martin that she loves it because he gave it to her. Both Martin and Anita look every now and again as if they were not talking to each other, but merely repeating the five vowels.

One of the discoveries at the Van Huisen cottage which dampens Hope's ardor for Martin's father is the fact that he frequently forgets his teeth, and is very fond of sauerkraut and pigs' tails. He shows her a white woolen shawl worn by his late wife, and says that he would not take two million dollars for it. Eventually the aged man gives it to her, and the reprehensible young ingrate afterward forgets the invitation to the wedding addressed to Peter Van Huisen.

An effort to win spectators is made by the introduction of mannikins in a dressmaker's establishment showing off the different garments Hope is buying for her trousseau.

A not uninteresting feature of the film is the performance of Winston Miller, who plays the part of the precocious young Warner. [illegible] But as the latter is followed by a good one-reel Hal Roach comedy, one soon forgets the defeated snob's tears.

Lady Blount's Necklace.

Notwithstanding impossible features of the story, "A Gentleman of Leisure," the film feature this week at the Rivoli, possesses elements that make it one of those pleasing entertainments that evaporate from one's mind soon after leaving the theatre. It has too much of the scenario writer's ideas and not enough of the author's. One weakness is the speed with which the participants in the plot are taken from England to America, perhaps a whim of the director or the adapter. Another tepid part is the camaraderie that springs up between a crook and the gentleman of leisure.

Jack Holt, who figures in the rôle of Robert Pitt, a young American of wealth, has the face and bearing for the part, but he has spoiled his countenance to some extent by too much make-up, especially on his eyebrows. Holt is also susceptible to the grinding of the camera, and his attention seems to be diverted from interest in the scene by the sight of the lens. According to scenario writers the hero must have everything his own way, and this vehicle is no exception. Pitt wins, in spite of everything, the girl, her picture and the friendship of a crook.

The atmospheric details are pleasing. The story opens in London in the Cedric Hotel. [illegible]

There are three pearl necklaces in the yarn: [illegible]

Then in "A Gentleman of Leisure" [illegible] who on his first meeting with Pitt says:

[illegible] order to pay for passage to America, had pawned the necklace and—shades of Guy de Maupassant—he put the fake pearls in her ladyship's jewel case.

Pitt is a nonchalant specimen, for when caught with a crook in a room—where he has no business beyond purloining a girl's photograph he has wagered he'd obtain with her autograph—he greets the girl and pearl-handled pistol with "May I take off my hat?" His hands were "up" at the moment. Then ensues a conversation between the admiring young woman, Molly Creedon (Sigrid Holmquist) and Pitt, while the fascinating beauty toys with the trigger of the pistol.

Toward the end of the production Spike Mullen, the burglar—incidentally played by Frank Nelson—springs this gem on the assembled personages:

"You guys knowed from me gentlemanly bearing and angelic face that I wouldn't swipe a flea from a dog."

Sigrid Holmquist is comely and sweet in her rôle, and Ferguson acts the part of Sir Spencer Deever with feeling and sincerity. Nelson couldn't help the titles, and in his characterization of a crook he did very well, although things were made very easy for his escapes. Alec Francis gave a fair idea of Sir John Blount, from his rimmed monocle down to his white spats.

MARTHA WASHINGTON NOW AN ITALIAN LINER

Crew and Officers Looked Sad After 64 Barrels of Beer Had Been Emptied.

The steamship Martha Washington arrived yesterday at pier 7, Bush Docks, Brooklyn, from Trieste, Palermo and Naples, with 800 passengers, for the first time under the Italian flag and the house flag of the Cosulich Line. Before the war, in August, 1914, the liner belonged to the Austro-American Line of Trieste, and when this country entered the war she was seized and used in the South American trade until after the treaty of peace was signed. A year ago the Martha Washington was purchased by the Cosulich Line and thoroughly overhauled, refurnished and decorated.

Her crew of 235 officers and men looked sad yesterday, as they had seen sixty-four barrels of beer emptied one after another into the lee scuppers late Saturday night before the Martha Washington reached the three-mile limit.

The steamship Columbia of the Cosulich Line also arrived yesterday at pier 7, Bush Docks, from Mediterranean ports via Philadelphia. Her officers reported passing a cargo steamer of about 3,000 gross tonnage late Saturday about twelve miles off Atlantic City. There was no name painted on her bow or stern that could be distinguished through the glasses of the officers on the bridge of the Columbia, but they could see she was unloading cases into a fleet of motor boats which took turns to go alongside to load and then speeded away.

NEW SHIP FOR HAITIAN LINE

Announcement was made yesterday from the local office of the newly formed National Haitian Overseas Navigation Company, 30 West 131st Street, that the steam yacht Margaret had been purchased and would be put into the service between New York and Haitian ports at the end of this month. The vessel is 172 feet long and is now being fitted out in the Todd Shipyards, Brooklyn, to carry forty first class passengers. The steamer will go direct to Port au Prince and then call at coastal ports in Haiti and Cuba.

The company, which is said to have a capital of $500,000, is owned solely by negroes here and in Haiti and will operate under a $50,000 subsidy from the Haitian Government for the first year, and $100,000 a year for ten years thereafter.

COLUMBIA'S BURLESQUE.

The Columbia Theatre reopened on Saturday night for a preliminary season prior to the resumption of its regular weekly policy on Aug. 27. The intervening attraction is Barney Gerard's "Follies of the Day" company, presenting an entertainment called "What Does the Public Want?" It is a production familiar in many, if not all, of its ingredients to Columbia patrons.

"What Does the Public Want?" has as its principal player a comedian named "Bozo" Snyder, whose specialty it is to be amusing without speaking. [illegible]

It is believed the boy got a "lift" from one of the many automobiles. He was committed from New York City.

DESIGNED FOR COMFORT

Stabilizer and Other New Devices Embodied in Ship—Saluted in the Bay.

The new 22,000-ton, two-funneled, four-masted, twin-screw, oil burning liner Albert Ballin steamed up the harbor yesterday afternoon with the Hamburg City flag at her bow and the Hamburg-American Line house flag at her main truck, and made fast at Pier 86, North River, at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street. On the way from Quarantine she received salutes from the various small craft and ferryboats in the North River, whose pilots always know when a new Atlantic liner makes her first appearance. She brought 1,130 passengers, including 689 immigrants, from Hamburg and Southampton, but did not call at Cherbourg. It was not yet time to stop there, the officers said, as the French warships might not have let her leave.

Captain Thomas Kier, the master, who commanded the Imperator before the war, said that off Governors Island he had to swing his ship in toward the mud flats and anchored freighters to prevent running down some of the small motor boats that chugged slowly across the course of the Albert Ballin. One with twenty-five persons on board passed right under the bow of the liner and narrowly escaped disaster, the Captain said.

"I would sooner put my ship on the mud than hit one of these Sunday pleasure boats," he added, "and perhaps drown a number of people."

Has Many New Devices.

The Albert Ballin, which is named after the late Director General of the Hamburg-American Line, has a number of new mechanical devices and is different in appearance from any other steamship that has entered the Port of New York. She has been equipped with a new stabilizing device which combines the Foerster system of bulges in the side of the hull from the quarter to the break of the foc'sle at the water line, with the Frahm system of anti-rolling tanks. The latter were used in several of the Atlantic liners before the war, but they were inside the ship and occupied space which might have been used for freight.

Under the new method the tanks are placed at the side, between the actual hull of the ship and the inner skin, [illegible] the Ballin. It does not help to speed the ship, but it does make her very steady in a rough sea, Captain Kier said.

The liner also has a new system for closing the scuppers by hydraulic pressure, the advantage of which is that in case of collision or other damage to the ship, the scuppers, which usually serve as intakes for great quantities of water, can be made watertight. The Albert Ballin is also the largest passenger liner thus far to be fitted with a self-steering device which the Captain said had answered well when the ship was averaging fifteen and a half knots an hour.

Comfort Was Sought.

Julius P. Meyer, Director of the Hamburg-American Line in New York, who went to Quarantine to meet the new ship, said yesterday that the objects of the company in designing the Albert Ballin and also her sister ship the Deutschland, which will follow in the Fall, was to provide a maximum of comfort and convenience without indulging in extravagance. The Interrupting Idea

RALPH WALDO EMERSON

The Power of Ideas

SOLOMON, Franklin, and Disraeli found that ideas were forces,—by which to swing governments and peoples.

Luther, Columbus, and Darwin found that ideas were projectiles,—by which to fire new movements in thought.

The early Christian martyrs found that ideas were anchors,—by which to face the lion's fangs, holding firm to faith.

TODAY, ideas are more potent than ever before. Popular education has fertilized the public's mind. Magazines and newspapers have whetted its appetite.

Industry, too, is awakening to the power in ideas.

FEDERAL, therefore, always proposes and preaches and practices—for every enterprise—the Interrupting Idea.

That is: Federal translates every product into an idea.

It develops this idea either from the product, or from the service the product renders, or from the wants of consumers.

It crystallizes this idea into a word, a phrase, a picture, or a theme,—something that will arrest attention, interrupt habit, and start the consumer's mind along a new path—to the product.

And, when such a true Interrupting Idea is projected, through advertising, into the public consciousness, the product it represents has a thousand times the stability, the utility, and the salability.

OCCUPATIONAL TAX IS DUE ON JULY 31

Outlines Regulations Covering Levy on Motor Boats and Yachts.

Returns and payments on miscellaneous occupational taxes, provided for by the Revenue act of 1921, must be made on or before July 31, according to a statement issued yesterday by Frank K. Bowers, Collector of Internal Revenue. Capital stock tax returns are also due at the same time.

"The Revenue act provides that every domestic corporation shall pay annually a special excise tax with respect to carrying on or doing business, equivalent to $1 for each $1,000 of so much of the fair average value of its capital stock for the preceding year ending June 30 as is in excess of $5,000. In estimating the value of capital stock the surplus and undivided profits shall be included. Every foreign corporation shall pay annually a special excise tax with respect to carrying on or doing business in the United States, equivalent to $1 for each $1,000 of the average amount of capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States during the preceding year ending June 30.

"Every domestic corporation must make a return on Form 707, even though the law may indicate that it is exempt from tax. The question of exemption is one for determination by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

"A foreign corporation is carrying on or doing business in the United States if it maintains an agent, or an office or warehouse in the United States, or in any other way enters the United States for the purposes of its business.

"Following are the miscellaneous occupational taxes: Brokers, $50; pawnbrokers, $100; ship brokers, $50; Custom House brokers, $50; proprietors of theatres, museums and concert halls where a charge for admission is made, having a seating capacity of not more than 250, shall pay a tax of $50; having a seating capacity of more than 250 and not exceeding 500, $100; having a seating capacity exceeding 500 and not exceeding 800, $150; having a seating capacity of more than 800, $200.

"Circus proprietors are required to pay a tax of $100; proprietors of other public exhibitions or shows, $15; proprietors of bowling alleys and billiard rooms are required to pay $10 for each alley or table; proprietors of shooting galleries, $20; proprietors of riding academies, $100.

"Persons carrying on the business of operating or renting passenger automobiles for hire are required to pay $10 for each such automobile having a seating capacity of more than two and not more than seven, and $20 for each automobile having a seating capacity of more than seven.

"With respect to the special tax imposed upon the use of yachts, pleasure boats, power boats, sailing boats and motorboats, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has ruled that a vessel must be both over five tons net and at least thirty-three feet in length to be subject to such tax.

"These boats are divided into three classes with respect to length and a separate tax is provided for each class, as follows: Over five net tons and over thirty-two feet in length, $1 for each foot; over five tons, length over fifty feet and not over 100 feet, $2 for each foot; over five tons, length over 100 feet, $4 for each foot."

NORFOLK CALLS FOR CURLEY

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 15.—Mayor James M. Curley has received an offer of the office of city manager at Norfolk, Va., at a salary of $20,000 or more a year. The present Norfolk city manager, C. E. Ashburner, has resigned to accept a similar post in Stockton, Cal. The offer was made in a letter from W. B. Shafer Jr., President of the Pennsytown corporation, who wrote in part:

"Norfolk must have the best city manager on earth, regardless of salary, for the Pennsylvania Railroad has purchased over 1,000 acres of land at Pennsytown, just outside of Norfolk, to build terminals on, and Henry Ford and several other large manufacturers will complete new plants here by Jan. 1.

"Are you the man for the position, or is there one in your city, capable, that may be interested?"

Mayor Curley's present salary is only $10,000 a year. He will think the matter over and send a formal reply next week. The chances are that he will decline the offer, as he says he doesn't like the Norfolk drinking water and prefers New England to the South, anyhow.

FIRE IN PACKING HOUSE.

Fire caused an estimated loss of $100,000 yesterday at the meat packing plant of Morris & Co., in Newark. The flames originated in a pile of sawdust from some undertermined cause about noon and burned through the second and third floors to the roof, which caved in.

For four hours firemen fought the flames. Three firemen were overcome by smoke but were able to return to work. A fourth fireman, James J. Ward, who slipped on a stairway, was hurried to the City Hospital because of injuries to his back. The building was filled with refrigerators, stocked with meat. About three years ago a similar fire occurred at the plant.

MISSING PERSONS.

PETER SLOREX, 12 years old, 163 India Street, Brooklyn; 1 A. M., July 14; height 4 feet 7 inches; weight 70 pounds; brown eyes, blond hair, fair compelxion; white shirt with brown stripes, gray pants, black shoes and stockings, gray cap.

FRANK GIANBRONE, 11 years old, 120 Monroe Street; 8 A. M., July 14; height 4 feet 6 inches, weight 80 pounds; brown eyes and hair, fair complexion; brown shirt, black pants, brown shoes and stockings, black hat.

FRANCES ALDAREZ, 16 years old, negro, 1,607 Park Avenue; 7:30 A. M., July 14; height 5 feet 2 inches, weight 112 pounds; dark brown eyes, black bobbed hair; dark cape, gray collar, black dress, red shoes and stockings, lavender hat.

GILMORE SMALL, 37 years old, 17 Fairmount Avenue, Somerville, Mass.; Broad Street Hospital, 2 P. M., July 14; height 5 feet 6 inches, weight 135 pounds; blue-gray eyes, light hair and complexion; blue suit, tan shoes, straw hat.

DAUGHERTY SETTLES DIVIDEND TAX SNARL

MILLIONS TO BE REFUNDED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—A long disputed point of income tax law has been settled by an opinion rendered by Attorney General Daugherty that dividends received by stockholders in a corporation from the distribution of earnings or profits of another corporation accumulated prior to March 1, 1913, are exempt from taxation. It is said that millions of dollars of taxes will now have to be refunded. Revenue officials, however, have refused to make any estimate of the amount involved.

The question has been under discussion for some time among Treasury officials and recently an income tax ruling was withdrawn, as there was some uncertainty as to its legality and it was decided to put the matter up to the Department of Justice. The following question then was submitted to the Attorney General by Secretary Mellon:

"In cases where one corporation has received from another corporation distributions out of earnings or profits accumulated by such other corporations prior to March 1, 1913, or out of increase in value of its property accrued prior to March 1, 1913, may the receiving corporation after having first distributed all of its earnings and profits accumulated since Feb. 28, 1913, distribute to its stockholders exempt from tax, the amount so received by it from such other corporation?"

Attorney General Daugherty in his reply reviewed the provisions of the Federal Income Tax acts in regard to dividends and then made specific reference to a Wisconsin case. The income tax law in that State became effective Jan. 1, 1911.

In the Wisconsin case the Northwestern Lumber Company in 1916 and 1917 paid to the Sally F. Moon Company, a holding corporation, dividends out of surplus accrued prior to Jan. 1, 1911, and the Sally F. Moon Company distributed a part of this money to its stockholders.

It was held by the Wisconsin courts that a stockholder in a corporation to whom, as a stockholder, there had been paid a sum of money under the designation of dividends, had the right to show that such payment of dividends was made out of capital or surplus and therefore was not taxable, instead of out of earnings or profits accrued since Jan. 1, 1911, which would have been taxable.

The Court also held that the fact that the fund in question passed through the treasury of the Sally F. Moon Company after leaving that of the Northwestern Lumber Company before reaching the hands of the stockholders, did not alter the nature of the transaction.

"I am, therefore, of the opinion that the distribution made under the conditions detailed in your question is exempt from tax," Attorney General Daugherty ruled.

It is understood here that the distribution of earnings by a number of railroad companies to their stockholders of profits derived from subsidiary lines is involved.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The weather map of Sunday evening showed high atmospheric pressure over the Atlantic Ocean from Bermuda eastward and a second area of high pressure appeared over and north of Lake Superior. The barometer was comparatively low over practically all other districts, with centres of depression in the lower lake region, Oklahoma, Northern Montana and in the extreme Southwest.

Showers and thunderstorms have again occurred in many portions of the country. The principal areas, including the lake region, North Atlantic States and extreme upper Ohio Valley, portions of the Gulf and South Atlantic States and scattered areas in the Rocky Mountain region and middle plain States. The temperature has fallen somewhat over most of the lake region and considerably over the far Northwest, while higher readings prevailed Sunday over most of the northern plain States.

The outlook is for unsettled, showery weather Monday in most of the Washington forecast district, while generally fair weather will prevail on Tuesday in the North and Middle Atlantic States and the lower lake region, with showery weather continuing in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States and portions of the Ohio Valley. The temperature will be somewhat lower Monday in the middle and lower Ohio Valley. Elsewhere the changes will be unimportant.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Restraint the Keynote of All Markets—Developments of Importance Awaited.

Over all markets lies the restraint imposed by the season, by continued uncertainties in the international situation in regard to reparations and by a certain obscurity regarding the nature of Fall trade. But despite this apparent restraint, which has brought about inactivity and pronounced dullness in all directions, there is quite apparent a much more cheerful attitude in most markets. Midsummer dullness, of course, is not unnatural. It has developed, however, at the end of a long series of price declines in securities and commodities which possibly has had the effect of over-emphasizing a condition which must be considered quite natural and not out of the ordinary.

In times of dullness, particularly after a long period of such lively trade and business activity as occurred in the first, and half of the second, quarter of the year, the "between seasons breathing spell" might well be utilized as an opportunity for business once more to get its bearings. Certainly it has been a period in which financial affairs have been readjusted and set in order and it now is possible to pass more critical judgment on what occurred during the period of intense business activity at the beginning of the year, and to use this judgment as a basis from which the latter half of the year may be studied in advance. It is not according to the record, even in recent years, that midsummer dullness is an indication of sagging Fall business. In fact a reading of recent business history would lead to the opposite conclusion. Under normal developments, therefore, the present idle period is probably the natural relaxation between two seasons of activity, one of which already has been written into business and financial history.

The week's outstanding developments, from the market viewpoint, were international, as well as domestic. Premier Baldwin's statement on the British attitude on reparations unquestionably furnished the most interesting event of the week. It is too early to pass judgment on the results of the firm demand that order be brought out of chaos in European affairs. The note is yet to be sent to Germany, and the reaction of France, as well as of Germany, must be awaited. Conservative banking opinion, however, is that the atmosphere has been cleared by a plain statement of facts; that a way for real negotiations on reparations has finally been opened, and that despite all the apprehensions expressed abroad, there is little likelihood of a break-up of the Entente. The situation is by no means clear. In fact, it is complicated by complete occupation of the Ruhr Valley by France, and such other factors as the breakdown of Germany's financial system and dislocated international trade. Nevertheless, these are not insurmountable obstacles. To hope for an early and complete pacification of Europe would probably be overoptimism, but the fact is quite apparent that the logic of events and the latest turn in the negotiations have brought an ultimate settlement nearer.

In domestic affairs a decline in the market price of wheat below $1 a bushel and weakness and irregularity in several other directions have possibly overemphasized the part commodity prices play in our general economic scheme. It is not pleasant to contemplate the possibility of a tremendous wheat crop bringing less at the harvest than it cost to produce it, but a combination of circumstances has brought us face to face with such a prospect. One of the unhappy factors of the situation is that there appears to be no help for it. A moderately large crop of wheat now is coming to harvest, to be added to a carryover from last season which approximates close to 150,000,000 bushels. On the other side of the picture is to be found an apathetic and listless demand from abroad for our surplus and equal caution on the part of domestic buyers. There the problem rests at present. No artificial stimulant, whether it be devised by governmental or other friendly agency, can replace actual, normal demand for the crop. Nor can such demand be created over night. It is one of the unsettling factors in our domestic situation, and one not easily overcome, that there exists a wide gap between the income and outgo of the wheat farmer, as measured in the market value of his product and what it will buy in the open market.

The recession in general home trade is more pronounced because of the active pace early in the year, but actual evidence that such slackening has taken place comes to hand from day to day. One of the indications was seen last week in a decline of nearly 600,000 tons in unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation, an unusually good trade barometer. On the other hand, a more cheerful indication was given by an equally good barometer—car loadings. The figures reflected a railroad business unequalled in the history of the country, and represented the third consecutive week in which loadings had exceeded the "one million car" mark.

It is to the future rather than to past records, however, that market attention is directed. The fact that sterling established a gain of almost five cents to the pound last week; that the securities markets reflected no further pressure (and at times good resistance), and that there were moderate upswings in such important commodities as copper and cotton were widely construed in our financial districts as representing a veering about of sentiment toward optimism. It doubtless will be subdued, for a bit, until cumulative and conclusive evidence presents itself that the present lull has been merely the natural reaction from the overoptimism and overexertion of the earlier part of the year, rather than a sustained or prolonged period of depression, a condition now entirely unexpected.

BRITISH OPINION APPLAUDS BALDWIN

MARKETS CONTINUE FIRM

Belief Expressed in London That Path to Settlement Has Now Been Cleared.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 15.—There was nothing heroic, nothing startling, nothing surprising in the British Premier's statement on the Ruhr policy. Business men here undoubtedly endorse its moderation as well as the evident determination of the Government to seek as quickly as possible a way out of the present impasse. There have been no violent reactions either in exchange or the security markets.

There was perhaps some disappointment that the Premier did not carry us further toward a turning in the long lane down which we have been going, but it is felt that we are probably now moving quietly but fairly quickly to some solution of this perplexing problem. The City is only too painfully aware of the trade dislocation which has arisen from the deadlock between France and Germany, but it is not selfish enough to wish for a settlement which would injure France or to allow Germany to escape without full payment. The present Cabinet has the country's complete confidence in this problem. The business men of practically all shades of political opinion are agreed that what the Allies cannot do together should be done separately, but always with the object of making Germany pay. There is no more sympathy for Germany in our financial and business circles now than when we were actually fighting. It is only on the methods of payment that people here cannot follow France. It is hoped that the British reply will be sent to Germany within the week. Time presses, and it is believed that in the end British moderation will prevail.

British Business Slows Down.

Meanwhile business in all directions is slowing down. It will not revive until we get a settlement of the Ruhr and reparations on British lines. The view is expressed here that if Germany is not given time to pay she will perforce take it, which means her economic collapse will become complete. Nothing can shake this unanimous view of business men here.

Allied exchanges have moved adversely, owing to some disappointment over the attitude of the British Government, but gilt-edged securities have moved in a direction which shows approval of our moderate yet firm line of policy.

A few comparisons of exchange and stock prices immediately before and after Premier Baldwin's statement reflect these varying views. French francs at Wednesday's close were 77 for the pound sterling, and they closed on Friday at 78.20. Belgian francs at Friday's close were 94.30, against 92.50 at Wednesday's close, while Italian lire now are selling at 107⅝, against 105½ at Wednesday's close; German marks at 1,100,000 against 975,000. Consols closed on Friday night at 58¼, compared with 57⅝ on Wednesday, while the War Loan 5s at 100⅛ against 100; Conversion Loan 3½s at 77⅜, against 77¾; the Funding Loan 4 per cents at 89¼, against 88⅞, and the Victory bond 4 per cents at 89⅞, against 89¾, give vague reflection of the financial attitude on the speech.

Gain in Currency Notes.

Currency notes outstanding at the end of the week were £288,689,363, as compared with £287,768,960 a week ago, and £277,597,451 in the first week of March, which was the lowest since the armistice. The holiday season accounted for the expansion in the week's amount.

GERMAN PRICE INDEX.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 15.—The Frankfurter Zeitung's price index for July 1 shows 39,898, as compared with 14,980 on June 1. This, with the exception of January, is the largest month's rise recorded. The standard Ruhr coal price was raised from 528,000 to 835,000 marks per metric ton. The customs gold supplement was raised to 3,619,900 per cent.

Foreign trade in May shows a big decline in imports, due to the drastic decrease of coal shipments from 4,500,000 tons in April to 2,500,000 in May. All imports were 4,013,100 tons, against 6,396,100 tons in April, while exports were 929,900 tons as compared with 1,028,800 tons in May. Values are not reported.

VIEWS OF OUR TRADE ABROAD

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 15.—Reduction in the American trade activity after a sharp revival in the first six months of this year has surprised nobody in France. The view always has been that the United States was able to enjoy prosperity while economic reconstruction abroad was very slow. Reversal of the trade balance once more against the United States has resulted from the enormous claims of that country since the war; it is the opinion here that the deficiency in the trade balance against the United States will necessarily increase so long as America does not choose to resume capital exports, a policy largely pursued before the war by both France and England.

ENGLAND'S TRADING EXCEEDS LAST YEAR

LONDON, July 15.—Really reliable comparisons of Britain's trade figures are impossible at this time, owing to the separation of figures for the Irish Free State, but the general impression made by the June returns is not altogether favorable. Imports at £89,300,000 were practically stationary, compared with May, but £5,000,000 higher than in June last year. Exports at £73,800,000 were £9,490,000 below May and £12,970,000 above the same period in 1922.

Compared with last year our exports must have been swelled by the inclusion of shipments to the Irish Free State, while imports must have been similarly affected by inclusion of imports from the Free State and exclusion of Free State imports from abroad, which last year were included in the United Kingdom's figures.

A feature of the imports is a drop of no less than £4,830,000 in raw cotton, compared with last year. The value of cotton received from the United States was only £495,000, against £4,668,000 a year ago, and this in spite of the fact that prices were considerably higher than in 1922. The biggest decline in exports was £6,000,000 in manufactured goods, compared with May.

The six months' figures show an increase of £52,000,000 over last year in imports and an increase in exports of £39,000,000. The trade balance against England for June was £15,469,000, against £6,150,000 in May and £2,432,000 in June of last year. For the first six months of the year there is a total balance against England of £92,235,000, against £79,830,000 in the corresponding period of 1922. Large as this balance is, it is probably offset by invisible exports with something over on the right side.

FRANC'S SHARP DECLINE IS RESENTED ON BOURSE

PARIS, July 15.—The French economic and financial situation has never justified the sudden breakdown of franc exchange during the last month. Harvests have very much improved during the last two weeks and, contrary to pessimistic estimates reported in some circles, it is possible, so far as wheat and beet sugar are concerned, to expect results as good as the best attained since the war. The wheat harvest promises to nearly satisfy all national needs. On the other hand, raw material purchases, which are generally made each year during the Fall, have not yet depressed exchange rates. Importing manufacturers and traders have always had the practice of covering themselves in proportion to their payment needs. Finally, the fall of the franc has been due above all to psychological causes which are intimately connected with the difficulties of discussions between France and England about reparations.

It may be that German financial interests, and especially the Reichsbank, which by selling or pledging part of their gold reserve has obtained such credits in London and some neutral markets, have used part of these credits in order to depress French and Belgian exchanges. These financial interests have hoped that the depreciation in the French franc would be ascribed to the attitude of the French Government.

The relative success of these manoeuvres has been partly due during these last few days to the sympathy they have obtained from some financial British circles.

LONDON ON OUR PRODUCTS.

Believes Further Declines Will Occur Because of Slack Export Demand.

LONDON, July 15.—Business men here are under obvious difficulties in endeavoring to arrive at an estimate of the stability or otherwise of American commodity prices at this particular stage. There is evidently still some readjusting to be done before wages, supply and demand and monetary conditions come into line, and until these irregularities are smoothed out and views as to the future are not so conflicting as appears at present, we look for irregularity in the movements. Unless, however, Europe soon becomes a more active trader, we anticipate that American commodity prices will tend to decline further, as there is neither the will to indulge in renewed speculation nor ability of domestic consumption to rise to any important extent in the near future.

TARIFF BILL FOR AUSTRIA.

Will Reform Duties to Meet New Conditions and Raise More Revenue

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 15.—Austria's bill reforming the import tariff will be submitted within the next few days. The bill has a three-fold aim, first to adapt the tariff of 1906, which was framed for a self-sufficient population of 53,000,000, to Austria's present needs, second to provide the basis for bargaining while negotiating new commercial treaties and third to raise more revenue. The last expedient is necessary because the customs are pledged as security for interest on the League of Nations loan. At Geneva customs were estimated at 100,000,000 crowns, but the present yield is only half that. These tariff proposals in general were well received, but there is a very strong opposition developing against the intended increase of duties on flour and shoes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 15.—Pig iron production in the United Kingdom during June was 692,900 tons, against 714,200 tons in May and 369,200 tons a year ago. The output of steel ingots and castings was 767,700 tons, as against 821,000 in May and 400,200 for the same time last year. The last month's figures show the first real setback for about twelve months.

BERLIN LOOKS TO NEW NEGOTIATIONS

PROPOSE GOLD CURRENCY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 15.—The statement to the House of Commons by Premier Baldwin on the whole has been well received in Berlin, but some disappointment was expressed that he had not made the expected declaration that England would pursue an entirely independent reparations policy if no agreement was attained with France. Since the beginning of the Ruhr occupation German optimists have prematurely counted upon an Anglo-French breach and a possible dissolution of the Entente, after which it was expected that formal Anglo-German negotiations could be inaugurated. Nevertheless, the declaration by Premier Baldwin that the last German offering must not be ignored was considered highly favorable, it being assumed that the offer will form at least part of the settlement proposals which England intends to submit to her allies.

Tax Calculations in Gold.

The Reichstag adjourned for the holidays without doing anything to further the settlement of Germany's financial problems, but at the last moment Minister of Finance Hermes made promises which partly embody the principle of gold taxes, and the Prussian Diet passed a resolution recommending a similar principle for Prussian finances. The chief event of the week, however, was the unanimous resolution by the Federal Economical Society along the same lines. This practically demands gold calculation in all public and private business. According to the resolution adopted, taxes and all private paper-mark claims would rise automatically in proportion to each diminution in paper marks. The resolution declares that wages cannot be upon a stable gold basis until employers first put their accounts and balance sheets on this basis. It further advises the Government to issue gold Treasury bills bearing gold interest, and concludes by declaring for "general and open gold reckoning in trade and finance."

Bankers in general approve of this in principle, but declare that the technical difficulties make its sudden adoption impossible, and academic economists object, but this "fictitious gold mark" is only an admission that the paper mark's decline will continue indefinitely. Some bankers hold that the mark will ultimately be stabilized at perhaps 100,000, perhaps one-millionth of its former gold value, and will then be denominalized as has been the gold ruble. This, if practicable, would solve the currency problem. Others predict that the paper mark will be allowed to drift and that the Reichsbank or the Government will issue a small quantity of gold-backed notes which will circulate in addition to the paper marks and will be increased in quantity when sufficient gold backing can be accumulated, in which case the paper mark will gradually pass out of circulation as worthless. The recent issues of dollar Treasury bills may in fact be the first step toward this solution.

The Unbalanced Budget.

Meanwhile, State finances are entirely snowed under by the mark's depreciation. In the last ten days of June the floating debt increased from 16,984,000,000 to 24,926,000,000. Only one-fifteenth of the expenditure was covered by revenue, the remainder being inflation. While the revenues as compared with the last ten days of April fell from 280,000,000,000 to 156,000,000,000, expenditures rose from 2,794,000,000,000 to 7,817,000,000,000. Since 1913 the revenue has increased 2,008-fold, while the expenditures have increased 110,887-fold.

The main cause of the latest aggravation was the payment of one quarter's official salaries in advance. The gold value of all revenue collected in the ten days' term was a little over $1,000,000. The Reichsbank statement for the last week of June also establishes a new record. Circulation increased over four trillions, against the previous unsavory record of two trillions. The increase in commercial discounts was one trillion and in Treasury bills discounted five and a half trillions. The chief cause of these tremendous advances was the need of cash for the quarterly payments. The bank's gold reserve has fallen to 716,972,000 gold marks as a result of further borrowing of 40,000,000 gold marks' worth of high currencies in England.

ABANDON DISCOUNT RISE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 15.—The Reichsbank Directorate proposed on last Wednesday to increase the discount rate to 25 per cent., but suddenly abandoned this plan, in view of strenuous objections raised by the business men members of the bank's Central Committee. All private banks have now issued their reports for 1922, and some extremely large earnings are exhibited. The Deutsche Bank reports net profits of 5,949,000,000 marks and a dividend of 300 per cent. The Disconto Bank reports profits of 2,621,000,000 and a dividend of 200 per cent., while the Darmstadter and National Bank exhibits a profit of 2,951,000,000 marks and a dividend of 200 per cent.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 15.—The National Federation of Iron and Steel Manufacturers can throw no actual light upon a reported combination here to control foreign steel trade. The rumors in American steel circles appear to have no very solid foundation, although from time to time situations arise which give color to the conjecture that combinations are being attempted.

England's Gold Imports.

LONDON, July 15.—Gold imports into England for the past week amounted to £710,134, of which £680,737 came from South Africa and £29,397 from West Africa.

Exports totaled £912,601, of which the United States took £829,323 and India £76,100.

NEW ISSUE

They will be further secured by pledge of all outstanding bonds of The Salem Lighting Company which bonds constitute a first lien on that property, and by pledge of over 86% of the Preferred Stock of Pittsburg District Electric Company.

Purpose of Issue The proceeds from the sale of these Notes will provide funds for the acquisition of the above mentioned securities of Ohio River Edison Company, Pittsburg District Electric Company and The Salem Lighting Company.

Earnings The actual dividends and interest payable on the pledged securities will be at the aggregate annual rate of $730,928, or over 3.4 times the annual interest charges on these Notes, upon completion of the present financing.

The combined net earnings of Subsidiary Companies for the year ended April 30, 1923, available for dividends and interest on the pledged securities, for depreciation, etc., amounted to $872,578, or over 4.1 times the annual interest charges on these Notes.

Restrictions No Notes in excess of these $3,250,000 may be issued under the Trust Indenture securing these Notes. No additional common stock of the subsidiary companies may be issued unless it is immediately acquired by Penn-Ohio Edison Company and pledged under the Trust Indenture.

Equity These $3,250,000 Secured 6½% Gold Notes will be followed by $6,000,000 30-Year 6½% Debenture Bonds, $6,359,500 6% Cumulative Preferred Stock and 248,240 shares of no par value Common Stock. The value of the physical properties of the subsidiary companies, based largely on independent appraisals, is $58,836,000. Deducting the face amount of bonds and stocks of subsidiary companies outstanding with the public, leaves a balance in excess of $16,700,000 applicable to the collateral pledged under these Notes.

All legal matters in connection with the issuance of these Notes will be passed upon by Messrs. Winthrop & Stimson of New York, for the Bankers, and Messrs. Beekman, Menken & Griscom, of New York, for the Company.

The above Notes are offered when, as and if issued and received by us and subject to the approval of our counsel at

Service Rendered: The Company supplies electricity for light, heat and power to a number of substantial Ohio communities, including Warren, Alliance, Massillon, Ashland, Mansfield, Elyria and Lorain.

Territory: The territory served, with its favorable combination of highly developed industrial communities, is regarded as one of the foremost fields for power consumption in the United States.

Security: A first mortgage lien, in opinion of counsel, on a portion, and a direct mortgage lien on all, the Company's property subject to divisional bonds outstanding with the public (mortgages closed).

Valuation: Total depreciated value of the Company's property, as determined by independent engineers in 1921, about $19,700,000; subsequent expenditures for additions, etc., $3,200,000. The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio has given the properties a valuation which with subsequent additions and improvements to May 1, 1923, is in excess of $24,500,000. Total bonds outstanding in hands of public (including divisional issues) $14,908,300.

Earnings: Gross, for twelve months ended April 30, 1923, as officially reported, $7,648,425; net, $2,674,331; annual bond interest requirement, $991,013. Of these earnings, 93% of the gross, and 97% of the net were derived from the sale of electric current for light and power.

Interest payable March 1 and September 1, without deduction for normal Federal Income Tax now or hereafter deductible at the source, not in excess of 2%, at the office of Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., New York and Chicago, and at the office of the Company in New York. Coupon bonds, in denominations of $1000, $500 and $100. Redeemable at 110 and accrued interest to and including March 1, 1933; thereafter decreasing ½% each year to March 1, 1952, and thereafter at 100 and accrued interest to maturity. The Company agrees to refund the present Pennsylvania Four-Mills Tax to holders residing in that State. Issuance authorized by the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

PARIS PESSIMISTIC ON BRITISH STAND

WOULD STAND ON TREATY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 15.—The Bourse was very erratic last week as the result of the particularly wide fluctuations of sterling and the dollar. However, owing to the great volume of available funds at the moment, there is quite a disposition to regard the call market as having a good tendency and all French securities which are not under the tendencies of the London market have advanced.

French public opinion regrets very deeply the English attitude on reparations. It does not understand England's desire of assuming the part of mediator, especially since England and France are tied close together by treaty. It is quite apparent that discontent of the British official attitude toward French initiative is growing in proportion as results of the Ruhr occupation become more favorable, particularly as regards coke and coal and at the very moment when the Germans begin to agree with the idea of faithfully executing the Treaty of Versailles. Some French of independent thought believe German passive resistance would have been shorter if Germany had not felt herself supported by a more or less disguised encouragement from London.

France Desires United States Counsel.

It is the desire of France that the United States participate again in the reparations discussions, but French opinion would regret to see the United States adopting the English viewpoint and disavowing the intention expressed by them in 1918 as regards fair reparations, which Germany has accepted. France is anxious to pay her debts to America and England as soon as she is released of the heavy burden of reparations, but she could not understand it if America did not support her fair claim on Germany. The declarations of Premier Baldwin are considered very ambiguous here. They would seem somewhat delusive as they do not contain what France expects anxiously from the British Government—that is, an accurate practical view as to means of restoring German finances and recovering reparations obligations. Although France has never accepted the viewpoint that there will be an eventual breakdown of the Entente, which will mean very inadequate acknowledgment of French sacrifices of every nature during and after the war, she is fully determined to rely upon her rights and upon the terms of the treaty and not give up her pledge before Germany shows a willingness as concerns reparations.

Improvements in the Budget.

The French people do not show any discontent against heavier taxes because there has been no real increase of taxes for the budget of 1923. The improvement of the budgetary equilibrium that appears in the financial bill is the result of adjustments of the new budgetary estimates to results of revenue payments during the first six months of the year. These payments were very important and showed the extraordinary strength of French public finances.

It would be difficult today to greatly increase French taxation and it will remain so as long as the taxpaying capacity of the devastated area is not restored. These areas amount to the tenth part of the total territory of France and before the war paid a fifth part of the total taxes. There payments have been very low since the armistice, but are notably increasing as reconstruction work progresses.

For 1923 they paid in taxes amounting to 2,000,000,000 francs. They will probably pay 3,000,000,000 during 1923. As soon as reconstruction is over it will be possible to think of materially increasing the tax rate. The assessment of new taxes will then be improved and their distribution fairer and payments no doubt will be more important.

CONFIDENT TONE IN LONDON

Change in Bank Rate Has Not Yet Brought Out Any Outstanding Results.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 15.—The week's settlement has been marked by a much more confident tone on the Stock Exchange. One small failure occurred at settlement time, although some such trouble had been feared. No doubt the warning given by the bank rate advance had caused considerable lightening of the load of securities being carried on borrowed money. So far as sterling is concerned, there is a disposition to doubt whether the rise in our bank rate has brought about the improvement which has occurred during the last week.

We were told by those intimately connected with the exchange market to look for a rally after the usual pressure for dollars at the end of the half year. Many therefore regard the simultaneous rise in the bank rate and sterling as merely coincidence. The Bank of England, when making a change in its rate, never vouchsafes any reason, but there is no doubt that the recent rise was aimed at America. One is left wondering therefore what will happen if sterling again becomes weak. The only logical policy for the Bank of England would be to again raise its rate. But this would meet with pronounced opposition from business quarters.

Financial and business circles generally received something of a shock when the rate was raised in the previous week. They have now got over their fright, although continuing somewhat nervous owing to the fall now occurring in discount rates, which may render the higher bank rate ineffective.

Frederick H. Hatch & Co. are offering $800,000 of 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock of the American Type Founders Company at 100. This is the balance of an authorized issue of $4,000,000. The American Type Founders Company was incorporated in New Jersey and has acquired type foundries in different parts of the country, its largest plant being in Jersey City.

Merrill, Lynch & Co. announce the sale of the unsubscribed portion of the $3,000,000 issue of McCrory Stores Corporation 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock. Application will be made to list the stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

GENERAL ELECTRIC SALES.

Thirty Years of Growth From $12,000,000 to $243,000,000.

Annual sales of the General Electric Company increased from about $12,000,000 to $243,000,000 in the thirty years between Jan. 1, 1893, and Jan. 1, 1923, a statement issued by the corporation discloses.

The outstanding capital stock increased from $35,000,000 to $184,000,000 and the value of its manufacturing plants from $4,000,000 to $167,000,000. The number of employes grew from 4,000 to more than 74,000.

The statement was issued as a review of the corporation's accomplishments under the leadership of Charles A. Coffin, who is retiring as chairman of the board after thirty years of continuous service. Tribute is paid also to the accomplishments of E. W. Rice Jr., former President of the corporation, and to its corps of engineers, including Professor Elihu Thomson and Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz.

Mention is made of Thomas A. Edison, who gave the world the first central plant in which to generate electricity for public lighting.

Detroit Edison Revenue.

The Detroit Edison Company for the first six months of 1923 reports gross revenue of $15,907,958, comparing with $12,848,546 in the first half of 1922. After payment of all expenses there was a gross corporate income of $4,809,550, against $3,713,393, and after fixed charges and other deductions the net income was $2,682,310, against $1,746,000 last year.

The following statement is furnished by Mr. G. L. Rickard, President of the Corporation:

BUSINESS: New Madison Square Garden Corporation has been organized to take over the Madison Square Garden Corporation, including the boxing and other athletic exhibitions staged by Mr. Rickard. Negotiations are nearing completion for the purchase of the New York Railways Car Barn property which covers the block bounded by 6th and 7th Aves. and 50th and 51st Streets. It is planned to erect a new indoor stadium on this site—the largest and most completely equipped in the world, for sporting events and other amusements. Arrangements for the sale and lease of space to be used as stores, theatres and offices are under way. The new corporation will continue to operate the Madison Square Garden.

Boxing events and the swimming pool will form only a small part of the activities of the New Madison Square Garden Corporation. The continual demand for space for other sports, exhibitions, meetings, etc., should maintain practically uninterrupted earnings for both buildings. The new corporation also owns the arena on Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City, New Jersey.

EARNINGS: A report as of April 30, 1923, by Price, Waterhouse & Company, shows that earnings of the old Madison Square Garden Corporation, before special charges, since its organization two years and nine months ago, were $1,331,739.40 and for the last two years $1,168,576.94, or an annual average of $584,288.47 which is the equivalent of $7.79 per share on the Class A Stock to be presently outstanding. Appraisal by Ford, Bacon & Davis, Inc., Engineers, shows assets of $1,164,969.36. In the report of Ford, Bacon & Davis, Inc. of June 5, 1923, it is stated that future earnings, including return from rentals, can be fairly estimated before special charges at $950,000 per annum, or $7.60 per share on the entire authorized issue of 125,000 shares of Class A stock.

DIVIDENDS: The Class A stock is non-callable and entitled to $2. per share per annum cumulative dividends and after $2. per share per annum has been paid upon the Class B stock, and special and sinking fund provisions complied with, further earnings are to be divided equally between the Class A and Class B stockholders. A sinking fund will operate beginning Nov. 15, 1924 for the purchase of Class A stock in the market, if obtainable at not exceeding $35. per share. The first dividend is payable August First and quarterly thereafter.

Earnings for the first half of the month of July 1923 alone are sufficient to provide for dividend requirements on this issue for the succeeding year.

SPECIAL TICKET PRIVILEGES: The stockholders of record shall be entitled, at box office prices, to such preferential seat locations as may be fixed by the by-laws or Board of Directors at all events given by the company.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE: The Bankers have purchased from stockholders of the old Corporation, twenty-five thousand (25,000) shares of this offering, and the proceeds of the balance of this offering will be used by the Corporation towards the acquisition of the new property and for other corporate purposes.

MANAGEMENT: Among the directors are Anthony J. Drexel Biddle of Philadelphia; John Doty, President of Foundation Co.; Thomas H. McInnerney, President Hydrox Corporation; and Kermit Roosevelt. Mr. Rickard has agreed to act as President of the new corporation for a period of twenty years from May 1, 1923. Mr. John Ringling, widely known in the exhibition business as well as in industrial and banking circles, will act as Chairman of the Board. Messrs. Ringling and Rickard have deposited their stock holdings in escrow in the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, and have agreed not to sell or offer the same for sale for a period of four years.

All legal matters in connection with this issue have been approved by Messrs. Goldman & Unger of New York City for the Bankers and Messrs. Stebbins, Garey, L'Amoreaux & Hurtubise of Chicago for the Company.

We offer this stock for subscription, subject to allotment.

STEEL MILLS REST FROM BUSY SEASON

PITTSBURGH, July 15.—Measured by the tonnage of business placed on the books of steel mills, it could be said that there is a fair degree of activity, but the business being done is largely of routine character, jobbers and manufacturing consumers placing additional orders as their old orders are filled, and generally for smaller quantities. Thus the steel market is growing quieter week by week. Some strictly new business is coming out, in buildings, bridges, car and locomotive repair material, &c., but the tonnage is not sufficient to be a really important factor in the general steel market. An occasional 5,000 or 10,000 ton order, or even a number of such orders, does not count for a great deal when the capacity of the steel industry is about 850,000 net tons a week in the various finished mill products.

It was therefore to be expected that the steel market would be quieter this month than last. Generally speaking, June was a slightly more active month than May, though both months were dull by comparison with the activity of December and the first four months of this year. The United States Steel Corporation's unfilled tonnage statement appears to indicate otherwise, but more often than not the corporation's unfilled tonnage statement is apt to lead to conclusions not wholly correct unless it is properly analyzed.

In this case the point requiring attention is that order books for third quarter sheets and tin plates were opened April 26, and practically a whole quarter's business in these two lines was entered in May, thus swelling the bookings for that month, while in June the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company shipped material but booked scarcely anything.

On the face of the returns, the Steel Corporation's unfilled obligations decreased by 307,158 tons in May and by 595,090 tons in June, showing 288,000 tons greater loss in the later month, but, allowing for the sheet and tin plate business, the bookings in June, in other steel products, were probably somewhat heavier than those in May. This confirms various trade reports about the middle of June that business was running somewhat stronger than in May. Of course it was no evidence of weakness in the steel market in June that the sheet and tin plate customers of the corporation had made their third-quarter purchases in May instead of waiting until the next month.

Accounting for Relaxation.

A combination of three influences has brought the dullness in the steel market to the point of stagnation. The first is the very heavy production and shipments of steel in the past six months, production having run far beyond the tonnage thought possible. In particular it was expected that labor shortage would affect operations throughout, and particularly after April 1, whereas steel production increased continuously from an ingot rate of 40,000,000 tons a year in the last three months of the old year to a rate of nearly 50,000,000 tons at the end of April. With subsequent decreases, June production was at an average rate of 45,000,000 tons. The rate now is much less, perhaps under 40,000,000 tons.

The second influence is the very conservative attitude of steel buyers. This attitude is not confined to steel distributers and consumers, but has been general in all commercial circles for eight or ten weeks. The third influence is seasonal, for July and August are traditionally dull months in the iron and steel market.

The first of these influences may in time be removed, while the second depends on various other things outside the steel market itself. The third will be removed simply by the passage of a few weeks of time. As to the heavy deliveries of steel, stocks have probably been fully restored to normal proportions, and the natural disposition of buyers will be to liquidate stocks to an extent rather than to increase them, since there is no ground for fear that steel will not be obtainable in future just as wanted.

Since the present dullness is due in part to seasonal influence, no particular prescience is involved in the predictions made in some quarters that the steel market will be more active in September. Naturally it will be, but it does not follow that there will be such a buying movement as would stiffen the market. The balance of probability is that by that time finished steel prices will have joined the procession formed late last March by coke and scrap, which started their declines then, being joined shortly by pig iron.

Symptomatic Price Cuts.

On March 20 heavy melting steel scrap reached the high point, delivered in the Pittsburgh district, but since that time has declined about $8.50, or over 30 per cent., including a decline in the past week. In the same space of time Connellsville furnace coke, both spot and contract, has declined fully $2.50, or one-third.

Pig iron, using the composite or weighted average compiled by a leading writer on steel for the past twelve years, has declined $4.59, or 15 per cent., from its high point reached on March 23. This composite includes Bessemer, basic and foundry iron at Valley furnaces, and foundry iron at Philadelphia, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago and Cincinnati.

Valley pig iron has declined $1 a ton on all grades from the nominal quotations of a week ago, actual sales being made of Bessemer at $26.50, basic at $25, and foundry also at $25. There are possibilities that even these new prices could now be shaded.

It is the usual thing for finished steel prices to remain steady for some time after coke, scrap and pig iron have started declining. Bars, shapes, plates, pipe, wire products, sheets and tin plates are all at prices that have ruled for two months or more, and are firm at these prices. Hoops and bands are off $3 a ton to 3.15c, while hot rolled strips have been offered in some cases at 3.05c., against a former market value of 3.30c.

BANK OPENED IN HANKOW.

Hew Fan Un, New York agent for the Bank of Canton, Ltd., of Hongkong, China, announces the opening of a branch of that institution in Hankow, China. The new branch is situated in a strategic business city 700 miles up the Yangtse River and, according to Mr. Un, will handle a large volume of business from the hinterland.

Mr. Un reports a healthy condition of trade between China and the United States, and is of the opinion that the political and bandit disturbances of recent weeks have had no appreciable effect on business.

HOG MARKET HOLDS ITS OWN

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 15.—With the Government report suggesting a record number of swine in the country and continued large receipts at leading Western markets, the hog market showed considerable resistance the past week, the average price of $7.05 per 100 pounds being the same as the previous week, but $2.70 less than last year and $2.40 less than two years ago. There are no signs of a let-up in the movements.

Cattle supplies were rather small for this season with the loss of the early week mostly regained at the last.

Texas—the Lone Star of Great Magnitude

Being the biggest member of the national family, Texas has always felt that much was expected of her so she early sought leadership in many lines. Unquestionable is her success. Last season her cotton crop was three times that of the second cotton state. The total farm crop ranks first as do her cattle, mules, sheep, wool and mohair. Texas leads in sulphur and is second in petroleum and natural gas. The annual industrial output is practically a billion dollars.

In bringing its New York customers in touch with the great producers of Texas, the Bank of the Manhattan Company feels that it provides a real service to both.

It often happens that a bank's customers discover only by accident that the institution can serve them in any way except in the routine matters of their account.

The Bank of the Manhattan Company makes it a point to inform its customers of its broader service which goes into every phase of modern business — its current tendencies and opportunities.

You can profit by a connection with a bank that has served national industry for 124 years. Your inquiry is cordially invited.

DEMAND FOR CREDIT REVIEWED BY BOARD

HISTORY OF EXPANSION

Federal Reserve Officials Point Out Differences in Industrial and Agricultural Activity.

Midsummer is ordinarily a season of somewhat slackened business activity and low credit demand and a time when the credit position derives its importance from the fact that the banks are approaching the season of largest currency and credit requirements for crop moving. July, 1922, marked the turning point in the demand for bank credit for commercial purposes, and from that time until quite recently the volume of commercial loans has steadily increased. This larger demand for bank credit followed a growth in business activity which had started at least a year earlier. The rate of industrial recovery during the last two years has seldom been equaled in the business history of the country, and, while it has been primarily industrial in character and has affected various lines of economic activity in differing degrees, it has been felt in all sections of the country. In agriculture, recovery from the 1920-21 depression came later and was less complete. In fact, the liquidation of indebtedness incurred during the two preceding years was effected by the use of a portion of the profits from the crops of 1922, and it was not until the end of 1922 that loan reduction at banks in agricultural districts came to an end. Differences between the extent and time of recovery in industry and in agriculture are reflected in differences in business conditions in various sections of the country, and, since industrial sections are sufficiently distinct from agricultural sections, these differences may be brought out by geographical comparisons.

New Demands for Credit.

Increased activity in the industrial sections of the North and East during the year gave rise to a larger demand for bank credit. Member banks in leading cities in the Eastern sections, with the exception of New York, increased their loans by between 10 and 14 per cent. between June, 1922, and June, 1923, while in the agricultural districts loans increased by about 8 per cent. Loans by country banks in the St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City and Dallas districts actually decreased during the last half of 1922, at a time when the total loans of all member banks showed a rapid growth. Net loan reduction in agricultural districts did not begin until the second quarter of 1921, six months later than in industrial districts, and continued six months longer, until the end of 1922. This lag not only reflects the slower recovery of the farmer but is related also to the fact that farmers realize upon the sale of their crops only at the end of a growing season, while in industry the turnover is much more rapid. Changes in the volume of business in merchandising and manufacturing are followed more promptly by corresponding changes in credit demand, and thus by the middle of 1922 new borrowing to finance the larger volume of current business exceeded the liquidation of outstanding indebtedness, and the total volume of loans in industrial districts increased. It was not until the profits of 1922 crops were available, however, that farmers were generally in a position to repay the obligations incurred during the two preceding years. During the first quarter of 1923 loans in agricultural districts, partly in response to credit demands in connection with the Spring planting, showed a net increase.

Industries First to Recover.

That industrial sections of the United States benefited earlier than agricultural sections from the expansion in the volume of business is indicated by the relative volume of check payments in various sections during the last year. A year ago bank debts in industrial sections were at about the same level as in 1919, while debits in agricultural regions were about 10 per cent. smaller. This difference in relative volume has widened during the last year, since the growth of check payments has been much greater in the Eastern industrial sections (except New York) than in the Western and Southern agricultural sections. Wholesale trade and retail trade have increased during the past year more rapidly in manufacturing than in agricultural sections, and although mail-order sales, which largely represent buying in rural communities, have almost doubled in monthly volume since the Summer of 1922, they are still on a relatively lower level, when related to the volume of sales prior to the depression, than sales at department stores in large cities.

In general, therefore, there is shown for the year a rapid growth of industrial production and of demand for bank credit in manufacturing districts, while in agricultural sections the recovery started later and a growth in the demand for credit began to manifest itself only in response to the requirements of the planting season of this year.

ASK HUGHES TO INTERVENE.

Paper Men Appeal Against a Canadian Embargo—May Go to Congress

Secretary Hughes of the State Department is being asked by the paper industry of the United States to intervene with the Dominion of Canada to prevent a Canadian embargo on exports of pulpwood to the United States. If this effort fails and such an embargo is put in effect, Congress will be asked to take retaliatory measures.

This was the course of action decided upon yesterday at a protracted meeting of the Executive Committee of the new national committee of paper manufacturers, created to fight the embargo authorized by Canada to be put in effect at the discretion of the Dominion Government.

The letter from the paper manufacturers to Secretary Hughes was written by Henry W. Stokes of Philadelphia, President of the York Haven Paper Company, President of the American Paper and Pulp Association and Chairman of the new Committee on Perpetuation of the Paper Industry in the United States. The letter argued that the Canadian action is inspired by an intent to monopolize the paper industry of the continent, and not because of any lack of pulpwood resources in Canada. It further points out that the proposed embargo applies to Canadian timber lands owned in fee by American companies, the product of which under an embargo they would be prohibited from using for their mills in the United States.

NEW CAPITAL DEMANDS IN LONDON ARE LOWER

Colonial and Foreign Government Borrowings, However, Continue to Show Moderate Expansion.

The amount of new capital raised on the London market during the last six months is considerably less than the amount issued in the corresponding period of last year. Our figures, however, include British Government borrowings (with the exception of Treasury bills and ways and means advances), and if these be eliminated the discrepancy is very much smaller. The total issued in the second quarter of the year was substantially larger than in the first three months, and without British Government issues the increase is over 75 per cent. This increase, however, is due almost entirely to Colonial and foreign Government borrowings, and not to any appreciable expansion in money raised for industrial and other purposes.

The amounts for the first two quarters of this year are above the averages for the years immediately preceding the outbreak of the war, but in those days the British Government's activities as a borrower in the open market were practically negligible. Moreover, the decline in purchasing power vitiates a direct comparison, and if allowance be made for this and for the British Government's presence in the new capital, it will be seen that the amounts raised this year compare unfavorably with those of the last prewar years.

From the final table, however, which analyzes the destination of new capital issued in London, it will be seen that the amount going overseas has expanded considerably in the last three years:

SILVER PRODUCERS CALLED TO CONFER

WASHINGTON, July 15.—A conference of silver producers of the United States, Canada, Mexico and Latin-America, to meet at Reno, Nev., Sept. 4, has been called by Senator Oddie of Nevada, Chairman of the special Senate Committee on Gold and Silver Inquiry.

In a letter addressed to silver producers, made public today, the committee expressed the hope that the conference would result in the organization of a silver export association to stimulate the production and orderly marketing of silver of this hemisphere "so as to meet seasonal demands and prevent unfair and detrimental control over its price." Such an association, the committee declared, would go far toward relieving Congress of the necessity of attempting by further legislation to encourage silver production.

The committee said discussion of bimetalism and free coinage of silver would not be permitted at the conference, but the testimony of silver producers, foreign exchange experts and others would be sought for use in connection with the committee's report to the Senate, which must be submitted by next Jan. 1.

The committee expects, the letter declared, to solve the causes of decreased production of gold and silver, to point out the effect of decreased production upon commerce, industry, exchange and prices, and to propose a plan for submission to the Administration, should it be deemed necessary, for negotiations with foreign Governments looking to the stabilization and wider use of silver.

SAVINGS DEPOSITS GAIN $680,000,000

AMERICAN THRIFT SHOWN

Number of Depositors Increased 4.9 Per Cent.—More School Children Also Open Accounts.

Savings of the American people continue to increase, according to the latest national compilation just completed by the Savings Bank Division of the American Bankers Association. Savings deposits in banks and trust companies of the United States were reported at $17,300,000,000, June 30, 1922, the last available nation-wide figures, as compared with $16,620,000,000, June 30, 1921. This is an increase of $680,000,000, or 4.1 per cent.

The savings and time deposits reported on the two dates by the different types of banks were as follows, data for State banks other than mutual savings banks being combined with trust companies:

TOTAL SAVINGS DEPOSITS

State Banks & Tr. Co's	7,406,292,000	7,530,292,000
United States.	$16,618,595,000	$17,301,012,000

The number of savings depositors, as indicated by the number of accounts, shows an increase of 4.9 per cent., with the States reporting for the first time in 1922 excluded. The third annual report of the Savings Bank Division on school savings banking also shows increased American thrift, 1,271,029 pupils having savings accounts during the school year of 1921-22, as against 802,906 during the previous year.

NUMBER OF SAVINGS ACCOUNTS REPORTED.

	No. of States.	June 30,1921.	No. of States.	June 30,1922.
Mutual sav. bks.	17	9,654,989	17	9,652,569
State bks. & trust companies	18	8,967,106	28	11,797,424
National banks..	(all)	8,015,736	(all)	8,873,327
		26,637,831		30,323,320

"The amount of the average savings account for the country as a whole cannot be determined with a satisfactory degree of precision," the statement of the savings bank division says, "but we have data for following conclusions:

"In mutual savings banks the avreage balance on June 30, 1922, was $456 in Massachusetts, $571 in Connecticut, $489 in all New England, $713 in New York, $670 in the Middle Atlantic States, $495 in Washington, $978 in California, and $590 for the 621 mutual savings banks in the seventeen States reported.

"In State banks and trust companies the average savings account on June 30, 1922, was $292 in Massachusetts, $260 in Connecticut, $364 in all New England, $441 in New York, $352 in the Middle Atlantic States, $349 in Washington, $540 in California, and $503 for all State banks and trust companies reported, which included 20,308 State banks and 1,489 trust companies.

"In national banks the average savings account on June 30, 1922, was $366 in Massacusetts, $379 in Connecticut, $376 in all New England, $526 in New York, $393 in the Middle Atlantic States, $536 in Washington, $673 in California and $334 for all national banks in the United States."

MIDSUMMER DRAG IN WESTERN TRADE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 15.—A reduction in the unfilled orders for steel, showing a loss of more than 1,000,000 tons in the past three months; lowering of pig iron prices $1 to $28; a reduction in the pig iron output, as the result of the blowing out of some half dozen merchant furnaces at various points, including one at Milwaukee, and a cut in crude oil prices featured the business week. Despite the reduction in steel orders mills continue to operate at high capacity and shipments are in excess of new buying.

Railroads bought 160,000,000 tons of steel rails, the Illinois Central taking 60,000 tons and the Burlington 40,000 tons. Purchases of freight cars aggregated 2,000, making more than 80,000 for six months this year, compared with 100,000 last year.

Railroad loadings in the West have decreased fairly this month as compared with June and are slightly under last year on the Rock Island Railroad to 17 per cent. larger than a year ago, as shown by the St. Paul, while other roads made gains of 3 to 10 per cent. over a year ago.

Coal prices are weaker and railroads are urging speedy buying of coal, as they foresee a car shortage and slim supply of fuel in parts of the West and Northwest later in the year.

Building materials are moving in more than the average volume. There is a slowing down in the buying of merchandise and an uncertain feeling exists as to the future ability of consumers in the agricultural regions to make large purchases, owing to the lowering of wheat prices to the lowest level at this time since 1914.

Labor is well employed and there is a better supply. Business with dry goods jobbers has dropped off and is about the same as last year, while retail sales show a fair gain. Women's shoes are selling well and factories are operating at two-thirds capacity, while men's shoes are moving out more slowly, but average shoe sales are 10 per cent. over last year.

A feature in the business situation is the report by a leading dry goods house that credit losses the past six months have been lighter than usual.

COMPLAIN OF GAS HEARING.

Public Service Commission Accused of Delay by Westchester Officials.

Officials of Westchester County charged yesterday that the Public Service Commission had for three days ignored a telegram and letter sent by Mayor Walter M. Taussig of Yonkers asking for a hearing on a motion to suspend the new gas rates in the county.

The telegram by the Mayor, followed by a letter by Corporation Counsel James Taylor Lewis of Yonkers, charged that the company raised its rates without even filing a formal petition with the commission. A hearing was asked to give Samuel Untermyer, representative of the gas consumers, a chance to argue for a suspension of the new rates. Untermyer had denounced the new rate, adding 60 cents to the charge for the first hundred feet of gas, as a "brazen subterfuge" to collect in another way the 60 cents monthly service charge now forbidden by a new State law.

PRICE AVERAGE IS LOWER.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 15.—Professor Irving Fisher's copyrighted weekly index number of American commodity prices, based on 100 as the average for 1913, is 153 for the last week, comparing with 154 the preceding week, with 155 two weeks ago and with 168 for the week ended April 7.

The highest of the present year to date was the 168 of April 7, the lowest 156 in the first and second weeks of January. The highest point reached since the war was 247 in May, 1920, and the lowest, 138, in January, 1922.

DECREASE THIS YEAR IN SUGAR CONSUMED

The consumption of sugar in the United States in the first six months of the current year fell short of the consumption for the corresponding period last year, according to figures compiled last week. Leading producers and refiners in the Spring had asserted that the threatened boycott of the product, due to the high prices then prevailing, would have no effect on consumption.

The indicated consumption of sugar for the first six months of the year approximated 2,603,591 tons, comparing with 2,671,953 tons in the same period last year. This was a decline of 68,362 tons, or 2.56 per cent. The figures compiled by Willett & Gray, sugar trade authorities, follow:

Domestic beet consumed..	377,984	602,487
Decrease		68,362

*Estimated. †Corrected figure for 1922.

These figures, it is pointed out, must be accepted with the usual stipulations, which are that it is very seldom that the consumption of the last half of the year is equal to that of the first half. While some people at first thought may tend to dispute this statement as regards 1923, says the bureau, yet about the only point in which 1923 differs from other years is that the "invisibles" are in the hands of the refiners this year, whereas they are usually in the possession of the wholesale and retail grocers.

Willett & Gray further say: "The above figures show that there is practically nothing the matter with the consumption of the United States during the first half of 1923, even in the face of very much higher prices than existed in 1922. Nevertheless, while the consumption has been very close to that of the previous year, the chief sufferers, as regards shortage in the volume of business done, have been the Atlantic and Gulf refiners, who this year have had approximately 500,000 tons less of export business than they had in the same period the previous year.

"When we made up our indicated consumption figures a year ago for the first half of 1922, owing to the slowness with which the United States Government issues their statements of exports, it was necessary for us to estimate the exports of May and June, 1922, two months of heavy shipments, with the result that the figure used was actually less than that which was actually shipped out of the country, and the figure of indicated consumption was much larger than it should have been. In making comparison in the above tables we present this year the corrected figure for 1922 based on the actual exports for that period.

"While the consumption during the second half of the year is usually less than that of the first half, the decrease is not often large. Hence, using this as a basis, it is not unreasonable to assume that from July 1 to December 31 the country will need about 2,400,000 tons of sugar, raw value, to finish the year. This would be calculating on approximately a 5 per cent. decrease in the full year's consumption for 1923 in comparison with 1922. This is the face of our records, which show an average yearly increase of 5.403 per cent. over a period of one hundred years. There is only just about this amount of sugar available without calling on countries for sugar that pays full duty."

NEW BANK'S GREAT VAULTS.

Doors Nine Feet Thick to Protect Federal Reserve Cash.

One of the most important features of the new Federal Reserve Bank Building at Maiden Lane and Nassau Street will be the facility for storing the cash and securities in three enormous vaults, said to be the acme of perfection in vault building and absolutely impregnable to attack.

According to the York Safe and Lock Company, which is building the vaults at York, Pa., they are of a new type, designed for the local bank and have revolving doors. These doors consist of a tapered cylinder nine feet thick inside the vestibule, the front and rear sections of each door being thirty inches thick, with four feet of space between. These sections close the front and rear openings and revolve a distance of ninety degrees to permit passage into and out of the vault. The total weight of each vault entrance is 265 tons, or 530,000 pounds. The base section, which has just arrived in New York, is the heaviest single piece and weighs fifty-two tons, or 104,000 pounds. To transport this section from the pier will require five motor trucks and four 100-ton jacks, with a corps of forty men.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

A compilation treating preferred railroad and industrial stocks has been prepared by Carden, Green & Co. It shows earnings per share, dividends paid, price range and dividend yield over a period of years.

WESTERN UNION REVENUE.

Gross for First Half of 1923 Was $56,097,327.

The Western Union Telegraph Company for the first six months of 1923 reports gross revenue, including dividends and interest received, of $56,097,327, comparing with $50,603,181 in the same period last year. Total operating expenses, including charges for repair and reserves for depreciation, aggregated $48,141,299 against $43,856,579 in 1922, leaving a balance after all expenses of $7,956,028, against $6,746,602. After deduction of interest charges on bonded debt there remained net income available for the capital stock of $6,802,603 against $5,593,177 in 1922.

E. Y. Gallaher, Vice President and Controller, in his statement, says that the expenses for the first half of 1923 include charges for accrued proportion of employes' income participation, whereas no corresponding charges were incurred for the same period of 1922.

An Opportunity

for a bond salesman who has demonstrated his ability in an unmistakable manner. To such a man we can offer the support and co-operation of an important bond house which originates its own issues and participates in all important syndicates. The advertising of this house is designed to support the efforts of its sales staff. Replies will be held strictly confidential. Salary and commission basis. V 955 Times Downtown.

OPPORTUNITY

For a man who is good and knows it, who likes an assignment that is too big for the ordinary salesman and who is able to finance himself until his performance proves his promise, we have a remarkable opportunity to undertake a thing that is well worth the best effort of any man and that makes possible an income, on a commission basis, of from $10,000 to $25,000 per year. The project he will handle does not involve the sale of books, stocks, bonds, real estate or insurance, but is a service employing the power of a new use of publicity in accomplishing a purpose of immediate interest to industrial heads throughout the country. Give details of age and experience, also telephone number, in first letter. Personal interview will then be arranged. W 217 Times.

ATTORNEY

Banking house doing conservative investment business has opening in its organization for attorney. Applicant must have practiced law. Give full particulars as to age, education and experience. Address V 956 Times Downtown.

FINANCIAL NOTICES.

WHEAT TOO PLENTY FOR HIGHER PRICES

POOREST VALUE SINCE 1921

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Winter wheat harvest is nearly completed, with yields [illegible] Spring wheat [illegible] rust [illegible] Minnesota and the Dakotas [illegible] North Dakota [illegible] South Dakota [illegible] The Government [illegible] a fair quantity of rye has been sent out of that country.

Prices are below cost of production and farmers in parts of the Central West are buying lumber to build bins and hold their grain. Western railroads were never better equipped for the handling of a large grain traffic than at present and terminal markets have an abundance of storage room.

While wheat prices are the lowest of the season and the lowest in July since 1914, they were down to a lower level in November, 1921, when December wheat sold at 98 cents. Corn has sold at 90 cents for No. 2 yellow, the highest of the year and the best since 1920. It is the first time in many years that wheat has sold at the lowest and corn at the highest prices of the year at the same time. In Kansas City wheat and corn sold at the same prices on one day last week.

As compared with a week ago wheat closed 4½@5½ cents lower, corn 1⅝c higher to ½c lower, oats ¾@1 cent lower and rye 2¼@3½c. lower than last week.

Primary receipts of grain last week were 12,178,000 bushels, increase 275,000 bushels for the week, but were 4,200,000 bushels less than last year and 4,200,000, or 20 per cent., under the five-year average. Wheat receipts were 400,000 bushels more than the previous week and nearly 2,000,000 bushels less than last year. There was also a similar reduction in the corn movement as compared with a year ago.

SAYS WESTERN ROADS LOSE IN AIDING FARMERS

President Felton Also Blames Panama Canal for Road's Failure to Gain.

CHICAGO, July 15.—Western railroads serving the large agricultural sections of the country are not sharing in the general returning prosperity of Southern and Eastern lines, Samuel M. Felton, President of the Chicago Great Western Railway and Chairman of the Western Railways Committee on Public Relations, declared in a statement today.

"Statistics just made public show that they are earning an annual return of 4.43 per cent. on their valuation, while railroads as a whole in the entire country are earning 5.33 per cent.," he said. "They failed in the first five months by about $40,000,000 to earn the 5.75 per cent. held reasonable and fair by the Interstate Commerce Commission," he added.

"This has been partly due to the competition of the Panama Canal, which has taken much traffic that these railroads would otherwise have secured," President Felton said. "They are large carriers of agricultural products, and to help the farmers they have made especially large reductions in freight rates on agricultural products. The average rate of Western lines is 16 per cent. less than in 1921 and 13 per cent. less than in 1922.

"The railways in Western territory operate more than 145,000 miles of line, or more than one-half the mileage of the country, and it is the condition of all the railways owning this mileage, not that of a few, that is important to the people they serve."

MAY SHOW GAIN IN FREIGHT TRAFFIC

The heaviest freight traffic for May and the third highest for any month ever reported by the Bureau of Railway Economics after a study of reports just received from Class 1 carriers. [illegible]

"In computing this average movement per day account is taken of all freight cars, including those loaded and those in process of being loaded and unloaded, those awaiting repairs or those for which no load is immediately available, which [illegible]

[illegible] the average load per car in May was twenty-eight tons. This was the highest [illegible] since [illegible] for May, 1920, [illegible] two-fifths of a ton [illegible]

"The program adopted by the railroads calls for a daily average movement [illegible] an effort to bring the average loading to thirty tons per car for the entire country."

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS WIN HOOVER PRAISE

FAVORS FULL CO-OPERATION

He Points Out the Virtue of Open Aid to Legislatures as Opposed to Lobbying.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Secretary Hoover came to the defense of the trade associations in an introduction to a report on trade association activities made public today by the Department of Commerce. The trade association as a facility for the promotion and self-regulation of industry and commerce has become by reason of its scope and activity, says Mr. Hoover, an important business institution with which the American public, generally speaking, is little acquainted.

"The constructive purposes of trade associations," the Secretary continues, "have unfortunately been confused with the minority activities which have been used as a cloak for action against public interest. It is also true that a vast amount of action in public interest has been lost and even great national calamities brought upon us by lack of co-operative action.

"Just as a business house or an individual meets its obligations and carries on its daily relations with the community, so the trade association has a real individuality in the business fabric. Its reputation—yes, its character—may be considered good, bad or indifferent according to its day by day activities and long run policies in its relations to its members, its industrial or trade group, the Government and the public.

"Of course, all trade association activities are not good, just as all individual habits are not good, until so proved by their reactions on the individual and the community. Perhaps the best way to guide activities into the most constructive and profitable channels is through thorough analysis and examination of those activities which seem on the surface to be constructive in their application and results."

In connection with legislative activities Mr. Hoover declares that the interest of any one industry or trade, to be found in the ultimate analysis, must be the public interest.

For Legislative Co-operation.

"In their legislative activities," he says, "many trade associations have borne this axiom foremost. Greater uniformity as to State laws affecting the public and industry and commerce may be brought about and the views of a trade as a whole can properly be laid before legislative bodies only through association.

"The demand of legislatures for the views of the different trades upon all sorts of questions of public interest is incessant and the open preparation and presentation of such matters are far more consonant with proper development of public life than the private lobbying of the few or powerful."

Mr. Hoover deals also with "employe relations," stressing the view that the "human factor" has been overlooked in the past.

"Perhaps the individual business concern or manager has taken more frequently and at earlier periods the initiative in forward policies of employe relations," he says. "Nevertheless trade association after trade association is now developing the necessary preliminary stages of more equitable and advanced phases of employe relations.

"In most cases it is largely a matter of research into the tremendous problems involved—selection of personnel, education, welfare work, accident prevention, employment principles and collective agreements. The associations will recognize that in the years of devotion to improving the processes of production and distribution there has been great oversight of the human factor and its mass relation. Shall it be approached blindly and without preparation and knowledge? Not if the present-day indications of trade association activities have real meaning."

Government Aids Industry.

Government relations also is taken up by Mr. Hoover, who says:

"Whether the attitude of business be to 'keep Government out of business' or to the contrary, it nevertheless is true that the Government in its manifold activities directly impinges upon commerce and industry at many points. The control of public utilities, the restraint of trade acts, the large volume of Government expenditures, all materially affect business, not to mention the legislative problems thrust upon the Government as a result of the after-war reorganization. Official trade information, official industrial statistics, official standards, procedure, and practice are being sought by the trade, and the Government is constructively active in co-operation with business to develop these fundamental services."

On the subject of statistics, Secretary Hoover says, in part:

"There is no question but that the curves in the business cycle from activity to depression have been less disastrous in those industries or trades where accurate, lawful statistical data have been available to all. Fundamentally it is impossible for business men to form those vital judgments as to their future course of action in the wise and safe direction of their activities unless they are informed as to the changing currents of production and consumption, not only in their own lines, but also in other lines of business which indicate broader currents of economic life. The only criteria are statistics, and if industry is to march with reasonable profits instead of undergoing fits of famine and feast, if employment is to be held constant and not subjected to vast waves of hardship, there must be adequate statistical service. Whether these services are to be maintained by the Government or by trade associations they must be maintained if we are to have an orderly economic life."

SCATCHARD QUITS AMHERST

AMHERST, Mass., July 15.—George Scatchard, Associate Professor of Chemistry at Amherst College, will resign tomorrow from the college Faculty, because, according to a statement accompanying his resignation, "after the loss which the college has sustained, it no longer seems possible to accomplish here the purposes for which I came to Amherst."

Professor Scatchard is the tenth professor to follow Alexander Meiklejohn out of Amherst and the fourth alumnus of the college to resign from the Faculty. He was graduated from Amherst in the class of 1913, the year after Dr. Meiklejohn was made President. He has no plans for the future beyond the intention of carrying on chemical research work in some other institution.

NEGRO BURNED, FOUR HELD.

Body Is Found in Ruins of House in Lodi, N. J.—Inquiry Started.

HACKENSACK, N. J., July 15.—One woman and three men, all negroes, were brought here today from Emerson, where they had been held by Justice of the Peace Grande in connection with the investigation into the death of Harry Gayles, negro, 21 years old, of Lodi last night or early today. Gayles's charred body was found in the ruins of a fire in a house where he and the prisoners are alleged to have been last night.

WOMEN'S WEAR FALL LINES.

Manufacturers of blouses, petticoats, neckwear and underwear, according to M. Mosessohn, Executive Chairman of the United Women's Wear League of America, all report that they are showing their highest priced Fall lines with excellent results. Commenting on this, Mr. Mosessohn said yesterday that it reflected a very gratifying aspect of the situation. "Those garments that are being selected first represent the most careful workmanship and original design. While, in many instances, they are chosen for window display, it is nevertheless true that such interest in exclusive garments shows which way the business wind is blowing and that it is a favorable way for both retailer and wholesaler.

"In blouses, those of cut velvet, duvetyne or heavy crêpe de chine, embroidered lavishly, are among the materials most favored by buyers. A stunning model in bright blue crêpe, with bib and deep flaring cuffs of cut velvet showing a brilliant background through interstices, is an excellent example of the sort of blouse that is being selected.

"Dealers in neckwear, turning their attention from the adjuncts to sports clothes to the needs of Autumn, find that lace and embroidered chiffon for plain gowns of fine material are in great favor.

"Petticoats continue to be made of the soft clinging silks that interfere in no way with the popular slender silhouette. They achieve individuality not only by their range of colors, but in the beauty of their materials and variety of designs.

"Underwear manufacturers report interest in trousseau sets for Fall brides. These come in the most elaborate guises of satin combined with lace and embroidery with tiny pearls."

TO PROTECT TRADE-MARKS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The Inter-American High Commission issued today a detailed explanation of the convention adopted at the recent Santiago Congress to harmonize American and Latin-American laws affecting trade-mark and patent protection.

The new convention was adopted as a substitute for the agreement approved at the Buenos Aires Conference in 1910, but which had never been ratified by some of the American nations, because it was in conflict with their national laws. Several other Central American countries had announced recently their intention of withdrawing from the treaty.

There is a fundamental difference, it was explained, between the trade-mark laws of the nUited States and those of Latin-America, in that right of protection to a trade-mark is obtained in the United States through use, while in Latin-America such protection is obtained through registration.

"The provision which covers this essential difference in the national practices is especially important for the American trade-mark owners," says the statement, "and it is believed that, giving them full protection, it does not violate in any way the laws of the Latin-American countries. The main principle which has inspired the convention is the principle of protecting rights legitimately acquired."

One article of the convention provides that "all differences between the contracting States relative to the interpretation or execution of this convention shall be decided by arbitration."

OPPOSE SUMMER FURS.

Naturalists Fear Fashion's Decree Will Exterminate the Animals.

WASHINGTON, July 15 (Associated Press).—Fashion's decree that women shall wear furs the year round has aroused great apprehension among naturalists, says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society, whose officials believe that some of the animals that are abundant today may soon be in the class of the auk and the dodo.

"It is only by educating the American public to the need for periods of protection for these animals," the bulletin says, "that we will be able to preserve one of the country's most valuable assets for the enjoyment and profit of future generations."

Recently the society sent an expedition to an island off the coast of Lower California to try to find specimens of the great seal colonies which used to inhabit the island, but not a single animal was seen.

It has been estimated that America spends yearly $100,000,000 for fur garments, and the society declares that the beaver, marten, skunk, muskrat and other animals are not only paying with their lives, but with the threatened extinction of their kind.

BUILDING INVESTORS PROTEST HIGH COST

EUROPE FILLING BREACH

Price Stability, Rather Than General Reductions, Most to Be Expected This Year, Says Dow.

Building investors throughout the country are making their protest felt against further advances in the cost of construction, says the current Dow Service Daily Building Reports.

The movement at present does barely more than indicate a tendency toward a mid-season reaction in the building construction industry from the fact that June, 1923, shows only about a 10 per cent. drop from the volume of plans filed in May of this year as far as the country in general is concerned and about a 15 per cent. drop for that part of the United States in which New York lies.

Coming at a time when construction costs have been showing for the last four months a tendency to meet, if indeed not actually to exceed, the 1920 peaks, economists quickly noted that the change backward for this time of the year was, to say the least, significant.

Price stability, rather than general radical price reductions, in both labor and materials seems to be the financiers' idea of what a protest of this sort could be expected to develop this year and next. There are some items of general building material, equipment and appliances that will slip backward in prices somewhat, like brick, metals, certain kinds of lumber, and possibly some of the concrete ingredients, and a few of the calcined commodities, with the exception of cement, which has adhered to a steady price in this market since the latter part of last year.

Other items, like glass, spruce and electrical appliances, plumbing fixtures and ceramic tile, where production has lagged exceedingly far beyond demand, may not be affected by any national tendency to protest prices by deferring operations, for the reason that the deferment of these plans probably could not be of an extent great enough nor of duration long enough to enable them to catch up with their orders until well into the building season of 1924.

Foreign competition is beginning to play an important part in the building construction industry along the Atlantic seaboard. Glass, tile, stone and brick are coming in apparently in quantities sufficient to have an effect upon building estimates.

The Germans, quick to see their opportunity to undersell a $21 wholesale brick market, and the demand for American sizes, with little wastage in handling, are shipping brick conforming to American specifications to this port, hand-stacked in the holds of west-bound steamers, unloading them in coal buckets onto the trucks of the New York distributers at $20 a thousand.

Three million German brick came in consigned to Frank D. Creamer & Co. last week, another shipload of the same quantity came in over the week-end unassigned and another boatload was reported due next week for open market. There has been a rush of buyers to Europe to buy more German, Holland and Belgian brick, yet Hudson River brick manufacturers are selling all the brick they can get to market at $21 a thousand, wholesale (for delivered price add handling, haulage and 10 per cent.), there being no Hudson River brick for sale in the open market here at the week-end, with Brooklyn taking the bulk of the offerings.

Some lines, like roofing, for instance, have already taken steps to guarantee their customers against further mid-year price changes. Lime and fireproofing material have acted in this direction, and under date of July 9 one nationally known building material house wrote the trade as follows:

"During the last month substantial price reductions have been announced on practically all roofings and shingles. We believe the low point has been reached and that the next move will be upward.

"To back our judgment that our prices will not go lower * * * we will guarantee our prices against our own decline from this date to Sept. 1, 1923."

This letter is fairly typical of those that have been sent out to dealers throughout the country within the last few weeks. Most of them indicate a desire on the part of manufacturers or distributers to assure their customers that they will protect them against price advances for the remainder of the season, the entire second half of 1923 and even up to and including the 1st of March.

They reveal the quick perception of the basic building material manufacturer to note the sensitiveness of the prospective builder against construction costs that he believes are again becoming excessive.

The letters, between the lines, indicate the assumption that the building investor realizes the manufacture of building material is face to face with labor scarcity and inefficiency, that fuel is hard to get in quantities and regularity desired and that the costs of raw materials are higher perhaps even than they were in 1920. They aim to assure the prospective builder that, while it may not be possible at this time to cut prices to the 1919 level, they will at least stop them from soaring.

ST. SWITHIN PLEDGES FORTY DAYS OF RAIN

BUT THE RECORDS SAY NOT

Weather Man Declares It Never Has Rained 40 Days Because It Happened to Rain on July 15.

"Well," remarked St. Swithin, as he unfurled his umbrella in Times Square last night, "it wouldn't do the garden a bit of harm, anyway. Just about forty days of good warm rain ought to do wonders with that patch of mine."

As the popularly but unofficially canonized gentleman, famous for his dismal outlook on the weather, stepped into a doorway to slip on his rubbers, he was informed that Weather Bureau records did not bear out his month and a week of rain.

"This is an age of doubt, when things are dry even in the face of facts," he responded sadly, drawing on his raincoat, "but, be that as it may, all the signs point to forty consecutive days of dampness. Just tell me, what's the forecast for tomorrow?"

Cloudy probably, and rain possibly, he was informed, with the wind somewhat variable.

"There you are!" he returned, as he unwrapped a pair of seagoing boots, "there you are. And that's just the beginning. If tomorrow doesn't bring a shower some time during the day I'll promise to wear a new straw hat and a Palm Beach suit for the remainder of the forty days."

Now as for the Weather Bureau itself, a man's voice over the Bureau telephone officially sneered at St. Swithin, or at any rate, at Swithin's belief about sky dew.

"Yes," said the Weather Bureau Voice, "it will rain tomorrow and the weather will be unsettled and probably remain so for some time. But the records show that it has never rained for forty days just because it happened to rain on July 15. Besides, St. Swithin died in 862, and he naturally never had heard of the wonderful climate on this side of the ocean."

Efforts to locate Swithin last night, so that he could effectively reply to the Weather Bureau Voice, were unsuccessful. It was reported, however, that he was out trying to purchase a pair of water wings.

A thunder and lightning storm visited the seashore yesterday and winging its way in over the city became merely rain. At several of the beaches, however, a severe display of lightning was reported.

It was especially brilliant at Midland Beach, Staten Island, where a bolt struck a city-owned trolley car at the Midland Beach terminal of the line that runs to St. George. The bolt hit the front of the one-man trolley and passed through to the rear. Twelve passengers were in the car, but only one received anything more than a fright. The injured passenger was Miss Jursey Bosner, 22 years old, of 121 Avenue A, Manhattan. She was stunned by the bolt and in falling to the floor of the car received a cut across the forehead. She was treated at the Staten Island Hospital.

STORM ROUTS CONEY CROWD

A sharp thunder and lightning storm visited Coney Island shortly after 7 o'clock last night, and the crowd of 300,000 made for home. The congestion at the West End Terminal of the B. M. T. became so great that Police Captain Gilles ordered out the Coney Island reserves.

Despite the lowering skies of the day, the big crowd that braved the signs of bad weather managed to pack the beaches and the amusement places. There was the usual number of lost children and the evening witnessed the usual number of tearful reunions between the "lost" and the "worried" at the station house.

During the afternoon Ajax, one of the trained white horses in a circus act in Luna Park, decided to inspect the premises. He wandered around unmolested, with the crowd thinking it was a "stunt" of the management, and managed to eat up the geranium bed in front of The Love Nest and make a few circuits of The Hummer. Sugar and the brink of the swimming pool ended Ajax's stroll and he went back to work for Edith Costello Walton, his owner.

210 SCHOOL YARDS TO BE PLAYGROUNDS

SOME TO BE OPENED TODAY

An Additional 37 Yards May Be Found Available Later—Police to Guard Children.

Eugene C. Gibney, Director of Extension Activities, announced yesterday that in accordance with plans of Mayor Hylan for the opening of school yards for play purposes, 210 had been selected in congested districts. Some of them will be opened today.

In many instances the program has been delayed because some schools are now undergoing repairs and reconditioning, and their opening for play at this time would expose children to hazards of falling materials and of obstructions, besides hampering contractors. In other cases the yard space is so small as to be impossible of use for play purposes.

Besides the 210 that have been listed as usable, it is possible that an additional 37 will be found available soon.

A policeman will be assigned to each yard so used. The first group to be thrown open this morning includes: Manhattan—P. S. 6, at 39 East Eighty-fifth Street; P. S. 8, at 29 King Street; P. S. 14, at 225 East Twenty-seventh Street; P. S. 81, at Seventh Avenue and Street P. S. 81, at Seventh Avenue and 119th Street; P. S. 85, at 346 East 117th Street; P. S. 107, at 272 West Tenth Street; P. S. 159, at 241 East 119th Street, and P. S. 169, Audubon Avenue and 168th Street. Brooklyn—P. S. 20, at 179 Union Avenue; P. S. 25, at 787 Lafayette Avenue; P. S. 26, at 856 Quincy Street; P. S. 28, at 1,001 Herkimer Street; P. S. 31, at 84 Dupont Street; P. S. 34, at 131 Norman Avenue; P. S. 47, at 480 Pacific Street; P. Bronx—P. S. 17, at 190 Fordham Avenue; P. S. 18, Courtlandt Avenue near 148th Street; P. S. 41, Olinville Avenue and Magenta Street; P. S. 46, 196th Street and Bainbridge Avenue; P. S. 48, Spafford Avenue and Coster Street, and P. S. 53, 168th Street and Findlay Avenue.

Northwestern Report Blames Excess of Play and Ease and Not Lack of Brains.

EVANSTON, Ill., July 15 (Associated Press).—Too little sleep, too much play, not enough study, too much leisure; fast eating and diversified thinking are factors that devitalize students and are responsible for the "delinquent groups" found in every university, according to a report made public by Professor Delton Thomas Howard of Northwestern University.

In Northwestern alone, out of 1,635 students in the college of liberal arts, Professor Howard has found a "delinquent group" of 265 composed of 166 men and 99 women. In other words, he points out, 16 out of every 100 students do not "pass."

But delinquency does not necessarily imply lack of intelligence, the professor found. He said that the average intelligence of the delinquent group is quite as high as that of the general student body.

Students found to be delinquent are put on probation at Northwestern and have to make good or be dropped from the roster.

"The probationers," the investigator reports, "devote more time, as a whole, by their own confessions, to athletics, social activities, outside work, leisure, than do the freshmen; less time to sleep, campus activities, meals, classes and studies."

Among the total group of men interviewed, 15 were thought to be handicapped by "mental immaturity." On this Professor Howard remarks:

"These are boys who have, for the most part, been reared under easy circumstances and who have never been required to view life seriously. Such students have a distinctly childish attitude toward their class-room work, have no intellectual interests, no definite ambitions, no sense of responsibility. In most of these cases high school preparation has been superficial and inadequate."

Illness, family troubles and financial worries are among other causes leading to students being put on probation.

PEEKSKILL, July 15.—Major Gen. Charles W. Berry, Commander-in-Chief of the New York National Guard, and Colonel William R. Wright, Post Executive Officer, welcomed to the State military camp today the Seventy-first Infantry of Manhattan and the Fourteenth Infantry of Brooklyn.

The Seventy-first is commanded by Colonel J. Hollis Wells and the Fourteenth by Colonel F. W. Baldwin. Altogether about 2,400 new troops arrived at the camp during the day.

They marched in with bands playing, after leaving special trains. Shortly before their arrival the 105th Infantry, Colonel Ransom Gillett, returned to Troy, and the 106th Infantry, Colonel Thomas Fairservis, returned to Brooklyn after two weeks of drilling.
